Shakespeare is severe on ingratitude under the conditions of life. Ingratitude is "monstrous"; it is a "double-hearted fiend"; it is a "hideous sin." In his estimation it is worse than "lying, vainness, babbling." This is his attitude toward the ingratitude of man for man; the ingratitude of child toward parents is to him deadly sin. When Shakespeare made Lear utter the words he no doubt had in mind the story of the Hindu peasant who, on finding a peasant punish with the cold, put it in his bosom, and warmed it back to life, by return the serpent stung its benefactor to death. But how much more horrible is the thankless act of a child towards its parents. The serpent merely followed nature. It had no consciousness of having received benefits. With few exceptions men and women are the conscious products of self-sacrifice. Even the humblest and most illiterate one a debt to their parents. The most boastful "self-made man" will find, if he reflects, that he is largely the results of his early training. There are exceptions. There are successful men who were cast on their own resources in infancy who have not known the motherlove which gladdens existence, the fatherly care and self-sacrifice which ennobles life. But these cases are exceptional, so exceptional that they invariably cause comment.

Lear uttered the words quoted at a time of life when he felt keenly the curse of an enraged father against a thankless child. Shakespeare makes Lear say, "I am a man more sinned against than sinning." Shakespeare makes another Lear say to his sons, "Thou shalt have as many days as we shall portend thee thou hast—and more, man than you look for." No self-respecting man can be so severe. On the other hand the filial love, the sacrifice of parents by the father who has mistaken and cruelly treated his children, is sung in all ages. The man who is thankful child. Nothing has further could do or say to be could make her forget that she was his child. She loved the man—dug to his bosom despite his blindness, led by footfall of Lear—driven from him with a cruelty which cut like a knife.

"Wind my heart! Crack it, my sides, Your have heard my curse and fall on me for my sins." Pity, you, love you, and most honor you."

By her awareness and sense of duty Cordelia brings out by contrast the truth that to have thankless children makes sharper than a serpent's tooth.

The financial standing of the grange is sound, as Treasurer Brown's report sets forth. There was a balance on hand Jan. 1, 1909, of $21,128.47. During the year there received from the secretary the sum of $24,290.54, interest had accrued in the sum of $179.25, making a grand total of $47,598.41. He paid the bills of officers, delegates, etc., at the last meeting of the state grange, amounting to $46.60.17. Bills during the year were paid to the amount of $1,842.56, leaving a balance on hand Jan. 1, 1910, of $24,290.36.

Doubling the Farmer's Income by Double Cropping.

Many members of the grange are objecting to the exaggerated values placed on farm crops by the United States department of agriculture. Potatoes, all the cereals, hay, beans, etc., raised on the farm are counted in the census at the price they are sold for, and these animals are counted in dollars. Only about 15 per cent of our great national corn crop is sold. The balance is fed out on the farm and converted into meat which is part of the farmer's income. While the farmer is doing better financially than any of number of years past, it is not right that he should be imposed by this system of double counting.

David Rankin of Missouri owns and farms 20,000 acres of land and sells cattle and hogs, having 5000 head of cattle and 12,000 fattening hogs at the time; also 600 horses to help in raising 1,000,000 bushels of corn to feed themselves and the cattle and hogs. Mr. Rankin never uses any of that big corn crop. It is all fed out on the farm and yet by the government figures all that corn and all of the hogs and horses are added together as Mr. Rankin's honorable friend, Farm Journal.

FOREST FIRES MORE; LOSS LESS.

Fire, the bane of the forest, played less havoc in the woodlands of the nation last year than in 1908, although the number of blazes was the greatest, according to statistics which have been compiled by the Department of Agriculture. By reason of the protective measures adopted by the department, almost 90 per cent of the fires were extinguished before as much as five acres had been damaged, the fires covered less than one and one-half acres to the acre. The total of national forest wood, and the damage done on the burned-over area averaged only $1.25 an acre.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1909, there were 3,175 fires in the forests, burning over 38,000 acres, of which about 62,000 were private lands in national forests, against 50,000 acres in 1908. About 2,000,000 board feet of timber were consumed, of which 33,000,000 feet were owned by the government, against 230,000,000 in the previous year. The loss in value of timber destroyed was less than $200,000, of which $50,000 belonged to private owners. The loss of the year before was about $150,000. Damage to reproduction and forage showed a remarkable decrease, less than $16,000 being the loss for the year, and over $700,000 for 1908. Locomotive sparks were recognizable for more blazes than any other cause.

CANNON OUT OF POWER BUT IS STILL SPEAKER

Insurgents and Democrats Remove Him from Rules Committee, 191 to 155.

HE RETAINS SPEAKER'S CHAIR

Resolution to Oust Him as Presiding Officer Is Voted Down by Large Majority.

Washington correspondence:

Shorn of his power by a combination of the Democrats and Republican insurgents, Joseph Gurney Cannon is now merely the presiding officer of the national House of Representatives.

The House Saturday afternoon adopted a resolution amending the rules so as to provide for the election of a committee on rules by the House itself, the committee to consist of ten members and the speaker being in addition to serve thereon.

The full text of the resolution as passed by the House is as follows:

"Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives be amended as follows:

"1. In Rule 10, Paragraph 1, strike out the words 'on rules, to consist of five members.'

"2. Add to new paragraph to Rule 10 as follows:

"Paragraph V. There shall be a committee on rules elected by the House consisting of ten members, six of whom shall be members of the majority party and four of whom shall be members of the minority party. The speaker shall not be a member of the committee and the committee shall elect its own chairman from its own members.

"Resolved further, That within ten days after the adoption of this resolution there shall be an election of this committee, and immediately upon its election the present committee on rules shall be dissolved."

By a vote of 155 to 191 the House then defeated a resolution declaring the office of speaker vacated and providing for the immediate election of a successor to Cannon. Nine insurgents voted with the Democrats in support of this resolution.

At noon Friday the tense situation existed, never would have been saved

MABRAY IS CONVICTED.

John C. Mabray and thirteen of his associates, who for ten days have been on trial in the United States District Court in Council Bluffs, charged with illegal use of the mails in connection with an extensive "land" race swindle, were found guilty in a verdict by the jury which heard the case. Robert E. L. Goddard of San Antonio, the fifteenth defendant, entered a disagreement.

Those convicted with Mabray were Leon Lesser, Tom S. Robinson, Willard Powell, Clarence Chase, Edward Leach, Edward K. Morris, Clarence Forbes, Harry Forbes, Frank Scott, Ed McCoy, Winfred S. Harris, Bert S. Stearns and William ("Off") Marsh. The last named three entered a plea of guilty when the trial opened.

CONGRESSMAN WHO BROUGHT ABOUT CANNON'S DOWNFALL.

George William Norris, representative from the Fifth Nebraska district, was unknown outside his district until he came famous from Maine to California, but within that big area, despite quite handicaps, up to a position of eminence. He was born on a farm in Pennsylvania, Dec. 11, 1861, and lived when he was a babe, his early father was killed in the Civil War and his mother was left in straitened circumstances. He worked among the neighboring farmers in the summer months and attended school only in the winter, became a country schoolmaster, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1883. Then the trust opened vistas of preferment, and he went to Nebraska in 1885 and soon came to be conspicuous in politics. In 1895 he was elected District Judge of the Fourteenth Nebraska District. Four years later he was re-elected to the same position, which he held when he was nominated to the Fifty-eighth Congress, and at that time he has represented the Fifth District. Mr. Norris is a man of strong personality and is a ready debater.

BLACKHAND ON OIL KING'S LAND

Workmen Terrorized After Rescue of Kidnaped Pocantico Boy.

New York gossiffers are aiding the West Chester County authorities in trying to run down a band of blackmailers who have terrorized the workmen on the John D. Rockefeller estate at Pocantico Hills, New York, and have latest exploit was the kidnaping of the 4-year-old son of Leonard de Marie. The boy was found several miles from home in the custody of two women agents of the blackmail gang, who became frightened and fled when approached by a trolley car conductor. The trolley was a suspicious and been excited by the crying of the child and the woman's actions.

The gang now operating on and near the Rockefeller estate is believed to be the same as that which four or five years ago was investigated and whose operations were checked temporarily by the late Lieut. Petrosino. The terrorized workmen on the estate can be induced to say little about the blackmailers. LYNCH BLACKS IN COURT SQUARE

Hol' Austin and Charles Hitchcock, negroes, were taken from the court house square in Marion, Ark., by a mob of 300 men. The victims were charged with stealing and shooting a jail delivery, which resulted in the death of a policeman and brought back to Marion. While he was on the way to the jail, the prisoners escaped from the officer and took the prisoner. He conferred concerning the situation with the officers and implicated Austin. The latter was at first denied a preliminary and the troubling prisoners would be hanging at once. Cooler counsel prevailed, however, and the prisoners were surrendered to the sheriff. At 2 p. m. a mob formed and took the men in hand. The negroes were taken out and hanged to a tree in front of the courthouse.

William Hamilton, a brother, is 99; a sister, Mrs. Sarah Hyrne, is 102, and Mrs. Ann Hill, another brother, James Hamilton, is 108. The ancestor, James Hamilton, is 72. He expects to live to be 100.

CHINESE HITS RICH GOLD VEIN.

California Celestial Takes Out $252,000 in Five Months.

The richest strike of placer gold made in California since the gold days has just been opened in Placer County, and the finder is a Chinaman. A Celestial, an aged Celestial who has been placer mining for many years, he drove a tunnel 200 feet into the hill and struck an old river channel, from which in a few months he has taken out $252,000 in coarse gold.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"The inviting early spring weather leads to considerable revival in commerce and the immediate effect is notable in the leading industries and distributive branches. A comparatively large gain also appears in the volume of payments through the banks, testifying to the larger use of funds incident to the season, while the record of trading defaults again makes an encouraging exhibit as to the position of credits. Expectations now undergo fulfillment in the more plentiful commitments for future deliveries of heavy materials, and substantial contracts indicate the willingness of railroad managers to make the requirements.

"The market for hides has ample supplies to meet current demands, but orders have been placed for the spring for ensuing months. Tanning operations run steady, with leather under consideration for the coming season, and shoe factories and allied lines have ample contracts ahead.

"Money hardened slightly, but deposits assure adequate lending funds, and the discount rate for choice commercial paper ranged from 4½ to 5 per cent.

"Bank clearings, $291,632,565, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1909 by 11.9 per cent, and compare with $258,442,000 in 1908. Failures in the Chicago district numbered 29, as against 29 last week, 34 in 1909 and 32 in 1908. Liabilities with liabilities over $5,000 number 2, as against 3 last week, 6 in 1909 and 10 in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade irregularity is still manifest, but reports are more favorable on a still further improvement, due to advance buying of the spring season. Improvement in the volume of sales is reported by trade reports, is most manifest in the agricultural sections of the West, Northwest and Southwest, while the reports from the East and parts of the South show the development of spring business retarded by the lingering winter.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with March 17 were 238, as against the last week, 224 in the like week of 1909, 203 in 1908, 177 in 1907 and 179 in 1906.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 25, which compares with 26 last week, 22 in this week of 1909.—Bradstreet's.

The Great Northern Railway has planned an expenditure of about $50,000,000 this year for additional equipment, and the road will be divided nearly evenly between the freight and passenger service, and the other half of its chares will be delivered before the end of the year.

THE REVOLVER PULPIT

ALONE WITH GOD.

Rev. O. A. Kingsbury.

My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise Thee with joyful lips. When I remember Thee upon my bed, and meditate on Thee in the night watches.—Ps. xlii, 5-6.

Alone with God—that is an experience which ought to be realized by every Christian believer, by every man for that matter, every day of his life. We all are conscious that this is a bustling, hurrying, rushing age. The pressure upon life is enormous. Material things bulk large on the attention. The voices that we hear are strident. The tendency is to identify the material and the external, to magnify the form and forget the spirit is danger of not making sufficient allowance for the fact that life develops. This rush and stir is exhilarating. It means progress. The material advance can be made an aid to securing the triumph of God's kingdom.

Let us turn this page of truth about and get a new sparkle from each facet. Think, look at the joy of being alone with God. If it is a joy to be alone with a dear earthly friend, how much more with the Father. It is a joy to have to do with the best things in the world—the best by art in architecture, in furniture, in oratory. Most of us have to content ourselves with things that are far less than best. But here no one of us is so humble or so insignificant that he may come into the company of the great Master.

When one thus is alone with God, the divine holiness awes, the divine purity impresses, the sin of man is more than ever seen. We see that we are in the presence of a holy God, who is also a God of love. We see that we are in the presence of a God who is willing to pardon, who is willing to make us holy, who is willing to take us into the divine likeness.

The purity of God shames and awes us, but at the same time it beckons us. The divine purity is alluring, not forbidding. The voice of the Holy One incites us to better things. And when alone with God we are made clearly that there is nothing so worthy as His service, nothing so appealing or so rewarding as to be a co-worker with the Almighty, engaging in that service which reaches into the eternal.

So it is that as the believer is alone with God he finds power. It is spiritual power that is needed more than anything else. The spiritual realization is good, is necessary in its place. The Sunday school lesson that has to shine without power. In a mass of mere spiritual. It is the power of God he draws strength from the fountain head. He is in the power house where the dynamic is generated. He is in the place where the voltage is low, where the current is at its strongest. He is in the power house where the dynamic is generated. He is in the place where the voltage is low, where the current is at its strongest.

The same now operating on and near the Rockefeller estate is believed to be the same as that which four or five years ago was investigated and whose operations were checked temporarily by the late Lieut. Petrosino. The terrorized workmen on the estate can be induced to say little about the blackmailers. The boy was found several miles from home in the custody of two women agents of the blackmail gang, who became frightened and fled when approached by a trolley car conductor. The trolley was a suspicious and been excited by the crying of the child and the woman's actions.

most assuredly a privilege to secure by meditation the best benefit of this Lenten season, because in the resultant quietude we hear the voice of the great Teacher and feel that we have responded to his personal appeal, "What is that to thee? Follow thou Me."

WHAT A WORKINGMAN WANTS.

By Rev. Myron Reed.

The poor man's home is on a poor street. He cannot be particular as to which way the home faces. Such questions as sunshine, air and view do not enter into the question of choosing a shelter. He cannot afford to trouble himself about sanitary conditions. For the last three years many of the poor have had enforced vacations of a few or many months—not tending to health. Tramping about seeking work, eating broken victuals and sleeping anywhere do not strengthen one.

The poor cannot take advantage of the market. He cannot buy coal when it is cheap in large quantity. He buys coal when it is winter, when coal is dearest, and in small quantity. He buys what he can, when he can. So with his food, he buys a small quantity; and a poor quality, and pays for much wrapping paper and strings. His condition is the cause of his misfortune. Because he is poor today he will be poor tomorrow.

The poor man must buy cheap clothes. They are cheap, they rip, the bottoms come off, the lining sags, they go to pieces.

Poverty means in the short or long run poverty in the body. It means no books, no pictures, and so poverty of the mind.

Epicurus could keep his soul and he poor. Marcus Aurelius could be rich and keep his soul. Poverty could kept them. But the average man is not a saint nor a hero. He is more than subject to circumstances. The queen bee has from birth more room and better food than other bees.

The existence of the poor is that they cannot safely trust themselves to the government of God. The employers are just and generous—when we are.

A federation is the only safety of the poor so long as competition is the law of life in all the world. The lions, among wild wolves put their heads together and their heads out and make a good fortress. Stand in some way as long as the world is wild.

There is a more excellent way—lay down your political economy, your economy of expense, and take up your New Testament.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE.

By Sarah Flower Adams.

[Sarah Flower Adams (Great Harlow, Essex, England, Feb. 22, 1805; died Aug. 1848) is the author of the hymn which is in the Protestant Episcopal Hymnal. She was the daughter of the poet Bryan Waller Procter (Barry Cornwall) and married Mr. Adams, a civil engineer and architect. Though a Unitarian she wrote hymns for the Episcopal Church. The hymn was first published in "Hymns and Anthems" in 1841. This hymn was sung on the Titanic when she sank in 1912. Mrs. Adams wrote the hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee." Mr. Adams died in 1848

DANGER TO SPUD CROP

European Potatoes Infected With a New Disease.

The department of agriculture is making extraordinary efforts to warn the people of the United States against a new disease of the potato which has been spreading swiftly through the potato growing areas of Europe. The warning is especially meant to be of the first importance to the great potato producing section about the great lakes.

The new affliction is known as the wart disease. Also as "Black Scab," "Canker," and "Cauliflower." Big warty excrescences, sometimes as big as the tuber itself appear on the sides or ends of the potato.

In an advanced stage of the disease the tubers are wholly covered with the growth and lose all resemblance to potatoes. When this fungus growth has utilized every particle of food stored in the potato it is reduced to a brownish black soft mass giving off a most unpleasant odor of putrefaction.

This last is the most dangerous stage of the disease and if an attempt is made to harvest the crop the potatoes break into pieces and the spores of the fungus inoculate the ground so thoroughly that it remains infected for years. British experts who have studied the disease declare it by far the most serious menace the potato crop ever has faced.

GERM STAYS IN SOIL

J. W. Eastham, of the British college of agriculture and horticulture, says:

"When this disease is once established in the land it is useless to try to grow potatoes there again until the pest has been starved out. So far as is known no other crops is liable to be attacked. Cases have been noted in England where potatoes had not been grown upon land for six years, yet upon an attempt to raise that crop the disease was found still virulently present. Some of the same seed used elsewhere did not develop the disease and some of the same manure used upon other lands failed to show a trace. From this it is apparent that even as long as six years is not enough to starve out the disease."

Women Tax Payers Attention.

Under an act passed by the legislature of Michigan in 1909, women can vote at any session hereafter held in Charlevoix or Antrim townships on questions involving the direct expenditure of public money or the issuance of bonds pertaining to the qualifications of male electors; viz—must be twenty-one years of age—have lived in Michigan six months and lived in the district, city or township, where the vote is to be cast, for twenty days immediately preceding the time of voting, and have property assessed for taxes in any part of the district or territory to be affected by result of such election. Saturday, April 2nd, you must register in order to vote should such a question come up. Place of registration for first ward, hose house, N. Bridge street. Second ward, Wilbur building, near bridge. Third ward, Fagan building, adjoining Hind's Drug Store. Time 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

All women qualified be sure to register.

Notice of Election.

To the electors of Charlevoix County:

You are hereby notified that the question of the nonalination of party candidates by direct vote, for the office of circuit judge; and also, the question of nonalination of party candidates by direct vote, for county officers, will be submitted to the qualified voters of Charlevoix county on the first Monday in April, A. D. (1910) nineteen hundred and ten.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto affixed my signature and the seal of Charlevoix County, at the City of Charlevoix, this twenty-first day of March, A. D. one thousand nine hundred and ten. DANIEL S. FAYTON, Clerk of the County of Charlevoix.

THE NOMINATIONS

Mayor—W. L. Hampton.

First ward—Alderman, A. A. Swinton; supervisor, F. J. Meech.

Third ward—Alderman, G. C. Gelkes; supervisor, W. H. Miller.

The following city committee was elected for the ensuing year: Chairman, E. B. Ward; secretary, Lisle Shanahan. First ward, D. F. Meech, H. Nicholls. Second ward, A. A. Haushew, Frank Hill. Third ward, W. A. Cline, H. H. Armstrong.

The political situation in Charlevoix is narrowed down to a fight between the Republicans and the Socialists. A caucus of the labor party was regularly called, but for some reason no caucus was held. With the great majorities of republicans in the city there should be no doubt of the result.

MARION

Supervisor, Jas. H. Adams; clerk, Will Withers; treasurer, Chas. M. Thorel; highway commissioner, Ed Shapton.

NORWOOD

Supervisor, John H. Hughes; clerk, F. H. Richardson; treasurer, Whitfield Totten; highway commissioner, Ed Scott.

HAYES

SOUTH ARM

CHARLEVOIX

ST. JAMES

County Normal Notes.

The normal class accompanied by Miss Himes, the fifth grader, and Miss Freed, visited the seed ware house last Wednesday afternoon, March 23, and observed the process through which the seeds pass.

Truant Officer Wm. J. Bashaw visited the normal Thursday morning, March 24, and explained to the class the laws concerning truancy.

Miss Mary Jones, of Charlevoix, who is teaching in Detroit, visited the normal Thursday, March 24.

The class has taken up the work in civics in place of grammar, which the class has just finished.

Isabel Knight taught the class the song, "The Ginger Cat."

Beaver Island News.

The tug Vanilla arrived here Saturday with the mail. W. I. Gallagher was among the passengers.

Our mail service this winter has been very satisfactory. The last mail on ice was on the 17th inst.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. James Gallagher March 19th, a boy.

Mrs. Patrick M. E. Gallagher, who has been dangerously ill for the past few weeks, has improved somewhat and hopes are entertained for her recovery.

The only ice visible at this writing is that which is lodged in the north end of the bay.

The fishermen are a busy lot of men at present getting ready for the spring catch. The harbor is filled with perch nets and some fine catches are being made.

The death of Mrs. Patrick H. Gallagher on the 23d, inst., removes from our midst, one of the island's oldest residents. Born in Canada, she came to the island when only two years old, and has been a continuous resident of the island ever since. Besides a husband, she leaves four daughters and two sons to mourn her loss. Mrs. Gallagher was beloved by all who knew her, who regret very much her early demise, she being out 53 years old.

Mrs. John Early, whose condition has been quite critical for the past month, does not improve as rapidly as her friends would like.

Saved a Soldier's Life.

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to A. Stone, of Smith, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cold" he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For coughs, colds, lagrippe, asthma, hemorrhage, hoarseness, croupe, whooping cough and lung troubles, its supreme. 50c. $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

PRIMARY CASH

It is Expected the Rate Will be About $7 Per Capita.

At the present time there is over $70,000 in the state treasury belonging to the primary school fund, and as there are about 100,000 children in the state of school age the amount per capita will be about $7 when the apportionment is made this spring. None of the railroad companies have paid their tax to the treasurer as yet and this will swell the amount to a considerable extent.

In some counties of the state this money can be used to good advantage but there are many school districts which have more money now than can be spent under the limitations of the law and this increased amount will only serve as an incentive to some of the custodians of this sacred fund to use the cash to their own advantage.

Hardly a week passes that the attention of Superintendent of Public Instruction L. L. Wright is not called to the fact that some rurallst has appropriated this cash to his own use, and it is evident that in the near future this matter will require attention from the legislature.

Various plans and remedies have which has been bothering the state officials and there is considerable talk of asking the next legislature to amend the present act so that the money can be distributed among the counties where it is needed and cut out those who have a surplus.

First American Paper Money.

The first American paper money was made in 1740.

Traverse City Record: Potatoes dropped to 10 cents a bushel on the local market this morning, following the drop at other points. This slump, which is directly due to the enormous supply all over the country, is a costly one to local growers as it is estimated that fully 60 per cent of the entire crop is in the hands of the growers. A well known local dealer this morning estimated that there are 50,000 bushels in storage in this city, the charges amounting to 5 cents a bushel. The warehouse potatoes are not as good either as those that come from the pits and the owners will be lucky if they come out even on the charges. Not in five years has the price for potatoes been so low. Five years ago potatoes sold for 5 cents a bushel on the local market and even at that many dealers lost money.

A Wooltex Skirt For All Weathers

We looked at all the best known garments for women before deciding to carry Wooltex garments. Our decision was in their favor, because we found in them the high quality, in every detail, that we demand in everything that is in our store.
It matters not what hard service you may give a Wooltex skirt—in rain or wind or snow—it will keep its shape throughout two seasons.
That's because its all pure wool, chemically tested, steam-shrunk and cut with the warp.
The Wooltex guarantee of two seasons' satisfactory service will be fulfilled by us, without question.
The Wooltex label guarantees correct style, pure wool fabrics, expert manmailoring and two full seasons of satisfactory service.
On this guarantee we are authorized, by the manufacturers, to make good, without question, whenever called on to do so.

—The new front of the Vanliere building, (formerly Harsha,) is nearly completed, as far as the brick work is concerned, and it already presents a facade of substantial and tasteful architectural design. One feature of the front is that it will contain the largest single plate glass window in the city.

—We have a personal knowledge that information was sent from Petoskey to a southern Michigan city last week that scarlet fever is "raging in Petoskey and Charlevoix." We do not know what they have in Petoskey, but Charlevoix has no scarlet fever, and the last case here was so long ago that we have forgotten when it was. The only epidemic Charlevoix has is political paresis.

—The first sample of questionable maple syrup has been received for analysis by State Analyst F. W. Robison, and this lone sample is probably not a forerunner of scores of others to follow. The buckwheat season no more than closes with the dairy and food department than the maple syrup season opens up, and the state chemists are busy winter and spring trying to find the percentage of buckwheat that is mixed with lower grades of flour, or what kind of coke were burned to flavor some mess of low grade syrup placed on the market under a "maple" syrup label. It is not lawful to market any adulterated product labeling it "maple" when it is but a component of assumed corncob juice and some other liquid sweetening. The word "maple" cannot be lawfully used on the labels of any compound syrup.

—The Majestic Theatre opening Monday night was an event. Every seat was filled at three performances Prevett and Merrin in a sensational novelty act, carry their own scenery, and Manager Campbell states they have worked for him before and are a classy act. On Saturday this act will change complete. Don't fail to let the little ones see them, for it is very pretty as well as mystifying.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Campbell left the city last evening, the former going to Charlevoix, Petoskey and Mackinaw City on business and the latter going to Traverse City for a few days' visit. Mr. Campbell has accepted the management of the Majestic Amusement Co. at the above named cities with headquarters at Charlevoix. Manager Campbell was formerly owner of The Alun theatre and is perhaps the most popular theatre manager the city has ever had. His pleasing personality and solicitation for the comfort of guests of the theatre made him many friends, Mrs. Campbell sharing with him the good-will of the people.—Cadillac Globe.

THE CITY ELECTION

The Republican Ticket Wins Over Socialists—Much Scratching Done

FIRST WARD

SECOND WARD

THIRD WARD

Total majority for Hampton for mayor, seventy-eight; for Dutton, clerk, 138; for Alcock, treasurer, 167.

It will be observed that Thomas, Socialist, for mayor, ran ahead of the ticket.

The vote cast down hard on the proposition to abolish the board of public works.

The vote cannot by any stretch of imagination be taken as an indication of an increased Socialistic sentiment in Charlevoix. The contest was one involving local conditions and not politics. Very many good Republicans voted for Mr. Thomas, as the returns clearly show. The reason for the somewhat strange showing are oblivious to all, and require no comment. Charlevoix is overwhelmingly Republican when it comes to a fair test along legitimate party lines.

Local Option Matters.

Antrim county, with a large vote, went dry on Monday by a majority of about five hundred.

Wexford county, which has been dry ttle past year, went wet. Monday, by a majority of about 200.

Kent county went wet by 3,600 majority, which is no surprise.

Some 320 saloons were voted out of business by the people of 20 Michigan counties. Of the 36 counties where local option elections were held Monday.

Nineteen counties voted "dry" and 16 voted "wet." Of the 10 that had been "dry for two years, Oakland and Wexford voted to change to the "wet" column, while Barry, Clinton, Midland, Missaukee, Osceola, Oceana, St. Joseph and Van Buren voted to remain "dry." Of the remaining counties where the question was submitted, the vote was as follows:

Counties that voted "wet:"

Counties that voted "dry:"

Prize Essay Contests.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be at the home of Mrs. N. A. Shores on Dixon avenue Friday, April 8, at 2:30 o'clock. A program of unusual interest has been prepared to be given by the children, and this is sufficient to arouse interest. One of the features will be a prize essay contest on "Alcohol and Tobacco" to be given by the pupils of the 5th and sixth grades.

LANDSLIDE FOR OSBORN

"The movement throughout Michigan toward Chase S. Osborn as the republican candidate for governor has within the past two weeks, assumed all of the proportions of a political landslide," declared W. F. Knox, manager of the Osborn campaign.

"Following the resignation of Justice Montgomery, all of that great body of public sentiment in the state favorable to a change in state management has concentrated upon Mr. Osborn as the candidate with sufficient strength to defeat Warner-Kelley combination," continued Mr. Knox. "When this accession of strength is added to that already possessed by Mr. Osborn prior to Montgomery's withdrawal, the reason for the general declaration that Osborn is easily the leader in the race becomes apparent.

"If the support coming to Mr. Osborn in every section of the state continues at the present rate it will soon become obvious that he is beyond cavil the next candidate of the republican party of Michigan for the head of the state ticket.

"I have just completed a tour which included Bay, Eaton, Barry and Gratiot counties and I could scarcely have found conditions in all of the counties visited more to my liking. The sentiment favorable to Osborn is rapidly becoming effective, ly organized and when the campaign opens in earnest his candidacy will be pushed by the most comprehensive and efficient organization the state has ever seen.

The Boyne City boat Cummings, and the Hume, of the East Jordan route, went into commission Wednesday morning, and are making regular trips.

The steamer Beaver went to Manistee Wednesday morning of this week to receive a new wheel. The Cummings made the Beaver Island trip in her place.

The steamer Beaver, which made her first trip last Wednesday, is making her regular Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday runs. On her outward run Friday she went by way of Cross Village.

We erred last week in stating that the tug Dickson, from Frankfort, was the first boat to enter port this spring. The fishing tug Patmore went out and set her nets before the arrival of the Gelken.

The first cargo boat to arrive at this port this season was the schooner Chippewa, which arrived early Sunday morning, bound for Boyne City. The second arrival was the steamer Three Brothers, Monday morning.

The steamer Missouri is expected here today. The Illinois, which is receiving new boilers in Cleveland, is expected to begin her Lake Michigan work until next month. Of course Commodore Wm. Finnegan will bring out the Missouri again; Capt. Bridget will again command the Missouri and Capt. John Stuthelbeem the Illinois, Capt. Ed. Smith-beam will bring out the Sterling in June.

The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce is about to report a measure which will carry appropriations intended to take care of navigators on the great lakes. One of the things which the committee will probably report upon is the expenditure of $250,000 for the construction of a permanent light or high order on Lansing shoal, connecting the Straits of Mackinac and in the pathway of boats plying to upper Lake Michigan ports. The committee, it is understood, will also report favorably upon the proposition to build a light ship to be stationed to the southeast of North Manitou Island, where a dangerous shoal is forming. It is expected that in the omnibus bill to the navigation bill, which the committee will shortly report, many items of interest to mariners on the great lakes will be included.

JUDGE BROWN IN THE EAST

The Judge Stands High in New England—"Boyville" Being Established—Charges Against Him Exploded.

Judge Willis Brown, of Boy City fame, is winning laurels in New England in the establishment of "Boyvilles," which are auxiliary juvenile governments in their relation to the National Boy City at Charlevoix. As a result, wherever "Boyvilles" are organized Charlevoix is well advertised.

It is gratifying to note that the unprincipled attack that was recently made on him by certain envious persons, and published by a certain Northern Michigan papes, is in process of being ground through the mill of righteous resentment, and the matter is rapidly and surely approaching a shape that will be embarrassing to the said Northern Michigan paper, as well as to the instigators. We have seen correspondence that gives several persons an opportunity to join the Annamias club, and the editor of the said Northern Michigan paper a chance to do the honorable thing by Judge Brown. As a matter of fact every statement made against Judge Brown were ridiculous lies, and they find no lodgement among the people of the East where he is so successfully working. The following from the Sharon (Pa.) Telegraph, is part of a whole page devoted to an account of the establishment of a "Boyville" there:

"Four hundred lusty and enthusiastic young boys at the First M. E. church Monday night so expressed their emphatic desire to have a "Boyville" that they got it.

"After the address to the boys by Judge Willis Brown, the boys applauded so loudly that the committee of ninety of the local churches and members of the local Brotherhoods immediately went into consultation and decided to let the boys have their wish.

"Judging from the enthusiasm manifested, "Boyville" will go through and be carried out to the end with enthusiasm that bodes a long era of success—possibly as long as Sharon exists and there are boys in the city.

"This afternoon after school at the chapel of the First Presbyterian church a committee of two boys from each of the Sunday schools in the city will meet with Judge Brown and the special committee on Boyville, which includes ministers and members of the Brotherhoods, and the organization scheme will be decided on and within a few weeks thereafter the organization is expected to be complete and "Boyville" in operation.

"The plan is outlined to the boys by Judge Burgess in his speeches to the boys in the city schools and at the meeting Monday night is to build "Boyville" on the same civic plan on which Sharon as a borough is operated. There will be a burgess elected, also a secretary and treasurer, a Boyville council and other officials with the exception of police officers. The police are disposed with on account of the basis of the "Boyville" being built to raise on the honor of the boys solely.

"It is stated that the boys will be placed absolutely upon their own honor in the matter of the ideas of government and the prohibition of those things which tend to cause boys to deteriorate, and that under the conditions the police will not be necessary and when a boy does things not included under the motto "Play Square," he honorably relinquishes the right to wear the button containing this motto, which is his credentials of membership, and that after he relinquishes the button he is to be regarded as a boy to be watched by teachers and other boys until he again makes it apparent that he is worthy of membership. This will be decided on by the boys, who at the organization will leave this power in the hands of the burgess and council or to some committee.

"Judge Brown believes thoroughly in the inherent honesty of boys. He stated in his address that he believed boys as a whole to be "square" and that men are the whole. He said it was the idea of every boy to play square in his games and that the boys were bound to play square in all things if the bigger bunch of boys were with them. He said a majority of the boys could do anything with the other boys. He found a majority of the boys between the ages required present to hear his address and he said it was time war flys in Sharon when such an organization as he believes it should be established."

THE WEIGHT OF MONEY

Do You Think You Could Lift a Fortune in Silver Coins?

IF YOU DO YOU ARE MISTAKEN

Two Hundred Pounds of Quarters Would Give You Only $5,057, While the Same Weight of Gold Would Give $94,050—Weight of Paper Money

"I wish I had all the money I could lift!" How many of the thousands who make this petit-logick when have say then of the amount they would have if the wish should be granted. Few minus the denomination of the money in which they desire to test their strength, perhaps believing that their lifting powers would make them wealthy in matter what kind of money they lifted.

If they were asked how much they could lift in silver or small coin the majority probably would name some fabulous sum which investigation would show several men could not budge. In gold or in paper money or large denominations the contingent is different would be able to lift a fair sized fortune, but to win a million by lifting it in anything less than twenty dollar bills would need the strength of a veritable Samson.

An official of the subtreasury who is interested to said somewhat in his department was asked how much money the average man could lift in the various denominations of gold, silver and paper.

"Well" he replied, "a man could make money on that proposition if he could get hold of paper money of large denomination, but on the smaller bills, silver and gold he would not be a millionaire by any means.

"The weight of money is very deceptive. For instance, a young man, a friend of mine, came in to see me one day with his fiancee. I was showing the young lady the department and asked my friend if he thought the young woman, or words to her weight in gold. He did think so, most emphatically, and after ascertaining that her weight was one hundred pounds we figured that she would be worth in gold coin exactly $28,017. Her fiancee thought that would be pretty cheap.

"Perhaps many people are deceived on the weight of paper money than on the metals. Now, how many one dollar bills do you think would be necessary to weigh as much as a five dollar gold piece?

Fifty was ventured as a guess, and the statement was startled.

"I have had guesses on that all the way from 10 to 500," he said, "and some of them from men who have handled money for years. As a matter of fact, with a five dollar gold piece in one scale you would have to put about six and a half bills in the other to balance it."

Numerical figures to prove that a five dollar gold piece weighed two hundred and ninety-six thousandths of an ounce avoirdupois. An employee who makes the new bills in Washington said that a hundred bills weighed four and one-half ounces. That would make the average weigh forty-five thousandths of an ounce, and between six and seven would balance the gold piece.

Figures on the lifting proposition were obtained from the department where the money is weighed in large quantities. The standard ounce weight for gold coin, 5,000, weighs eighteen and a half pounds. Five hundred silver dollars weigh thirty-five and a half pounds, and $200 in half dollars, or quarters, weighs twenty pounds. Taking 200 pounds as a good lift for an average man, the figures were obtained:

METAL MONEY

Gold dollars	2,469.00
Half dollars	1,235.00
Dimes	246.80
Quarters	246.80
Cents	98.72

PAPER MONEY

One dollar bills	$79,311
Five dollar bills	15,862
Five dollar bills	31,724
Ten dollar bills	7,931
Twenty dollar bills	3,966
Fifty dollar bills	1,586
Five hundred dollar bills	158.6
Two hundred pounds of $10,000 gold certificates, the largest denomination issued by the United States government, would amount to exactly a half million dollars, $5,000,000. If the young woman who was worth $28,017 in gold coin had been worth her weight in these $10,000 certificates she would have been valued at $499,444,395.—F. T. Pope in Chicago Record-Herald.

POPULAR FALLACIES.

Some Old Fashioned Notions That Still Obtain Credence.

THE CYCLE OF THREE IDEA.

A Drowning Man May Sink Not Only Thrice, but a Dozen Times, and Still Be Rescued—Congestive Chills and the Merging of Diseases—Low Points.

"Three physicians were standing in a downtown drug store the other day when one, who had been looking at an evening paper, exclaimed: 'Great Caesar, here it is again! I see it in the papers at least twice a month.'

"'What's that?' asked one of the others.

"'It's that popular fallacy about a drowning man sinking for the third time. Here it says, 'Just to be sure sinking for the third time he was saved by the timely arrival,' etc. The next time I see this third time business it probably will read, 'He sank for the third time before aid could be had and was drowned.'

"Why will people put that foul idea that sinkers for the third time must remain for good? It is drivelling stuff. Why, bless you, I saw a man sink a half dozen times before he was rescued alive. An uncle of mine, witnesses told, never sank but once, and he was drowned. The number of times a man sinks has nothing to do with his drowning. He may sink but once, and he may go to both the water any number of times. It all depends upon the person who is drowning, his physical condition and how quickly the lungs fill with water?

"That cycle of threes," suggested another of the doctors, "is curious along by those who foster that a person who is ill is more dangerous on the third or fourth day. The same rule holds good in congestive chills as in the case of the drowning idea. A person may die in the first or he may have a dozen and still live. The rule of threes cut out obtains there either."

"The next problem, with great disdain, then told how many ignorant persons would cover that, "if you get in malaria or it goes into typhoid fever or it runs into pneumonia it's shore death."

"There's that same old rule of three again," he continued, almost angrily. "First and foremost, one disease does not run into another. There's no such thing as a relation between diseases, as many believe. If one has malaria he has that and no other. The same thing is true of typhoid fever and pneumonia. Each one is a separate and distinct trouble, and a doctor with any sense should be able to diagnose his malady from symptoms which are always present in each and entirely different."

From popular fallacies in regard to medicine the conversation drifted to fallacies regarding the law. A lawyer present was called upon to explode first one thing told another, when one of the bystanders said:

"I made a bet the other day that a person had no right to touch a dead body until the coroner arrived, and I won."

"Who decided the question for you?" asked the lawyer smilingly.

"Well," said the man sheepishly, "it was a bartender, but he's an educated fellow and is a good judge of the law."

"Then you lost the bet," said the lawyer, "for the bartender is not a judge of the law."

"I beg your pardon, he is a good fellow and is a good judge of the law."

"Perhaps you know as much as he does," said the lawyer, "but nothing that he has ever said in his life could lift you to the bench of a court of law."

"Here he was off on another tack, and it was the same old story. They seem to have an idea that in any state in the United States which says one may not be buried until before the arrival of the coroner.

"In case of murder the old English common law used to require that the body of the murdered one be left just as it by mail viewed by one in authority.

"That was done, it can plainly be seen, for the purpose of preserving the surroundings intact, so that whatever evidence might be there would not be destroyed. In case of a murder it is especially if any mystery were connected with it, common sense would teach a person to have everything intact, not alone for the coroner, but for the police officials as well. But when the body of a murdered man is moved there is no law covering it unless it could be proved that the person who moved the body did it with the intent to destroy evidence. In cases of suicide or death by accident there could be no objection to moving the body anywhere in the city if done with reason or some other proper motive.

"Tell tell you what is the law," said a stogy shoulder, long armed man who had been listening long enough to get the gist of the discussion, "if a fellow sees a member through a pane of glass he can't be a witness in the case."

"Oh, pifflet" exclaimed the attorney. "You going to teach me the law? I was walking for some yap to spring I was waiting for some yap to spring that. If that was the case and a man ought to convict on what he sees through a pane of glass he could not be even mistrial witnesses. If your statement is true, because we are wearing glasses there is glass between us in a window on the nose. There is no such law as that. That's foolish."

"I heard my grandfather say that," insisted the long armed man, "and he knew the law."

"Yes," retorted the exasperated attorney, "and he didn't even know the law in his own state. Why, I know that a man could stand with his back against the wall and shoot down a man who came within a certain distance of him. But he would have to be sure he had already fired the fence. All of those things are what we call 'whimpy corner law,' but they don't hold in court."—Kansas City Journal.

THE SILVANDO.

Queer Whistling Language of the Canary Island Natives.

In Gomera, one of the islands of the Canary islands, the silvando, or whistling language, survives. A correspondent writes: "A traveler stood half at the little port of San Sebastian and there find a musketeer from the interior. With him he must ride up the steep bridle paths that wind through the mountains. When no longer any living thing is within sight and the wilderness is only broken by the dim form of the cactus growing in the clefts of the rock, the musketeer dismounts, sets his forefingers together at a right angle and places them in his mouth. An arrow of piercing sound shoots across the ravines and up the stony terraces into the fastnesses of the mountains. A moment's pause and there comes a thin, almost uncanny, answering whistle from far away. Conversation begins and, as the sounds rise and fall, are sometimes drawn out, as they are faithfully echoed and transmitted by the hills.

"Then comes the ghostly reply, and then question and answer follow without hesitation or misunderstanding. Perhaps the stranger will ask, 'What are you doing there? Answer: 'There is a traveler with me, time of day you in haste. Can you bring us a fresh one?' 'Yes, I can. Do you want anything else?' 'You might bring some milk along if you have any.' 'I will do so.' 'That the conversation is correctly interpreted is presently confirmed by the arrival of the mule and the milk, and the distance that separated the jeriles to the dialogue turns out to be about three miles.

"Long notes and short notes, rising and falling tones, go to make this unique means of communication. No record is to be found of its origin or history, and it will be a thousand pities if scientific investigation is not made before the attempt is added to the list of dead languages, as seems only it will be within the next two or three generations."—Chicago News.

STRANGE COMPANIONS.

The first public exhibition of a "happy family" in England was given about fifty years ago, when there were shown a monkey, a cat, several rats and three or four pigeons in one cage. The monkey was an excellent terrier with the cat so long as her meat would allow him to warm himself by calling her; otherwise he would show his vocation by slyly giving her tail a nip with his teeth.

The birds perched on the cat's back and pecked at her fur, and the rats were as friendly with their natural enemy as if she were one of their own sort.

A lady writing in the Isle of Wight observed a little kitten curled up on a messy bank taking a midday nap. As she stepped to stroke it a hawk swooped down and, pounding upon the kitten, did it from sight.

The lady, fearing for the life of the kitten, tried to rescue it, but the hawk firmly faced her, stood at bay as "refused to move. She hastened to a neighbor's cottage and told the humane of the impending tragedy.

"It's always so," they said, laughing. "That hawk always comes down if any one goes near the kitten. He has taken to it and stays near at hand to watch whenever it goes to sleep."

The lady recently learned that the kitten's mother had died, after which the nestling was missed for several days. One day the mawk was seen about the cottage flaking in scraps of meat and carrying them to the roof of the cottage.

The fellowman climbed up and found the lost kitten nestled in a hole in the thatch and drifting under the care of its strange foster father. It was brought down and restored to the cottage, but the hawk would not resign his charge and was shyly at hand to watch the kitten from the caresses of strangers.—Philadelphia North American.

Dictionary Lore.

"Poison" and "potion" are doublets, the former being an older form of the Mob are derived from the Latin "potare, to drink, and "potion" is its original sense signified merely something to drink.

While the word "human" and "humane" "human being" is now only colloquial or humorous. Lowell in the introduction to the "Biglow Papers" chided Bartlett for including it in his "Dictionary of Americanisms" and remarked that it was Chapman's habitual phrase in his translation of Homer and that it is found also in the old play of "The Hue Hath Lost His Pearl."—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

A Flame Combination.

If a small quantity of chlorate of potash be powdered and mixed with an equal quantity of powdered sugar a candle may be lighted by means of the mixture without matches.

Place a little of it in the depression around the wick of a candle that has been previously used and then touch the mixture with a glass rod the end of which has been dipped in oil of vitriol. It will burst into flame, lighting the candle.

Curiosity on the Farm.

A little girl of the electric lighted places went to her grandfather's farm for a visit during the summer. She saw an unfamiliar animal on one of her strolls and ran to the house very much frightened. "I don't know if it was a snake or an eel," she said, "but it looked crooked and spit fire, and I guess it was a griffin."

Soap in History.

It is noteworthy that the Latin word for soap, sapo, is derived from the low German word sepe. The ancient Italians had a sort of caustic soap or rouge that was probably the origin of the washboard old Dutch soap.

BLUNDERING REPORTERS.

Mistakes That Mangled the Speakers' Words and Feelings.

"Drunkenness is folly" earnestly exclaimed Bishop Magee in the course of his address at a crowded meeting. He horrified was the prelate to read in the papers next morning that he had given utterance to the very lucrative "Drunkenness is jolly."

Lord Salisbury was a master phrase maker, but one of his best points was spoiled when a careless reporter turned his sonorous "primaries and platitudes" into the meaningless "maries and mats at the top."

Sir William Harcourt was boldly published saying "Street to Downs of the Conservative party." What the platform, but a country paper had it "Street to Downs of the Conservative party."

Lack of knowledge of familiar quotations is a prolific source of blunders. For instance, a speaker once made use of the well known line from Milton, "Mad as the vasty deep."

"How long have you had your?" asked the lady visitor of the first inmate of the home. "Ever since I was a child," replied the inmate, "and I've had my eyes on her for some time back."

"It's also a record breaker."

"Why, I thought we have any other. Wait till you fellows get a glimpse of her, and if you don't agree that I've had my eye for winners I'll eat the hat of that horse there." Thereupon the second horseman leaned over toward his friend and thrust one hoof in a private entertainment.

"Accept my congratulations," said he, "and now give 'em to your—your sweetheart."

"I will," heartily returned the other man, adjusting the bridle lock a more sure to come in and see me," he added as his friend spurred his mount on. A Deal the Horrtonns Put Through on the Dead Quiet.

A man known roundabout as a lover and possessor of fine horses was lately driving one of his favorite steeds along a suburban road when he came upon another horse lover, a man as well known, who was driving in the opposite direction. Seemingly pleased to meet each other, both drew up alongside.

"I heard only yesterday that you had purchased a thoroughbred, I see that thoroughbred," greeted the second horseman.

"Yes," gleefully returned the first horseman. "I'm just after visiting my new horse to see how he's taking to little pals for his liver."

"Thats what I wanted to ask," the second man, squinting good humoredly.

"Why, I guess he is all right. She can step along in the best class, and she's got a rediscer eclipsing any thing around."

"How long have you had her?"

"Ever since I bought it the first horseman in the same gleeful tone, "but I've had my eye on her for some time back."

A Canine Fear.

A blind man, guided by a large and sensible dog, was crossing a street the other day. Just as they turned a corner the blind man's dog saw a dog it knew and darted forward in a way that threw the sightless gentleman to the ground. He was speedily assisted to his feet, however, by a waggish bystander, who remarked that he had heard some remarkable stories of the dog's attachment to man, but this was the first time he had ever seen the dog try to pull down his master.

Much sickness is due to nervous troubles. Headache, dizziness, epilepsy and insanity are nervous troubles. Then there is a large class of disorders which arise from a weakness of the nerves of an organ or part, as weak lungs, heart, stomach, kidney, bladder, eyes, etc. Dyspepsia and indigestion are usually the result of nervous disorders.

Restorative Nervine

soothes the irritated nerves, and assists the nerve cells to generate nerve force.

The passenger would have to be held in suspension in the vacuum tube through which they traveled, for the slightest touch on the sides of the tube would result in enormous friction. The part might be held in suspension by the propulsion of opposing magnets on the cars and on the tube—magnets strongly. When thus isolated they could be propelled only by the power of magnets placed in a series mounted in propelling the cars would be compulsorily by the tube.

After this exhortation Gerard hesitatingly left the room, for the purpose, without doubt, of escaping further questions. His departure completely vexed Jem, who could not make out the meaning of his conversation. He really thought Gerard knew something which might lead to the apprehension of the murderer, who had entangled the death of Maurice, and the circumstances connected therewith.

"Well, I for one thought about that matter the more perplexed did he become." he reflected. "Gerard's the brightest specimen of Mile Ender I know, and he's the intimate friend of Sexton Blake, and the detective's name is synonymous with success in matters like this. Jem was more confused than ever that night were at the bottom of the whole terrible affair.

"I am glad to see that you are better, Jaggard," he said, while shaking the man's hand.

"Yes, sir, thank you, sir," replied the man, in a weak voice. "I'm sorry, sir, but I couldn't help myself. I was drugged, sir."

"I guessed as much," said Jem, grimly. "And what drugged you, Jaggard?"

"Bitter, sir," replied Jaggard, hesitatingly; "I'm afraid I've been a ship and looked at this word with marked surprise.

"No," he said, at last, with a little hesitation, "Mrs. Dallas has kept nothing to do with it."

"But I thought from what you said of the handkerchief dropped in the room——"

"That being the property of Mrs. Dallas, she had lost it there," interrupted the man quickly. "No, I told you also that Isabella had confessed to having dropped it at the time of her midnight visit. But how I know that she told me is this"

"Isabella! Impossible!"

"Not at all," replied Jaggard, calmly; "no understand her reason for telling me the fact, she wanted to shield——"

"Her mother!" cried David, quickly interrupting the man.

"Your mind seems to run on the mother, Master Dallas," said the man, with a slight smile, "but you prove by any chance that she committed the crime?"

"No, Uncle Jem, I can't. I have my suspicions."

"It pleases you to be mysterious, David. Shortly I shall insist on an explanation. You owe it to me—your uncle and father—to tell the truth. You owe it to your dead brother's memory—for assuredly, Maurice was your brother!"

"David' thought sullenly as the speaker, but in a moment or two he lifted his head in a defiant manner.

"I owe you much—more than I can ever repay," said he, in hard tones. "All the same, Uncle Jem, I cannot speak, even to you, what I know. If I did so, you would be the first to blame me."

"I don't understand you," said the young man, incredulously, "unless that I am the most accurate man alive."

"You know that I know who killed Maurice, yet refuse to confess," interrupted Jem, with some heat. "Why not tell me the truth? I ask you for the last time."

"And I answer for the last time that the truth is not mine to tell," replied David, coldly. "If you doubt me guess Rose Etwell."

"What!" that criminal! I believe that act of jealousy he killed Maurice."

"Nor, said Sarby, sardonically; "and out of jealousy he stole the body."

"Jem Fibbs did that. Jaggard has just informed me that it was Fibbs who drugged him. Why did he do this thing? To steal the body of my poor lad. Why did she steal the body? To conceal the crime committed by Etwell. I more believe that Etwell stole the death-stick, and with it killed Maurice."

"From a motive of jealousy."

"Precisely. As you know, the body after leaving the Rose-cottage for examination could be made. Why was it? Does not your sun reason give an answer to that question?"

"No," replied David, still obstinately uncontrolled.

"Why," said Jem, with a sneer, "if a post-mortem examination had been made, traces of poison would have been discovered. The poison would have been proved as identical with that of the death-stick, then, beyond all doubt, you would have learned that Maurice had been killed by the devil-stick. To divert the discovery, and to prevent the truth coming to the ears of the Rose-cottage, under the directing of Mr. Etwell, the body was stolen. Mr. Etwell, in the third place, is a man has some power over her. What is the power may be, I know not, nor do I think you do. Although," added Jem, with an afterthought, "you may be able to explain."

"Take care, David. You are forming and although not such from the outset, you are acting in this way from an all-early motive. It is plain to me that you are shielding and punishing the murderer of Maurice. Yet, you have to do with Etwell, and refuse your assistance in this way. Unless you alter your course, and take the line your conscience approving the reason of your strange behavior, a breach and coolly needed between us must ensue."

"Uncle Jem, I'm sorry."

"Sorry! Why, you will do well even from a selfish standpoint. But watch carefully over your wife's health, as even from this egotistical point of view her loss will be a terrible misfortune, for your life depends in a great measure on her own."

Addressing himself to young women he says:

"To you I give the counsel to marry in your most selfish interest, as statistics show that women less mortality than men, even if the same age, at least after the age of 30; but the difference is less for women than for men. The mortality among spinsters is much greater than among married women, but it is not quite as great as in the case of men."

Dr. Bertillon does not take a chance for a few of the lot of the widow. He says:

"The mortality among widows is distinctly much greater than among married women of the same age. The worst state of widehood, is, on the contrary, fatal to young widows. Thirty-four per cent from 20 to 25 years of age is twice that of married women at the corresponding age."

He gives the reason why matrimony conduces to longevity thus:

"Married people lead a more regular life. They are more surrounded and therefore more controlled, diversed though this control may be, and it must be directed if it is to be useful. They physical life, this their moral life, is healthier, quieter, more natural."

In the French statistics of one year which Dr. Bertillon has selected the deaths in a thousand marriages are bachelors between the ages of 25 and 30 years, while of the same age married men were only eight. Between the age of 35 and 40, the figures were forty-one for the former and twenty-three for the latter.

With women the mortality was twelve to eight, between 25 and 40, and twenty-three and twenty-four between 35 and 40. The death rates among widows and divorcees were respective 1 twelve and twenty-one women a thousand.

REGULARS COMPOSE COMMITTEE

Six regulars were selected by the Republican caucus in Washington to represent the majority party on the committee on rules which is to succeed the committee retired by the revolution that took place in the House of Representatives a few days ago. The slate as prepared by the regular leaders was chosen, as follows: Henry Sherman Boutell, of Illinois; John Dalzell, of Pennsylvania; Sereno E. Payne, of New York; Walter I. Smith, of Iowa; George F. Lawrence, of Massachusetts; Sylvester C. Smith, of California.

Both Smith, of Iowa, and Dalzell, are members of the present committee on rules, both having appointed to place thereon by Speaker Cannon. Representative Boutell is one of Speaker Cannon's closest friends and greatest admirers and it was Mr. Cannon's nomination for President at the Chicago convention in 1904. Mr. Lawrence, of Massachusetts; Sylvester C. Smith, of California.

Both Smith, of Iowa, and Dalzell, are members of the present committee on rules, both having appointed to place thereon by Speaker Cannon. Representative Boutell is one of Speaker Cannon's closest friends and greatest admirers and it was Mr. Cannon's nomination for President at the Chicago convention in 1904. Mr. Lawrence, of Massachusetts, has long been a close friend of Speaker Cannon. Mr. Dalzell is one of the leaders of the "regulars." Representative Smith, of California, has a score been one of the leaders of the regular Republicans in the House.

Speaker Cannon attended the caucus, but took no prominent part in the proceedings. He said he would not hold nothing whitever to say except to give the Republicans a good ticket. Representative Boutell, who is also a close friend of Speaker Cannon, differs in his advice from Punch, which summed up its counsel to those about to marry in the one word "Don't." Dr. Bertillon, on the contrary, explains his reasons for believing that marriage and longevity go hand in hand.

He calls in the aid of statistics to prove his contention that a married state of woman has three times as much chance to attain a ripe old age as a bachelor or a spinster; and with regard to men he shows that the mortality among married men is greater than among married men, the New York Sun London correspondent says. Dr. Bertillon says that his father went thoroughly into the question and obtained statistics from other European countries which completely support his conclusions. The statistics he studied were those in France. So his advice to young men runs:

"Marry, you will do well even from a selfish standpoint. But watch carefully over your wife's health, as even from this egotistical point of view her loss will be a terrible misfortune, for your life depends in a great measure on her own."

Addressing himself to young women he says:

"To you I give the counsel to marry in your most selfish interest, as statistics show that women less mortality than men, even if the same age, at least after the age of 30; but the difference is less for women than for men. The mortality among spinsters is much greater than among married women, but it is not quite as great as in the case of men."

Dr. Bertillon does not take a chance for a few of the lot of the widow. He says:

"The mortality among widows is distinctly much greater than among married women of the same age. The worst state of widehood, is, on the contrary, fatal to young widows. Thirty-four per cent from 20 to 25 years of age is twice that of married women at the corresponding age."

He gives the reason why matrimony conduces to longevity thus:

"Married people lead a more regular life. They are more surrounded and therefore more controlled, diversed though this control may be, and it must be directed if it is to be useful. They physical life, this their moral life, is healthier, quieter, more natural."

THE POPULAR PULPIT

WEALTH NOT AN EVIL

By Rev. Edwin Whittier Caswell.

Brooklyn—Text: "Remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth.—Deut. 8:18.

It is customary when speaking of wealth to enumerate its evils. We all know that the inordinate minority now of money is the parent of the whisky evil, the slavery evil, the gambling evil, the social evil, the living for pleasure evil and the capital and labor war evil.

But when a man like John Stewart Kennedy departs this life bestowing from thirty to forty millions of property in a multitude of noble charities the public beholds a more optimistic side of the acquisition of riches.

Wealth itself cannot be an evil any more than the wealth of intellect, wealth of heart or wealth of character and influence are evil. It is only when we use the gifts of the Creator against a god to be worshiped that it becomes an evil. Money is a power ordained of God and Mammon." Abraham and Job were millionaires in a time when $10,000,000 was equal to $50,000,000 of present values. Solomon's wealth was beyond a thousand. He was noted for wisdom, but received both riches and wisdom as a gift from God. Job by the Almighty, Zacchaeus and Cornelius, two centurions of the New Testament times were men of large property. No one in Bible history is condemned because of possessing riches. Dives, Ananias, Lord maketh poor and He maketh rich."

The power to acquire riches is as large in proportion as it was when Moses men by oratory or to influence men by love or the power to write like Shakespeare or Longfellow, to be a scholarly, or the power to reveal nature like Newton, Watt, Bell, Morse and Edison. The rich men of the Bible are those who were patriarchs, statesmen and shaped the destinies of nations.

Gordon Washington gave not only himself for his country, but poured out his gold in the hour of the Revolution's needs. Stephen Girard of Philadelphia made large annuities to the republic and with the remainder of his money founded the college of learning for inferior boys. Peter Cooper has embalmed his name in the memory of mankind. Samuel Tilden and Elias B. Dodge will never perish from our memories.

We do not need to search History for illustrations of men who have made the world better because of their fortune. Today the stream is flowing in flowing a new rosendoy was the bridge. The schoolhouse was moved, so was the grain elevator and a number of houses. Two miles of Burlington railroad track was washed away. In the place of it was built on the hill by-and the reach of the Missouri.

LOVE OF DRESS LEADS TO PRISON

Ohio Girl Who Gave Sister Mysterious Tablets Pleads Guilty to Forgery.

Sixteen-year-old Catherine Mann called her restless girlhood in a prison cell at Marion, Ohio, for the crime of forgery, and she is now held under a charge of murder. At a preliminary hearing Mayor Brown fined the prisoner entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree. Later she pleaded guilty to the charge of murder in the second degree. Yet, she is but a girl, after long cross examination as to the death of her sister, Elizabeth, to whom she says she gave a mysterious tablet Friday not long before the girl fell dying to the floor.

In her confessed first story to the police she said she received a child prodigy declared that she had purchased a drachm of strychnine for a man, who later presented her with two capsules to give her sister. She was declined to tell who this man was and the police are inclined to believe that he is only a figure of her imagination. It is known, however, that her love of dress and her extravagance led her into many escapades.

Sunday School LESSON

Subject for April 3, 1910.

The Power of Faith.—Matt. 9:18-31. Golden Text. "All things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark 9:23.

The disciples of John the Baptist came to Jesus with a question about fasting. He, who was talking with them, there came a ruler of the synagogue (probably of Capernaum, where Jesus was at this time). Prostrating himself before Jesus he said, "My daughter is now dead, but come and lay Thine hand upon her and she shall live." Mark tells us that the father had already told Him of her sickness and this was the actual summons.

As Jesus was going, accompanied by His disciples and a great crowd, He stopped to heal an unfortunate woman, who had been grievously afflicted for twelve years, and who was considered an incurable malady. He stopped to do good everywhere.

This woman was like the sinner, who tries to find earthly cure for sin in one of the forms of self-indulgence and suffered many things of them. The Bible says, "Sin is a disease." Godworks, Reformation, Evolution and the world, have tried to cure the disease, as the saw Jesus going by, she thought, "If I can only touch the hem of His garment I shall be whole." The hem of the garment had a religious significance to the Jews. They were required by the law to have the borders of their garments made with a blue fringe, or with a ribbon of blue, to keep them in constant remembrance of God's commandments (Numbers 15:37-40). She seemed to think He was surcharged with a power, as we would say of electricity, and that this ribbon had a special sanctity. Jesus did not rebuke her for her superstition, but honored it. "Who touched my clothes?" asked the Saviour and the disciples told Him that everybody was touching Him in the crowd. This was partly true. Many thronged Him, but only one truly touched Him. In this one true touch lay the difference between those who merely take part in the singing and those who really give themselves to the service of the stream where my life flows. Jesus, the Saviour, felt the virtue go out of Him. Some people object to confessions of sin and prayers in public and make all sorts of excuses against it. But Jesus made an article of confession right there in public, as He felt healed.

But this was not all. He gave her light, and makes her more intelligent in the matter of faith. He says, "Thy faith hath made thee whole." He shows her that it was not the hem of the garment, but her faith, that had her faith. As sure as we have a living faith and keep a clear fellowship, we shall find that we are in His school and that we are being taught, light, knowledge and experience.

Jesus now continued on His way to the house of the ruler. He said, "Daughter, be of good cheer; thy faith hath made thee whole." Jesus says this healing, "Fear not, only believe, and she shall be made whole." Jesus says this healing, "Fear not, only believe, and she shall be made whole." Jesus says this healing, "Fear not, only believe, and she shall be made

WESTERN MICHIGAN
FRUIT WITH FLAVOR

The Cause of It All.

Very much will be made of the wet victory in Wexford county, (which is a reversal of present conditions there,) by the advocates of a wide-open policy, and there is no denying the fact that it will have a bad effect upon the local option movement in Michigan. The cause of it is plain. The brewers and distillers have spent money freely in the flooding of the county with wet literature, alleging disastrous effects in dry counties. The literature was a compilation of lies, but many believed the story.

There is disappointment in the returns from Antrim county. The majority for prohibition was much too small. But the same forces were arrayed there that are referred to above. The booze cause was given added strength in Antrim by the fact that the saloonists of that county were doing business for two counties. Another reason is that two leading papers of the county, while making a pretense of supporting the dry side, filled their columns with lies that were paid for out of the profits of the booze dealers. We are bold enough to assert that there is neither honesty or consistency in this sort of journalism. In their editorials they branded as false the literature of the wet, yet they published the lies for pay.

Saved From the Grave.

"I had about given up hope, after nearly four years of suffering from a severe lung trouble," writes Mrs. M. L. Dix of Clarksville, Tenn. "Often the pain in my chest would be almost unbearable and I could not do my work, but Dr. King's New Discovery has made me feel like a new person. It is the best medicine made for the throat and lungs."

CHAPTER XVII.

Exhausted by the few words he had spoken Jaggard fell back on his pillows in a dead faint. Joe left the patient in the tender attentions of Anne, who whence much favor. He found on in a melancholy mood, perhaps sunk down the knees before the window in the smoking-room. On perceiving a guardian, Surly turned pale, for he thought that Joe had come to convulsed. A sudden gong replacement about $10, a bolus of silver was equal about to $1,000, a talent of gold was nearly $1,000, a piece of silver, or a penny, was about eight and a half pence, a farthing was equal to one cent, a mite was still less than a farthing, and a groat was three cents.

Historical Society.

Through the kind hospitality of Mr and Mrs. Martin, the Musical evening of the Charlevoix Historical Society, was held at their beautiful home on Friday evening, April 1st.

The program was one very much enjoyed by all, and the kindness of friends contributing toward the musical part, very much appreciated by the society.

"Current Events" by Miss Georgia Scroggie were received with the very excellent stimulant for the first April fool.

"All Fool's Day," whose important birth has been claimed by many lands, was brightly presented by Mrs. A. F. Bridge as the finishing touch of the enjoyable evening.

The following were those elected by the society as officers for the coming year:

President, W. H. Miller.
First vice-president, Mrs. H. S. Harsha
Second vice-president, A. F. Bridge.
Secretary, Miss Mary E. Clark.
Treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Washburn.
Librarian, Miss Edna Green.
Executive committee—Chairman, Archibald Buttars; E. S. Stacks, Mrs. Frank Wilkinson, Mrs. Cora L. Bentley, Miss Alice Hoel.
Finance committee—Mrs. Margaret L. Washburn, Treasurer, Ex officio; D. C. Zollinger, R. H. Bishop.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office in the City of Charlevoix in said county on the 29th day of March, A. D. 1910.

On reading and consideration of said estate having filed in said court her petition, praying for license to sell the interest of said estate in certain real estate therein described.

It is ordered, that the 2nd day of May, A. D. 1910, at the o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be appointed for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court, at said time and place, to show cause why a license to sell the interest of said estate in said real estate should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

JOHN S. HARRIS, Judge of Probate.

—There are two attractions that seem to be holding much public attention, both amazing yet both intensely interesting—Halley's comet and Ita. Both are puzzlers to the average human mind. Ita is holding forth this week at the Majestic Theatre. As a mentalist Ita is a wonder. She is certainly one of the mysteries of creation.

—Potatoes are eight cents per bushel in the Grand Traverse region there are many thousands of bushels in pits and cold storage, put there by the advice of officers of the society of Equity. Now many Charlevoix county farmers are going out behind the barn and kicking themselves in contemplating the fact that they could have sold their spuds last fall for fifty cents per bushel. The farmer is better off when he stands on his own legs and sell when he can get from thirty cents up for his potatoes.

Fruit is Not Injured.

According to the expectations of many of the old residents, says the Traverse City Eagle, the cold snap arrived, and so far as can be learned it did no damage to the fruit crop, which luckily was not advanced far enough to endangerable buds.

While the thermometer dropped a few degrees below the freezing point the still wind that continued throughout Wednesday night kept the frost away except in some points back in the country where the sand plains are more susceptible to the cold than are the points nearer the water.

Another thing in favor of the fruit trees was the fact that during the day the wind and sun had melted the snow to such an extent that it was all off the trees when the night came, and the buds being perfectly dry were able to stand a greater degree of cold than they would have if they had been wet or covered with the soggy snow.

Many of the leading fruit men of the county gave their opinion today to the effect that the freeze had done practically no damage to the buds on either the early cherries or the peach trees.

William Heimforth of the Walnut Grove Fruit farm stated this morning that he had examined the buds on his cherry, peach and apple trees in his section and found the buds whole and the same reports had been brought to him from as far north as Omena. Even those trees which are ready to burst out were all uninjured.

Frank Smith, of this peninsula, brought in a number of branches from the fruit farms along the way to the city and none of them showed any ill effects from the freeze.

Osborn Gaining Daily.

That Chase S. Osborn will be the next governor of Michigan now seems reasonably certain. Reliable information from every section of the state reports remarkable increase in Osborn sentiment.

The Marquette Journal states that a conference of Osborn supporters held there recently was in many respects one of the most remarkable political gatherings the upper peninsula has ever seen. It included representatives from every section of the district, and the reports which they made of the situation throughout the peninsula indicated beyond any question that the entire peninsula is solid from Mackinaw to Keweenaw for Osborn for governor. But one conclusion was possible after the conference adjourned, and that was that Chase Osborn was the unanimous and enthusiastic choice of the Twelfth district, which is united in his behalf as it never has been united before upon any political proposition in the history of the district.

The Soo News of a recent issue states that out of a total vote of 50,000 cast in 1908 in the upper peninsula for both Taft and Bryan, 44,000 voters are now enrolled as republicans and qualified to vote for Chase S. Osborn for governor next September. The enthusiasm for Osborn has swept the district like a prairie fire, astonishing even those who are active in the management of the Osborn campaign.

While Chase S. Osborn has been carrying the fight into the lower peninsula his friends in the upper for the past three months have devoted themselves to organization for enrollment day. How successfully is shown by the returns. When Osborn announced his candidacy the twelfth district had the smallest proportionate republican enrollment in the state. Today it has the highest.

At the Osborn headquarters when the returns finally were received no attempt was made to conceal the intense gratification felt over the result of Monday's enrollment.

"Chase Osborn will come down to the straits next September, declared W. F. Knox, "with forty thousand votes to his back.

THE FISHERIES

The fish dealers of this port are handling more fish than for several years this early in the season, and indications are that the year will prove a profitable one for the fishermen.

Some of the lifts the past week count pretty near being record breakers. On Saturday the tug Parmelee came in with 6,000 pounds of fish—cowfishing from the Booth Co. the pretty sum of $525 for the "lift." A gasoline boat brought in 2,300 pounds the same day for the same concern. On Monday morning the Booth Co. had eight tons of trout, whitefish and perch on hand at Beaver Island awaiting shipment. Probably fifteen boats of all classes are fishing out of this port, and all are making satisfactory fishing.

The Robert Hesler Co. report a Saturday lift of 2,400 pounds. The prevailing high prices make the fishermen smile. As we have often stated in these columns, the fishing business at this port is an important and lucrative industry. Not less than one hundred men are employed here, ashore and afloat, for nine months of the year, and nearly half that number for the three months of winter, on equipment. A large proportion of the St. James catch is handled by Charlevoix shippers. The Booth Fisheries Co., of this city, is the headquarters office for branch shipping points extending from Detour to Frankfort, including the straits and both Traverse bays.

Fish Boat Licensees.

A Lansing special says: At this season of the year when navigation is beginning to open on the great lakes the owners of fishing boats prepare for their summer's work and every mail brings a large number of requests for fishing licenses and the force of clerks in the office of State Game Warden Pierce is working overtime in order to issue the certificates showing that the owners of the various boats have complied with the law and are entitled to fish unmolested in the waters of the great lakes. The cost of a steam fishing tug is computed to pay a yearly license of $25 providing he is a resident of the state. Non-resident owners of this class of boats pay $100; the rate of gasoline tugs is $10, for the resident and $50 for the non-resident.

Last year the receipts from fishing licenses amounted to more than $5,000. Adam Graves, one of the big tug craft constituted to this fund. Mr. Pierce says that reports up to April 1 shows that 443 have paid licenses, thus far this year. Less money has deposited $2,762, most of which was received from fishing licenses.

—Hev. H. S. Mills, of Petoskey, will assist the pastor of the Ironton congregational church in a series of meetings commencing Tuesday evening, the 19th inst.

—When Superintendent Clark was here last week he came with authority from Warden Pierce to notify the department officer Chase S. Osborn for the planting of the fry from the Charlevoix and Seo hatcheries. On Saturday the Osborn planted five million of young whitefish on the grounds north of this port. Deputy Eddy expects to go to the Soo with the first tow week for a trip, after which she will return here and complete the work.

The New Council.

The old city council held its last meeting Thursday night. Mayor Hampton and the new aldermen have qualified, and the new council is now in the saddle. The new council is as follows:

Mayor—W. E. Hampton.
First ward, aldermen, Scholton, Pulock.
Second ward, Hachow, Nordrum
Third ward, Gelkes, Webster.

Marine Notes.

The steamer Beaver, which went to Manistee last week to tow a raw vessel, was detained there a week waiting to be docked. She arrived here Tuesday. The steamer Cormorant has been making her first trip.

The Beaver Island fishing tug Violet, which wintered here, returned Sunday from Gelesville, Lake Huron, where she went to ship a new boiler.

The Hart Green Bay line will run on same route as last year, and on about the same schedule.

CASUAL OBSERVATIONS

We do not profess to be the Henry Waterson of country journalism, but we feel like doing as Marse Henry does when he gets out at the nincompoops of his party, when their lack of wisdom reveals itself—send. "Get together," is the burden of Waterson's song when democrats make monkeys of themselves, and so we are bold enough to suggest that Charlevoix republicans who have regard for what is expected of them in forthcoming battles for the true principles of republicanism, should begin to think about getting together. The city election returns of last week do not to any extent reflect credit on local political generalship—if you doubt the proposition just recall to your mind the fact that there are less than ninety registered socialists in Charlevoix, while the socialist ticket polled 191 votes. We shall not elucidate on the cause of all this—it is manifest. Out of the more than one hundred of the overplus who voted the socialist ticket there were not more than a dozen democrats; the remainder were republicans. Figures won't lie.

The comet will disappear in June, and our Teddy will land on American soil the same month. The passage of the former will be a celestial event the way will have been a spectacular celestial exhibition, as the progress of the latter has been a terrestrial movement without precedent since Caesar returned to Rome with the world at his feet. Astrologers tell us that the comet portends great events, and political astrologers predict great happenings soon after our chief citizen reaches his own beloved country. Meanwhile Teddy is as dumb as the sphynx under the shadow of which he recently stood. There may be men in the United States who know just what Roosevelt will do when he reaches the storm center, but they won't tell.

We have been asked lately what has become of the Charlevoix Shiffless Shakespeare's Society. As its founder and philanthropic friend we are compelled to acknowledge that it is not so frisky as it was. Its existence the past winter has been a very regrettable lapse. Internal dissensions between leading members and a lack of funds with which to meet the necessary expenses of the society have badly crippled the organization. But the statement recently made by an unscrupulous party that local option was the cause of its decline is a base slander, and is resented by both factions of the society. It is hoped that past differences will be settled before next winter, and peace again brought within its circle.

CHAPTER XVIII

This long conversation bar somewhat exhausted Doggerel, who was yet anxious to bring him to cross from talking. Jim recalled the lamentable end, but the room to think over all he had learned. The story of Doggerel convinced him more than ever that Dr. Etwald was the cause of all the terrible fears which had occurred during the past few weeks. Without doubt it was Etwald who had secretly hidden Hilda, for who was in a better position to do it, in the character of doctor, after Doggerel had disposed of the unknown man? Jim had opened the window to admit the fresh air, and as he inhaled it he felt that he had cut off the head-devil.

"Yes," said Jim, addressing himself to his friend, "I do feel better. Thanks! I have learned much from Doggerel, and I shall be able to make use of his information to-morrow. I shall be able to unravel the plot, and I shall succeed, as a matter of course."

Angered by the selfish way in which Jim had acted, Jim did not communicate to the discovery to the young man. Doggerel he took counsel with himself, and the next morning he called upon the place which he had found. There were to see Hilda and force the truth from her; and Barbara, in Desdemona, to fetch Hilda Arkel and Mrs. Hilda Etwald. Jim was anxious to communicate his discoveries to the Inspector at the Yard, and to Major Walsh.

After breakfast the Major wrote two notes—one for Arkel, asking him to be at "Anderson" that morning, as he had important matters to discuss; the other for Etwald, requesting the doctor to be on his guard, who, asked Jim slightly, to the better, and he would be present. Having thus prepared for the battle, Jim dressed, and, leaving Jim deliberate the Inspector, and with instructions to set off at once to Hampstead. When the Major had seen his safely out of the gates, he took his way towards the Inspector's for the all-important interview with Dickens.

On arriving at "The Wigwam," Jim presented his card, and was shown into the drawing-room, there to wait the arrival of Mr. Dickens. In another minute the Inspector had called to see him; she sent Dick to inform him that she had "Mr. Jim" waiting, and that he would shortly join her. The ingenuous young man, as she, dabbed his hair, and, with folded arms and foot tapping, stood before the fire, waiting for Dick to leave the room, when Jim placed himself before her and said, in a low voice, "Do not be alarmed, Miss Barbara, but I wish to speak to you."

"Not you, Jim," he said, in a cold voice. "I do not wish to hear your mistakes; but I wish to speak to you."

"What you wish, sah?"

"I want to ask you questions about the devil-stick."

"Massa, I say all I know of de devil-stick!"

"Indeed, you did not, Dido. You did not mention that by Dr. Etwald's directions you had to place the devil-stick on the pillow, so that you stopped the Dumbledrone." Dido gazed at Jim in astonishment, the same poison for the purpose of disguising herself from the Major, that you contrived yourself under the bed, and afterwards dragged him. A look of terror showed itself in the dilated eyes of the negroes. Jim did not understand how Jim had become possessed of a knowledge of her crime, but she was struck with stupor by the recital. Speechless, however, she remained, and with a dirty smile of contempt Jim proceeded to tell the story of how Jim brought out his plot against Hilda.

"No!" said he, fixing his eye on the woman. "Did you confess to the Major? Did you tell him of Mr. Arkel's adoption, and how Dr. Etwald is never the dead body of Jim Arkel?"

"De—de—dead—body," she stammered, stunned by the word.

"Yes, the dead body of Mr. Arkel."

"Yes, the dead body of Mr. Arkel," she repeated, in a low voice, as the woman, still leaning his voice, of woman, still leaning his voice, of she was about to speak.

"Do I care, Dido, you ask?"

Dido trembled all over, partly from rage for fear Jim could not determine, and opened her mouth to shut it again, but he was too quick for her. Dido was in a heavy sorrow was found outside the door. A moment later, and Mrs. Dallas, with a face expressive of astonishment, entered into the drawing-room, and Dido at her feet was sobbing like a child. Jim was standing with folded arms in the attitude of the Major, and the woman was looking on the surface, and as he entered the room, and called to Dido to rise, Jim was the Inspector, and Dido, at the sound of her expressive demeanor.

"What is the meaning of this?" demanded Mrs. Dallas, with an uneasy glance at the frantic negress.

"I shall explain when Dido stops her howling," said Jim, quite unbelieving.

"Oh, noisy! noisy!" went the negress, sitting on to her feet, falling on her face, and, in the attitude of the Eastern idolatrous.

"Dido, you know who committed the first of the crimes," cried Jim, acting the young girl's arm, "tell them all, tell Dr. Etwald who stole the wand of Sleep!"

"No! Not Dido! Oh!" cried Dido, in a tone of anguish, "it was my mother."

CHAPTER XIX

"Your mother," he muttered, hardly believing the evidence of his own senses. "Your mother stole the devil-stick?"

"Yes, but she did not know what it was, she said. Dido, Dido! Liesan! said Dido, much agitated. I told you false. Dido ought to be ashamed of herself. Not that I know you have discovered my secret." Dido gave her mistress a look of reproach. Dido, I want tell you the truth. Dido, Dido! Liesan! Dido, Dido! Liesan! Dido, Dido! Liesan!

East Saginaw, Mich., March 9th—"I have of late heard of arbitrary legislation and of the opposition to it. I have heard of it in the coming and departing of his last year's session of the legislature, in the governor's office, in the public mind, in the newspapers, in the courts, in the halls of congress, in the cabinet and in the white house. 270,000 MEN WALK OUT OF COAL MINES

Two-Thirds of Bituminous Supply of the United States Threatened in the Struggle.

SUSPENSION FOR SHORT TIME?

Trouble Is Not Called a Strike and Hope Is Expressed That It Will Be Soon Over.

Two hundred and seventy thousand mine workers, producing more than two-thirds of the total output of bituminous coal in the United States, laid down their tools the other night for an indefinite period. From various sections of the country optimistic reports were received that the suspension would be of short duration and that the supply of coal above ground, with the output of anthracite in mind, would be sufficient to keep the wheels of industry moving until new wage contracts were negotiated. Neither the coal operators nor the United Mine Workers admit that the trouble amounts to a strike. They prefer to term it a "suspension," but whatever name it goes under the production of coal has stopped in the districts affected and no one is able to say when it will be resumed.

The total bituminous coal production in the United States in 1907, which was the banner year, was 394,379,112 short tons. In 1908 the production, due to the panic of depression, fell off about 60,000,000 tons, but last year it increased to about 405,000,000 tons. Of the production of anthracite amounts to approximately 80,000,000 tons a year.

In the eleven States affected by the suspension the numbers are complete in all except Pennsylvania. In the latter State only two-thirds of the mines, employing about 225,000 men and producing about 200,000 tons, is involved. In central Pennsylvania a major ity of the collieries are not organized, and the miners there have been given notices of an increase in wages, it is said no effort will be made by the union to have them shut down. Internal strife among the United Mine Workers may prolong the suspension beyond present indications, according to those who are familiar with conditions.

ROOSEVELT NOT TO SEE POPE

Declines to Accept Supposed Limit on Actions While in Rome.

Former President Roosevelt of the United States has declined an invitation to visit the Pope in Rome, through a party of his friends, because he feared the Pope not to receive former Vice President Fairbanks—the question of precedence over the American Ambassador.

Negotiations had been opened through Ambassador Lelehman for the audience, and it was understood Mr. Roosevelt. The latter explained himself as anxious to see the Pope. The Pope is reply said he hoped that no such unpleasant incident as that which marred the visit of Mr. Fairbanks to the city would occur. Mr. Fairbanks declined to visit the Vatican before seeing the Methodists.

Colonel Roosevelt replied that he could not visit the Vatican under such conditions, and when he got a reply stating that it would be impossible to lift the restrictions Roosevelt called saying that the visit was impossible.

The affair created a tremendous sensation in Rome. It is feared that Colonel Roosevelt had made no arrangements whatever to visit the Vatican there. The reply audience which he had arranged was with the King.

"EDDIE" FAY IS CAPTURED.

Chicago Robber Arrested in New York for Postoffice "Holdup."

"Eddie" Fay, who, it is said, made a science of burglary and was called the "trickiest criminal in the world," is under arrest in New York accused of having taken part in the $85,000 robbery of the Richmond, Va., postoffice. Postoffice inspectors in Chicago were elated over the news of his arrest, for they had been searching for him for six years. Fay was suspected of having a hand in the robbery of the Chicago postoffice of $75,000 in 1901, and he is under indictment charged with robbing the Superior, Wis., postoffice in 1902. While awaiting trial in the Superior, Wis., jail in 1904, he escaped from a steel cage and had since evaded the postal inspectors.

EXPULSION OF JEWS GROWING.

Health Advices Say Russia Is Helping Her Families by Hundreds.

The American Jewish committee announced in New York that it had received advices from trustworthy sources in Berlin stating that the expulsion of Jews from Vardoff in Russia had reached a magnitude never previously attained. Forbidden to remain and threatened with expulsion at the office of local government were able to find protection through the ministry of the interior, whereas now, it is said, the ministry itself is issuing orders for expulsion. Hundreds of families, according to advices, that have lived for years in Kiel, Riga, Kazan and Wormsock are being driven out.

MENELIK DEAD; BOY MADE KING

Abyssinian Ruler Reported as Having Passed Away.

Menelik II., King of Abyssinia, is dead at the age of 66 years and in his twenty-first year of his reign. Prince Lidj Jeasu, grandson of the late monarch, is heir to the throne. The King was stricken with dropsy last fall and never recovered. For many weeks his death had been expected. When he was able no longer to carry the affairs of state Ras Tessma, the regent, with the approval of the principal chiefs, took the reins of government. At the same time Empress Taitou was deprived of all power of interference and her appointments of favorites were annulled. Prince Lidj Jeasu was proclaimed heir to the throne May 18. He is 14 years old and little less than a year ago succeeded his grandaughter, 7 years old, of the late Emperor John and a niece of Empress Taitou.

GIRL SLAIN BY BURGLAR.

Screams with Fright at Sight of Intruder and Is Shot Down.

His demand for money being refused, a masked burglar who had entered the drawing room of the residence of Mrs. Sarah Dean, in Chicago Hill, in the Northern part of Spring field, Mass., the other evening, shot and killed Miss Martha B. Blackstone, 35 years old, a public school teacher, and probably fatally wounded Miss Harriet B. Dow, a fellow teacher. Miss Blackstone was shot through the heart as she ran screaming into an adjoiner room. Miss Dow's skull was fractured and trepanning will be resorted to in an effort to save her life. The murderer escaped through the grove which surrounds the house.

Andrew Carnegie defends the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, declaring it a very decided improvement upon the predecessor. He asserts that the tariff will not be revised downward, but a protective measure and of increased importance as a source of revenue.

"The Taft administration will make a blunder if it attempts to follow the Minnesota Republican State convention in backing the new tariff law," Representative Davis of St. Peter, Minn., is quoted as saying. "I believe that the President and other party leaders are paving the way for an indorsement of the Aldrich-Payne act by the various State conventions to be held this year.

Chairman Norman E. Mack, of the National Democratic Committee, and Charles F. Murphy, Tammany chief, both denied laughed the report that the counsels of Democratic party leaders at Hot Springs, Ark., are for the purpose of forcing Governor Dix off the party affairs.

New York Republican politicians are wondering what Mr. Roosevelt will say about State politics when he gets home. Some hot shots have been trying to decide who shall run against Governor Dix, nominated last June, after Lieut. Governor Chanler, Comptroller Metz, State chairman Conger and Woodruff.

PROGRESS OF SAYLER TRIAL

The long work of securing the jury in the famous murder case of Dr. W. R. Miller and Mrs. Inez Sayler having ended in Waterloo, Ill., the taking of the jurors and the taking of testimony is well under way. No murder of recent years has attracted more attention throughout the middle West than when Dr. Miller killed John Sayler, a banker of Coventry, Ill., July 11, 1909. The defense is claiming that Dr. Miller was attacked by the banker, while the state asks the death penalty and hopes to prove that Dr. Miller and Mrs. Sayler plotted to do away with the banker. The state is using the evidence of Irving Cotton Miller, 13-year-old son of the physician, and Gobia Sayler, the daughter of Mrs. Sayler, against the prisoner. The defense is well armed with money and has secured the best legal talent in Illinois. The state's attorney declares he will convince the jury that Dr. Miller was in love with Mrs. Sayler and that she induced him to do away with her husband. The death penalty is sought by two men and women on trial.

John C. Grunden is Mrs. Sayler's father, and his connection with the tragedy has been strengthened by stock testimony tending to show that he carried an automatic revolver of his since died and relative to that which Dr. Miller is reported to have used in the slaying of Byron Sayler. Mrs. Myrtle Green, sister of the dead banker, positively identified the bloody shirt worn by Grunden on the night of the tragedy. She also identified the bloody pajamas worn by Mr. Sayler on that night and particularly identified the blood stains which she declared to have been caused by her effort to hold Sayler to the floor during the death.

The testimony of Mrs. Green was corroborated by the young Miller boy. Mrs. Sneed Sohn of the evidence of the two sisters of the dead banker tended to show an effort on the part of Mrs. Sayler to hide the bloody garments which were found in the house of Grunden, were that night.

The trial was episodic brought out, it being shown that Mrs. Sayler induced a young man to write a note of defiance to Dr. Miller right after the shooting, before she attempted to ascertain the condition of her husband, who was at the moment lying on the floor in the parlor of his own home. Efforts of Prec. P. Morris, counsel for the defense, to shake the very damaging testimony brought out were futile.

SWOPE CLAIMANT RECOGNIZED.

Alleged Son of Dead Millionaire Signs Over His Status.

Have Mr. H. Hyde and his wife, of Kansas City, who was Frances Swope, a niece and one of the principal heirs of Thomas H. Swope, agreed to recognize the claim of Efner Swope, of Martinsburg, W. Va., who is trying to establish that he is a son of the late millionaire? Efner Swope, through his attorney, has filed a quitclaim which he received from the latter, who was the founder of the pie firm of Moody & Waters. Moody occupied a home residence in the city and owned a summer residence in Wisconsin. Efner Swope claims that he is a son of Moody & Waters. Moody occupied a summer residence in Wisconsin. Efner Swope claims that he is a son of the late Mr. Charles. The remaining portion of the stock was taken to Jefferson City, where it is said it will have a name is familiar in the Swope case at Kansas City, for analysis. Moody & Waters is the coroner, stated the most continued enough arsenic to have killed a half a dozen persons. The stomach, heart and stomach of the decedent, according to the coroner, also showed pronounced traces of poison. Detectives have kept a close watch on Mrs. Hyde and her daughter. A year ago Moody is said to have narrowly escaped poisoning in Kansas City, when he had previously tested it, was later taken by cramps. Moody is said to have carried insurance of $15,000 in favor of his wife. Her relations were with Mr. Swope, and married twenty-five years ago.

CHURCH MERGER IS UPHELD

Union of Cumberland and Presbyterian Sanctioned by Court.

The Indiana Supreme Court has sustained the case of James W. Ramsey and others against Joseph C. Hindman and others, involving Cumberland Presbyterian church merger case. The two branches of the Presbyterian church merged in 1906. The members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Washington, Ind., were not agreed on the question of merger, one part wishing to combine and the other faction wishing to remain under the old Cumberland Presbyterian faith and government. They took their troubles into court, and the lower court held that the minority church had a right to the property of the congregation.

The court's decision holds the general assembly of the Cumberland church had authority to state the faith of the church. The court says in relation to the claim that the merger made it possible for a Cumberland church, every congregation, presbytery or synod of the church, with possibly some changes of constituent membership and congregational property, to withdraw from the unions and accustomed work without interruption.

"Down with the liar!" "A boo Roosevelt!" "Vive Egypt!" "We want a constitution!" "Hurrah for the Assembly!" yelled and howled the turbulent mob that marched and remarched past Shepheard's Hotel in Cairo the other afternoon. It was the answer of the Nationalists to Colonel Roosevelt's speech in the University of Egypt.

The meetings of protest that began the previous night were continued in various sections of the city, the Nationalists evidently taking their disapproval of his views, and then marching before the hotel in the hope of being able to "boo" him and see and hear him; so that he might know what was thought of him. Speech is said to have carried insurance of $15,000 in favor of his wife. Her relations were with Mr. Swope, and married twenty-five years ago.

TAFT'S TARIFF PRAISE IS BACKED BY FACTS

Treasury Figures Bear Out Statement That Revenue Is Increased and Average of Duties Lower.

LIGHT ON BAY STATE VOTE

Study of President's Address and Its Statistical Basis Interesting as Bearing on Foss Victory.

President Taft said in his speech at Providence:

Seven months of the new tariff law have proved:

1. It is the best revenue getter we ever had.

2. It has by the returns shown that it has the largest free list.

3. It has shown that the rates of the Dingley bill have been materially reduced.

The Treasury Department, with facts and figures, bears out what the President has said.

The Fourteenth Congressional District of Massachusetts elected Eugene N. Foss to Congress and by the act took exception to the President's speech and to the facts and figures given out by the Chief Statistician of the Treasury Department.

When Mr. Taft made his speech on the operations of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill he had authority for every statement that he made.

The bureau of statistics had supplied him with information to the effect that the average rate of duty paid on all imports for the last six months was 21.07 per cent as against the rate that the average rate for the same six months for the four years preceding under the Dingley law was 24.95 per cent.

The information from the bureau of statistics was accurate, and it shows as far as figures can show the result used that there has been a downward revision of the tariff.

The President said that as a revenue getter the Payne-Aldrich law was the best the country ever has had.

From the Treasury Department it is learned that in the six months from August 5 to February 5 last the customs receipts amounted to $166,002,836.24.

During the most nearly corresponding period of last year for which the figures are available the receipts were $129,003,676.

Reasons for Increased Revenue.

On the face of things this shows that the President's words concerning the revenue-getting qualities of the law were true.

The Treasury Department officials will not express a definite opinion concerning the reasons for the increase in revenue under the new tariff law. It is possible that prosperity has increased importations and it is also possible that the reduction of duties on certain articles has so stimulated importations that it was cheaper to pay on each hundredweight or each gross, as the case may be, the duties for foreign-made goods has been so great that the government's income has increased by the reduction of duties.

It will take the study of months and a scrutiny of each item of importation to prove whether prosperity or the reduction in rates on certain articles has given Uncle Sam the increase of income.

The figures of the Treasury Department back up the President in what he has had to say about the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, but with the different interpretations that men can place upon facts it is possible that this difference in interpretation will cause a great deal of wordy controversy, if not actual bitterness, among the Congressmen of Massachusetts district.

Congressman N. Foss, tariff revision Republican, who was elected on the Democratic ticket, is responsible for the statement that the President's speech was "full of misrepresentations of facts." Several prominent Republicans in Massachusetts, he believes in reciprocity and is a tariff reduced to a point just low enough to that wages of American laboring men will not be endangered.

Mr. Foss was elected on a platform embodying his belief, which have just been outlined, and he was elected on the day following the President Taft at Providence.

The voters of the Fourteenth Massachusetts district by their action seem to have shown that they think, notwithstanding the policies of the operation of the Payne-Aldrich law, a measure with lower rate figures would operate better still.

The new tariff law has had thus far a comparatively short lease of life. When it is a year old it will be possible to obtain more definite conclusions concerning its efficacy as a revenue getter and as a measure to afford the best reduction in rates over previous measures.

In the meantime there will be Congressional elections and perhaps it will be above the President's plan for suits that the Massachusetts election was in a sense misleading.

Political Comment.

Now for the Taft Measures.

Republican ability to close up the ranks after internal conflict was demonstrated once more at Washington in the course votes of the majority members of the House of Representatives.

Speaker Cannon's grave and quiet participation in the proceedings and the steady refusal of the insurgents to fight for office seemed to assure a breach of harmony that could hardly have been hoped for. Whether the regulars made a tactical error in not granting an insurgent on the committee thus will tell. But there need be no danger, even here, if the six standpatters but live up to the spirit of generosity which permitted their unopposed election.

Upon the basis of harmony thus established the Republican party must now proceed to expensive action. Adjournment day is not so far in the future that the schedule of legislation can be filled by the time Congress meets. It should be the business of the Republican majority to consider what the next session may have to do. Some things which it gave the country in its platform; it must have a record of performance to show to the people. Some congressional districts in which now members are voted for in every party are the greatest political revolution that we have had since Cleveland came in

Perhaps no governor of Michigan has made as many appointments as Governor Warner during the three terms he has held office. He still has nearly a year to serve and as a number of terms of appointive offices will expire he will add a goodly number of names to his list.

Through a train of circumstances he has been called upon to appoint several men to elective places among these being a state treasurer, attorney general, two justices of the supreme court, two regents of the university, three members of the state board of education, eleven circuit court commissioners, made a great many national appointments to say nothing of long lists of honorary appointments for various state and national events.

East Jordan Herald: Last week H. O. Huber, C. J. Bisbee and M. A. Hosmer left East Ave., Muskegon, visited East Jordan and decided to establish a new bank. The stock will be held by the gentlemen named above and by Mr. A. E. Sleeper, present state treasurer, who has large interests in 15 different banking institutions in Michigan. Mr. H. O. Huber is just entering upon his second term as Judge of Probate of Huron county, while Mr. Hosgmer has been for some years and is now sheriff of the same county. Mr. C. J. Bisbee is a young man of business experience, having been cashier for two years in his father's bank, assistant cashier for one year in a Detroit bank, with six years at the University of Michigan. He will be cashier of the new bank and if first impressions are correct will prove to be well fitted for the proposition. C. E. CONVENTION

Eleventh District Michigan Christian Endeavor Union Will Meet in Benzonia

The officers of the Eleventh District of Michigan Christian Endeavor Union are very busy planning for the next annual convention that is to be held in Benzonia, Thursday and Friday, May 12th and 13th.

This will be the best series of meetings that has ever been held in the district.

The principal speaker for Thursday evening will be Hon. Orson S. Osborne of the Sun, whose fame as a brilliant orator is indeed world wide. In his own particular business he has been called to every country in the world. This alone is worth attending the whole convention.

"Keep on the Sunny Side" will be the theme throughout all the convention. The sunny side of church work, Sunday School work, missionary work, in the business world, in the social world, Christian Endeavor work, the sunny side of the home, the personal life.

The officers of the convention, the report thanks to be returned, will be mailed in a few days. The program is almost ready for the printer. Great activity is manifested all over the district, for the "Best Yet" convention. May 12th and 13th will be red letter days for Benzonia and the whole district.

Geo. Entrieth and daughter, of High Island, were in town Friday, on their way to Traverse City.

Through the combined efforts of the men's and ladies' clubs of the city over 600 shade trees will be set out to replace those dying this spring and others have been secured by the women for an endless quantity of shrubs of various sorts, which the residents propose to use to beautify Petoskey.

High School Notes.

The high school athletic association will give their annual chicken pie supper at the Beach Hotel, Friday, April 29th. They are planning to make this much better than the one given last which was declared by every one to be a complete success.

Leslie Crane, Kenneth Bridge and Chas. Smith of Lewiston, Montana, students at the U. of M., who are spending their vacation with parents and friends in Charlevoix, were visitors at the high school Monday. Part of the Monday morning program was turned over to them and they responded with a few pleasant remarks in regard to the associations and works at the University.

The Seniors of the Charlevoix High School will give the farcical comedy, "The Private secretary," at the opera house, Thursday evening of this week. The story of the play involves the trials and misfortunes of the real Private Secretary, who is superceded by a young fellow who is endeavoring to row his wild oats. He is also troubled by the tricks and pranks of two young ladies and the hobbies of an old woman optimist. Come and see the workings out of the remainder of this story and it will afford you a full evening of entertainment and pleasure.

The following pupils of the high school earned an average standing of 90 or above for the month ending April 1st: Seniors—Orville Beattie 90.8, Raymond Bennett 93.4, Hallie Hosmer 90.8, Guy Durgan 91.2, Caro Meech 90, Guy Lamphear 92.8, Hubert Paddock 91.2, Lilah Shapton 94.8, Reba Cooper 90.5. —H. N. Faulkner, of Chicago, arrived Saturday to put the finishing touches on his new Dixon Avenue cottage, and he says until June 15th. Mrs. Faulkner will join him here soon.

—Floyd M. Hisle and wife arrived from California Monday, and after a short visit with the "old folks," will proceed to Mackinac Island to resume their gardening and flower business there.

—Mr. Geo. M. Graw, formerly of the Hotel Perry, Petoskey, has accepted the position of clerk at Baker's Inn, and is actively engaged in making things pleasant for the guests of that popular house.

—The life saving crew have just completed 1500 feet of four foot cement walk along the street fronting the row of attractive homes of the men. Other improvements are contemplated that will make the residence portion of the grounds more fully correspond with the beauty of the station grounds proper.

—The state board of health has adopted a resolution directing that the public schools of the state shall be equipped with individual drinking cups or a device that will take the place of a common drinking cup. Secretary Shumway says that the board expects its order to be complied with not later than the beginning of the next school year.

—Partly on account of the fact that there was a misunderstanding as to the date of the Fruit Growers' meeting and partly because the weather was ideal for farm work, only half a dozen farmers were present at the fruit growers' meeting held in Boyne City on Tuesday, April 5, and same was postponed to a later date. Prof. Taft will be in Charlevoix county in the near future and has promised to be present. A special meeting will be called as soon as Mr. Taft announces the date of his visit.

—The Traverse City Record says that the steamer Chippewanogon will start out in all probabilities on the best season in the history of the company. Without runs will be made first, as there is a great deal of freight to be handled before the passenger season starts. The steamer will not be painted for about a month in readiness for the passenger service. There are savings in the shape of bath and shingles to be carried in from High Island and the Beavers. When the passenger season begins the schedule will be practically the same as it was last year.

—John McCabe, formerly of this place but now of Chicago, is here visiting relatives and friends.

—If you miss "A Texas Ranger," at the Charlevoix Theatre Tuesday night you miss one of the best things on the road.

—"A Texas Ranger," at the Charlevoix Theatre next week Tuesday evening, is one of the good things Mr. Bridge has booked for the entertainment of the people.

—There will be a warm sugar social at the Barnard M. E. church Friday evening, April 22nd. Given by the True Blue club for the benefit of the pastor. Everybody come and enjoy a good time.

—The lighthouse tender Sumac, Capt. Hubbard, arrived in port Sunday evening. She will make this harbor her headquarters for some time in the work of placing the straits and inland buoys.

—Elmer Johnson now "stands on the bridge at midnight" to see that nobody steals his chickens. To explain.—some in Winter Park are thinks they have some indebted than to Mr. and Mrs. H. Wyoming, formerly raised cucumbers and squashes he now has one of the neatest chicken yards in the city and a fine flock of well bred chickens therein.

—The seniors of the Charlevoix high school are receiving many compliments for their masterly presentation of "The Private Secretary" at the Charlevoix Theatre last Thursday evening. The efforts of the class were rewarded by a good house. Both Miss Carley and the class are to be congratulated.

—Mr. George H. Markham, of Big Rapids, an experienced scenic artist, is at work painting the scenery and drop curtain of the Majestic Theatre. The stage will be provided with a full set of scenic drops, and the curtain will have a center piece copied from an excellent photo view of the Belvedere Hotel and surroundings. The proscenium will be enlarged two feet and embellished by the brush of the artist.

—The O'Neill fishing tug Parmelee had a narrow escape from destruction by fire in the straits last Friday. Fire was discovered in the upper works about the boiler, and gained rapid headway, despite the efforts of the crew to subdue it. Fortunately the tug Gelken was near by and came to the assistance of the Parmelee with her fire hose. The damage was about $200 which was covered by insurance. After temporary repairs the tug continued her work.

—We have a personal knowledge that the SENTINEL dragged at least a dozen people out of bed at four in the morning, during the past week, to see the comet in the eastern sky. And the joke is, most or all of them, together with ourself, honestly believed they here saw the comet. The fact is, what we saw was Venus, the bright morning star. But, honor bright, if you get up between three and four you may see it now, south to the north of Venus. But we shall do possess for our sin by waiting for its appearance in the western sky, early in May.

—The city council, board of public works and board of education are considering the proposition of converting the basement of the new public library into an office for the city clerk and also a council room. The commodious lecture room is well adapted to the purpose. The board of public works will soon turn the building over to the council, and that body surveyor it to the school board, and then the matter will be settled. The argument behind the proposition is that there is no other present permanent use for that part of the building, and its conversion to city purposes will be a decided saving to the tax-payers.

—Census taking began Monday of this week. Get ready to receive and entertain the enumerator.

—Fred. H. Brown returned Saturday from Chicago and St. Louis, where he went on Hay City business.

—S. A. Marting, manager of the sugar factory, returned Friday from a trip to Chicago and Ohio points.

—Married, April 13th, at the Methodist parsonage, by Rev. F. M. Taylor Mr. Oscar Darling, to Miss Laura Dodd, both of Boyne City.

—Miss Marion Harris, the well known and popular postoffice clerk, resigned her position Saturday. Miss Winnie Weaver, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. George Weaver, has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Contin received a telegram Saturday announcing the death of their little grandson, Howard Sheldon, at Lansing. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon were formerly connected with the Cottage restaurant.

—There are few better indications of the prosperity of Charlevoix than the fact that the Majestic Theatre was packed every night last week and at two matinees. Manager Campbell has fully demonstrated his ability to please the public.

—A striking evidence of agricultural enterprise in this section is the fact that Alfred VanDusen and William Wilms, of Norwood township, and Geo. Meggison and B. Elliot, of Marion, have recented erected silos. Several more will be erected in the same territory this spring.

—Act 113 of the laws of 1909, providing for the inspection and licensing of power boats plying on the inland lakes and streams of the state, should be made familiar by all boat owners. It is estimated that there are 10,000 small pleasure crafts which must be equipped with lights and a whistle under the terms of the statute, which larger ..... which carry passengers for hire must pay a license fee and comply with the requirements of the law.

—Most of the people who have been at the "fun" have left for their northern homes and it will soon be closed for the season. With other Florida towns, Winter Park has had its full quota of guests, and all have carried away pleasant remembrances of the good things we have had to offer. To none in Winter Park are finer guests more indebted than to Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Foley, with their kindly ways and genial manners, endeared themselves to all. The city is to be congratulated upon the presence and influence of the proprietor of the "inn" and his good wife.—Orange County (Florida) Citizen.

—The cast of "A Texas Ranger" which is billed to appear at the Charlevoix Theatre on Tuesday night, is headed by Mr. L. A. Stanton as "Fresh-water Jack," the hero of the Texas plains. Mr. Stanton is a native Texan, being born on his fathers ranch, the Tar X, one of the largest in the state. Most of Mr. Stanton's life has been spent in the East, but he spends all his summers on his father's ranch and can ride and throw the lariat with the most skilful of the cowboys. During his ten year's experience as an actor, he has made a specialty of playing cowboy parts. He is ably supported by Miss Patricia Barrington as the Colonel's daughter, and a company of fourteen. The scenery and costuming are also features. Prices: 25, 35 and 50 cents.

—The postoffice department at Washington is urging through local postmasters from whose offices R. F. D. mail is carried, the desirability of inducing patrons of the R. F. D service to have their post boxes and the posts supporting them painted white and have the names of the owners painted in black letters about two inches high. If the suggestion is carried out R. F. D. routes would be easily distinguished by all people traveling the country roads.

—The lighthouse engineer's steamer Hyacynthe, Capt. Brunson, arrived here Wednesday afternoon with material for the erection of an oil house. The structure will be of brick and iron, and will be built in the rear of the keeper's Park Avenue residence, on the bank of the channel, just inside the revetment. The superintendent of construction is expected here in a few days. The Hyacinthe will return in about ten days with the material for the new residence of Keeper Shields, at the buoy station.

The Expert Accountant

According to a report of an auditing company filed with the board of supervisors of Wexford county lately, shortages aggregating over $8,000 were found, chargeable against 77 officials of the county during the past 12 years, the period covered by the company in its examination.

There may and there may not be an element of humbuggery in the existing system of peripatetic audit of public finances. An expert accountant may be as wise as he looks. It may be that he earns $10 per day in digging up figgers that make somebody throw a fit. But we are skeptical.

Most people have acquired the habit of regarding the final balance sheet of the expert with much the same credulity and reverence as the devout Mohamedan regards the Koran, or the Christian the new testament. There does not appear to be the slightest doubt in the mind of the innocent bystander as to the infallibility of the expert accountant. The decree of the autocrat of the ledger is taken as the Children of Israel took the law from Mt. Sinai. The laws of the Medes and Persians were not more inflexible and terrifying than is the final judgment of the public auditor.

Probably a majority of the 77 alleged delinquents in Wexford county do not possess a dollar that does not belong to them, but somebody had to be stuck, else there would be no use for a public auditor. If he does not soak somebody he is not earning his ten dollars per day. Did anybody ever hear of an expert accountant finding a balance in favor of a quondam official? Not on your life. That is not in his bond. There is there for.

But we suppose expert accountants, factory inspectors, and such like, are necessary evils in the economy of public affairs, and we should not complain. But there are some men who are thrown under the wheels of the juggernaut in whose integrity we have a more abiding faith than we have in the infallibility of this ten dollar a day pope. There are, in the divine plan of the universe, certain indefinable, unvary ing, absolute laws, but we do not believe that the decree of the expert accountant is one of them. It is of the earth earthy, at the price of ten dollars per day.

The writer of this was, once upon a time, treasurer of Charlevoix county. When the committee of the board of supervisors settled with him it insisted that $46 of county money in the possession of the treasurer did not belong to the county, and the aforesaid former treasurer has the $46 of public money yet. If in the late county audit, the expert failed to find that $46 back, we doubt not he would have reversed that balance, and perhaps raised the ante.

Tom Marks Company.

An audience, representing a big percent of the theater goers of this city, will attend the performance of "Irish Boarder," in which Mr. Marks and his excellent company of associate players will appear at the Bijou theatre on next Monday night, this being the opening night of a week's engagement, and the indication are that the utmost capacity of the house will be tested. This is greatly to the credit of the local public, for it shows that a goodly percent have not forgotten their old friend, "Tom." And the unusual interest that has been taken in the approaching engagement, ever since his coming was first announced, indicates the degree of esteem in which the Irish comedian is locally held and is a tribute to the achievements of the past. Mr. Marks is said to have a most notable supporting company, this season, including several players of considerable prominence, who have earned enviable reputations in support of other well known stars and the company, throughout, has been receiving enthusiastic praise, both from the press and public. Mr. Marks' vaudeville specialties introduced between the acts, are said to be entirely new and numerous his engagement promises to be one of the successes of the season.

Good Manners Tell Its Tale.

THE MICHIGAN CENTRAL

Officials Here Looking Over the Ground—Extension of the D. & C. Being Again Considered.

Last Thursday two officials connected with the freight department of the Michigan Central R. R. were in the city for the pre-arranged purpose of investigating the outlook for freight traffic in the event of the extension of the D. & C. branch from East Jordan to this point. Accompanied by officials of the board of commerce the gentlemen were driven to the stone quarries and the site of the proposed cement factory. It is supposed that the visit was made at the instance of the cement people and the added influence of the board of commerce.

Like all railroad men on similar errands the officials were reticent as to the plans and purposes of the railroad company, but they took notice of everything, and seemed to be interested in the showing made. Their investigations were confined to the freight proposition, and therefore the passenger proposition was not discussed.

It will be remembered that four years ago the matter of extension was up, and our board of commerce officials were summoned to Petoskey to confer with officials higher up than the two recent visitors. The result of the conference was that veiled intimations were made that the company contemplated an extension. In fact, our people were asked to secure the right of way. This was done, practically, but no word has been spoken since up to the date of the recent visit. It is reasonable to suppose that the financial panic, coming soon after the Petoskey conference, served to defer operations.

The extension of the D. & C. to this city is one of the easiest and likeliest railroad propositions in the State, and no one doubts that it is the purpose of the company to cover the twelve miles at an early date. We are firm in the opinion that before another winter we shall be given practical assurances that the Michigan Central is to enter Charlevoix.

—Auditor General Fuller is sending out to supervisors all over the state a circular letter in which in clearly set forth their duties as assessing officers. Particular attention is called to the many erroneous descriptions which are found in tax rolls, resulting in the charging back taxes and a consequent increased expense to the taxpayers. It is stated that much of the trouble arises in the older counties rather in the northern section of the state. Not only are the defects of tax rolls called to the attention of supervisors, but there is included a copy of the new law exempting the property of Civil war veterans, when it does not exceed $1,000 in value, from taxation. With the law is sent the construction placed on the act by the attorney general. This is the first time that the auditor's department has attempted this kind of assistance to supervisors and much good is expected to result.

The Wand of Sleep OR The Devil-Stick

By the Author of
"The Mystery of a Hansom Cab," Etc.

"I went to his room and found that he had gone and gone to bed. I said nothing of the thing, of course, to my mother or Mr. Lyne, when Mr. Lyne was taken and you and Dodd went to Dalmarnock and I went to Dalmarnock and received her dying message. I thought it was a wonderful coincidence that I had a sound about the devil-stick, and I thought it was a wonderful piece of Scottish luck that I had got of Scotland, and I thought my mother, who is not strong, I said nothing to her, for fear of her being upset, and without taking any notice of my mother, I came straight home to my father and was soon lost to sight. Jen went after him and we underlying the matter, I found that only Athel was present.

"Where is your Mr. Rivadal?" demanded the Major, suddenly.

"He went on a visit a few minutes ago to see some friends," replied the Inspector (meaning Mr. Rivadal with a lie).

Jen started. Evidently David had returned before him in order to see Athel, and, with prudent discretion, had conducted his interview in the dark, so that Athel might not discover that David was guilty. Jen, thus secretly informed of Sarah's behaviour, did in his mind to follow suit if few minutes of reflection convinced him that the secrecy necessary David did not know all the conversation which had taken place between himself and Isabella, therefore he could form no idea of anything else. But, indeed, the Major pondered why David wished to keep privacy with his sister. It looked, to his mind, as though the two was sure to know.

"Well, never mind Dr. Rivadal just now," he said, aloud. "He will be down, Mr. Inspector, and I have some. Sit down, Mr. Jen. I suppose you were the man who found the body?"

"Yes, sir," said Jen, promptly.

"Well, Mr. Inspector, I presume it is in connection with the case."

"You are quite right, sir, and I want to know if you have discovered anything new."

"Why, no, Mr. Inspector, I thought we would leave the question of your grounds on that night."

"Bulltoward," cried Jen, thunderstruck. "Did he see the body carried off?"

"He did not see it taken out of the house, young man, and, Athel Dallas, I know quite which he lost in his hand. "Well, we saw it, Jen, and the carriage which was waiting in the winding sure carried it to the hospital. Dr. Rivadal rode behind it, and I, with my father, and a woman, I suppose, but I did not give use their names."

"Lord, bless me!" said Jen, primly. "I'll give you the matter later on. Mr. Inspector, is the case complete enough to outlinds your report of Saturday night, and, if interest be deeply?"

"Complete it could," replied Athel, with a look of satisfaction. "Well, the man, and the woman and the body left the carriage, the doctor's brougham, when the body was placed in the room and the door closed, the woman went home, and the carriage mounted the box and drove off. It appears that there was no coachman."

"I don't wonder at that," rejoined the Major. "This precious pair were afraid to treat their secret to a third party. No doubt, he knew, before they left, to stand in the deep shadow of the lane while the reports were being made."

"Yes, sir," said the Inspector, "the women went away, the man mounted the box, and I suppose drove off with the carriage."

"Also with Battersea," added Athel, with a significant smile "in order that the trump wished to see the end of this singular adventure, so, no doubt he alighted to make money out of it. Well, he was driven with the carriage, by themselves."

"Quite so, and also that particular carriage which surrounds the house of Dr. Rivadal," yelled Major Jen, with a jubilant smile. "Battersea was the doctor take the body out of the carriage and carry it into the house. Then, on his return—Rivadal, I mean—he proceed the same and put in the stable, also the carriage into the coach house. Is that not so, Mr. Inspector?"

"Battersea told you so," stammered Athel, amazed at his cunning.

"I mean you be told me nothing, but I am as clever as Battersea, and not two and two together. Then, Battersea went to Rivadal, did he not, and tied to blackmail him, but this silver doctor compelled him to silence? I know a great many things, Mr. Inspector. For instance, I know that the woman who accompanied Dr. Rivadal to steal the body is Toby, who was the same said put in the stable, also the carriage into the coach house. Is that not so, Mr. Athel Dallas?"

"Battersea told you so," stammered Athel, amazed at his cunning.

"Yes, sir, I know that. If Rivadal will allow me to—"

"Rivadal will not allow you to do anything, young man," said the Major, with a frown. "This precious pair were afraid to treat their secret to a third party. No doubt, he knew, before they left, to stand in the deep shadow of the lane while the reports were being made." Jen, however, I understand. The women went away, the man mounted the box, and I suppose drove off with the carriage."

"Also with Battersea," added Athel, with a significant smile "in order that the trump wished to see the end of this singular adventure, so, no doubt he alighted to make money out of it. Well, he was driven with the carriage, by themselves."

THE COCOANUT TREE.

It Has an Irresistible Craving For Salt Water.

"In the tropics, where the cocoanut is wanted for planting, the nuts are picked up when they fall from the tree where they have lying for about fourteen months in clusters. It is a fact not generally known," says the Bulletin Weekly, "that a majority of the nuts drop at night, which probably accounts for the small loss of life by cocoanuts falling upon the heads of the natives.

"The action of the heavy dew at night loosens the husk with which nature has provided the nut and allows it to fall. The nuts wanted for planting are either gathered into heaps or placed under sheds, where they are allowed to sprout before planting, in order that good, healthy sprouts may be selected, thus avoiding the possibility of planting 'blind' nuts that would not sprout, in which case much time would be lost in starting the 'cocoanut walks,' as the orchards are called. When holes are dug about three feet deep and twenty feet apart the nut is carefully placed in the hole and covered with about one foot of soil. The hole is filled as the sprout grows until it reaches the surface, when it is left to itself, requiring no further attention. Should the place where the cocoanuts is planted be any distance from the seashore a great quantity of salt is placed in the hole. It will grow in luxuriancy, however, but a short distance from the shore, provided it is salt water being absolutely essential to its welfare.

"An interesting story is told by a gentleman who resided for some years in the tropics. He planted a cocoanut tree behind a board fence some distance from the sea. The tree grew perfectly straight until it reached the top of the fence, when it began to grow toward the ocean, leaning a foot or more. Then a wall was built quite near the fence, but several feet higher, and the tree again grew straight until the roof of the shed was reached, when it again bent toward the sea, forming a very curious and odd-looking tree.

"The irregular growth was wholly attributed to the influence of the salt air. No wonder it is true to the pole than the rest of the cocoanut tree to the ocean, for when the nut leaves the branch it falls and shoots directly toward the sea, no matter what the position of the nut when placed in the ground."

PAID IN PELTS.

Which Tennessee Was Known as the State of Franklin.

Probably few people know that the original name of the state of Tenessee was Franklin or that in 1785 the salaries of the officers of the commonwealth were paid in pelts, but the following is a correct copy of the law:

"Be it enacted by the state of Franklin, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that from and after the 1st day of January, 1786, the salaries of this commonwealth be as follows—to wit:

"His honor the chief justice, 500 deerskins.

"County clerk, 200 beaver skins.

"Clerk of the house of commons, 200 raccoon skins.

At that time the state of Franklin extended to the east basin of the Mississippi River, and on the west basin was that great unknown forest region of Louisiana. It was then a term in equity, save a few canoe landings and Indian trading posts on the river banks. It was known as the district of Louisiana and in 1805 was made the territory of Louisiana.

"The state of Franklin, which became Tennessee in 1796," we read as we little know. The now great city of Memphis was a mere trading post and was not laid out as a village until 1820.

Pelts were as plentiful in those days as pennies and much better circulating for purposes of currency and barter.

The Doctrine of Election.

When the late Senator Vance was running for congress he called on an old entered man who had in early life served that Vance family. Asked after his health, the former servant replied: "Bright pretty in this world, but it's all right over yonder."

"Do you believe in the doctrine of election?" asked Vance with great solemnity.

"Uncle Ephraim, do you think I've been elected?" asked Vance again.

"Marse Zeb, I'd a heap rather you wouldn't draw that question. I'm too near de grabe to tell a lie, but de Bible a power yet knowed nor hear tell of no man bein' elected what wa'nt a candidate."—Exchange.

The Origin of It.

"Senator," said the interviewer, "it is rumored that you intend to retire from politics."

"Well, well," replied the senator, "I'm never few rumors skirt. I suppose this one grew out of the fact that I attended church with my wife last Sunday."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Northern Michigan

Kalkaska was visited Thursday morning by the most disastrous fire in its history, eight store buildings being destroyed, nothing is here estimated at first hand from $40,000 to $50,000.

Petoskey News: Father Salanus Mollitor of the St. Francis mission, who has been charge of the Indian G'v church, has been transferred to Cleveland, Ohio, and Father Marcellus Hardman from St. Louis, Mo., will fill the vacancy caused thereby.

Boyne Citizen: Frank Borne, the well known wrestler, has returned from a trip through the East where he has been meeting all comers, and has been successful even beyond the most sanguine hopes of his many friends in this city. His trip financially was also very successful, and yesterday he purchased of Joel Johnston, the real estate dealer, a farm near Ironton. The farm will be worked this year by Frank and his wife and the place will be known as Burnaville. The farm runs to the shore to the lake and on his part of it, it is proposed to erect summer homes.

The Cadillac city council has decided to demand $1,000 license and $6,000 bonds of saloon keepers the coming year. The number will be limited in accordance with a special act governing this city, which the council believes had precedence over the new Warner Crampton act. While an opinion is awaited from the attorney general the council has decided that a certain location cannot be used as a saloon for the reason that it is within 100 feet of a church and would be considered a new saloon, although it was a saloon for many years previous to local option becoming effective here. The bar fixtures are still in the place.

Central Lake Torch: Simeon Gravatas Blow died on Thursday, March 17, at 8:20 o'clock a. m. at his home in Atwood. Funeral was held on Saturday at 10:00 a. m. from the M. E. church, Pastor Rev. George Birey officiating the services. He is buried in the Antrim cemetery to wait for the resurrection morn. Sim, as we all called him, was born November 10, 1850, in Ellenburg, Clinton Co., N. Y. He came to Michigan in the fall of 1857 with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Blow. He leaves an only Henry Blow and one brother, Newell, besides other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

On March 26th Congressman Diddle of Bedford, introduced in the House of Representatives, a bill to buy a site in Boyne City for a Federal building. The bill is H. R. No. 5268, and reads as follows: "A bill to provide for the acquiring of a site for a public building at Boyne City, Michigan. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation or otherwise, a suitable site for a public building at Boyne City, Charlevoix County, Michigan, the cost of said site not to exceed fifteen thousand dollars."

Boyne Journal: The one thing above all others that the citizens of Boyne City have constantly hoped, prayed and wished for, is a hotel, one that would properly supply the needs of a growing, bustling city of six or seven thousand people. The need for this has been of such a long standing that it has become chronic. The city has grown so fast in the past few years that it has outgrown the hotel accommodations, and it has seemed to have been almost impossible to get anybody interested in a hotel of the size required in this city. The Journal is glad to be able to announce today that Boyne City will before the summer is over have a modern brick hotel of at least thirty rooms capacity.

Lansing Special: Deputy Land Commissioner A. C. Carton has returned from a trip into the northern section of the lower peninsula and he states that the efforts to attract attention to that portion of the country and induce settlers to come there already is bringing wonderful results. Land values are going higher every day while farm buyers are appearing in many sections and are procuring lands on which they propose to establish either fruit farms or some lines of some other class of farming. Some owners of lands up there have withdrawn their holdings entirely from the market for the present, believing that they are sure of even higher prices. Everywhere, Mr. Carton reports, there are lumbermen looking at lands.

The old Brown Hotel, a landmark of Leland, was completely destroyed by fire one night last week. The burn was also destroyed a Adolph Huth and family, who used the building as a residence, had a narrow escape with their lives. The origin of the fire is not known. It starting in the wood shed and quickly striking into the main building. When discovered, it had made a start that the best users of the Huthardts was all in a blaze. Five children were sleeping upstairs and within they were scorned, fire was coming through cracks in the floor but they all got out safely. The Brown Hotel, operated by the late Hubert Brown, for many years, was one of the oldest buildings in the village, occupying one of the principal corners.

Traverse City Record: Grand Traverse county now has formally opened a local option campaign. The petitions will be submitted to the supervisors at the October meeting and the question will be voted upon at the April election in 1911. The work has been begun in earnest, and this time the temperance forces intend to leave nothing undone to prevent the question being submitted a second time. Petitions have been circulated and signed readily and the organization has been affected, the officers being elected. The local organization feels that by submitting the question in an "off year" that is when no mayor is elected, that question will be settled on its merits in the city and there will be no distracting influences. An active campaign will be carried on over the whole county and those interested are very sanguine of success of the movement.

Boyne Journal: Deputy State Warden Stanford is putting in his time now inspecting the dams in the streams and rivers of Northern Michigan. Wherever he finds conditions to warrant it he orders fish ladders built and purposes to do all in his power, within the law, to get the trout and other fish a chance to get up the streams. It is a well known fact that unless the fish can get to the head waters of the streams to spawn that the waters will soon be depopulated and the fishing completely ruined. He has already ordered ladders installed in Maple, Carp and Bear rivers, several in each, and has done the same at Boyne Falls and Pelston. He also expects to be obliged to order a large number more in various places. He will visit Elk Rapids, Kellogg, Street, Deward and Hickers dam on the Rapid River a short distance from Kalkaska. He also served notice on the Boyne River Power company today that an adequate ladder must be built at the power dam on Boyne River. Some of the owners of dams are inclined to refuse to comply with the orders and in some cases suits may be started by the state to compel them to do it. Stanford expects to cover every stream in his district and will show no favors.

"The defeat of local option in Wexford county was not due to a change of sentiment there on that question. More votes were cast for it than two years ago. Love was again, through out the county, too, in the total number of votes against the saloons, but the forceful power of an almost unlimited expenditure of money accomplished its purpose in Wexford county in spite of a resistless public sentiment and not because of it. There was an abrupt and unexpected increase of about 600 votes in our little city over the total vote on that question of two years ago. The normal gain in votes would not have been more than 100 within that period. Most of the persons responsible for this increase in votes, which was responsible for the result favorable to the return of the saloons, were not in Cadillac four weeks ago, and they are not today. More can be said as to that feature of the affair and more will be said when an investigation now in progress has been completed, but in the meantime it should not be said or thought that favor for local option has weakened in Wexford county."

Practical Grace.

The family were waiting at the breakfast table for the father to come and say grace before beginning the meal, and the four-year-old, growing hungry and impatient, said: "Let me say the blessing," and pitching her bread flat down on the table, began: "Now I lay me down to breakfast, we are all hungry. ENGLAND'S LIGHTHOUSES.

The lighthouse service of England is controlled by a board composed of the thirteen "elder brethren." When a vacancy occurs one of the "younger brethren" is selected by the "elder brethren" to fill it. The position is held for life unless forfeited for a year. Any commanding officer of the navy or master of the merchant marine is eligible for election as one of the younger brethren by the "elder brethren." There is no salary attached to the position, but they are eligible for election as one of the "elder brethren."

England is divided into seven lighhouse districts, each in charge of a superintendent. The superintendents are persons who enter the service as apprentices at the age of thirteen and have worked up to the position of master on board of a steam tender. They are selected for the position of superintendent by the "elder brethren." A superintendent has control of his district and its employees.

Lighkeepers are appointed for life between the ages of eighteen and twenty-eight. Their salaries are regulated according to length of service and not according to station. Lighkeepers as well as the other employees of the lighthouse service are pensioned when too old to perform duty. There is a regular lighhouse service, also for life, and the officers are selected from the men. The men enter between the ages of eighteen and twenty-eight. Unmarried men are preferred

ELECTION RESULTS IN SEVERAL STATES

Illinois Poll Shows That the Wets Have Regained All the Big Dry Centers.

SOCIALISTS WIN IN MILWAUKEE

Illinois.

"Wet" victories were recorded Tuesday in almost every important city of Illinois where the saloon question was at issue. In the checkbed "dry" strongholds of Hinckley, Sycamore, Ba Kalb, Bloom, Mattoon, Kellinburg, Shelbyville and a long list of other local option towns the anti-saloon forces were routed. In the saloon towns where the "drys" made their hardest fights—Springfield, Danville, Aurora, Bloomington, Woodstock, Freeport and others—the "wets" carried the day. In many cases by larger majorities than they obtained two years ago. The most important victories gained by the "drys" were at Normal and Kankakee, where the saloons were voted out. In the light of the election returns, Illinois plainly has spoken and meet on the saloon question since two years ago. In all parts of the State the prohibition swing from the dry to the wet sentiment has made itself manifest.

Wisconsin.

While on the face of the early returns neither the liquor people nor the drys had much to boast of, either gaining any considerable new ground, the drys carried the fight into wet territory and into large cities, compelling the wets to put in strong fights to hold their own. In Milwaukee Social Democrats made a clean sweep and elected their candidate for Mayor by a plurality of more than 8,000, seven Aldermen at large and carried fourteen wards. The Socialists will control the city for the next two years. Seidel's plurality is the largest of any party in a similar contest in the history of the city. The majority of the campaign this spring was that the platforms of the three parties were essentially the same, the Democratic and the Republican parties espousing Social Democratic principles like the referendum, the initiative and the recall and home rule for Milwaukee, all four of which were first espoused by the Socialists, at which time they were derided by the other parties.

Michigan.

In Michigan the total vote gives majorities for "wets" of 15,572 and for "drys" of 3,253, forcing "drys" to abandon plan to force vote on statewide prohibition. Complete returns on the local option election held in thirty-six counties show that twenty counties out of the thirty-six have decreed the abolition of the saloon for two years, while sixteen repudiated local option and declared for the licensed saloon. Two hundred and eighty-two third parders, of the 1,161 whose existence depended on the vote, were put out of business. The map of Michigan shows forty-three counties of the state in the "wet" column and forty where the saloon must go. It is this fact which satisfies the "wets" that Michigan will never go totally "dry" and which causes them to claim Tuesday's election to themselves. The "dry" counties are scattered over the lower peninsula, the upper being entirely "wet."

Nebraska.

Practically the only issue in the Nebraska municipal elections was the question of saloon license, and returns from fifty towns and villages in eastern and central sections of the state show no marked change from a year ago, the majorities, if anything, being slightly with the "wets." The notable story for the "wets" to consider was the capture of Havelock, the Burlington railroad shop town, outside of Lincoln city limits, which voted against license by 92 majority. Havelock the town, is one of the "dry" strongholds for Lincoln. Offsetting the "dry" victory at Havelock is the return of Beatrice to license after a year without saloons. The "dry" result in the Star, the prohibition swing from the dry to the wet sentiment has made itself manifest.

SWOPE POISONING CASE ON.

Kansas City Physician Accused of Killing the Millionaire.

Dr. H. C. Hyde appeared in the Criminal Court at Kansas City to answer a charge of murdering Colonel Thomas H. Swope, a millionaire philanthropist and uncle of the plaintiff, Colonel Swope died October 19, from a bichloride of mercury tablet, which certificate gave mercury as the cause of demise. Dr Hyde, the attending physician, is charged with the murder of the millionaire by administering strychnine to him in a capsule.

The motive for the alleged crime was the State, was to obtain wealth. By the terms of Colonel Swope's will, Mrs Hyde was to receive a share of her uncle's property and some money, dwindling to hasten the settlement of the estate, and also to prevent the making of certain changes in the will the colonel had planned. Dr. Hyde, the State will attempt to prove, killed the hard capitalist.

The indictment on which Dr. Hyde is being tried is for first-degree murder. Ten other indictments have been returned against the physician. One charges first-degree murder of Christian Swope, a nephew of Colonel Swope, by administering poison to him. An indictment for manslaughter was voted, accusing Dr. Hyde of unlawfully killing James Moss Hunton, a cousin of Colonel Swope, by bleeding him. The eight remaining indictments charge the physician with attempting to poison Messrs. and Mrs. Swope, Mildred Fox, Sarah Swope, George Swope, Mrs. Nelle Swope, Mrs. Swope, Margaret Swope and Lemora Corrigan. All these people were stricken by violent fever when it was prevalent in the Swope house, and it is averred Dr. Hyde caused their illness. No indictment but one relating to the death of Colonel Swope enters into the present case.

Starve to Death in Prison.

Mrs. H. E. Evans, who was arrested in Lynn, W. Va., and brought to Pikeville, Ky., to answer the charge of arson, died, having starved himself to death. She refused to eat or drink or to take medicine. Mrs. Evans' husband is said to live in St. Louis.

BLOW UP BANK; ROB; BANDITS IN HOT FIGHT

Later Three Men Are Captured, All Wounded, After Exciting Chase and Battle in Brush.

Five daring bandits, a sheriff and a large posse and a town marshal figured in a spectacular chase which resulted in the capture of three men following an explosion of nitroglycerin which destroyed the bank at Coal City, Ill., around the entire town and netted the fugitives almost $2,000 in money and stamps. The bandits entered the town on a passing freight train and began operations by tying Horace Gerlch, the night watchman, and Washington Fritz, the night engineer of the electrical plant.

They then blew up the bank building with a terrific charge of nitroglycerin and leaped on a westbound Santa Fe freight train with their plunder. Three hours later three men, believed to be of their atmosphere of the remote tall. They polat out that the earth passed through a comet's tail in 1861, and that no one observed anything unusual.

Although the principal astronomers of the world deprecate any idea of disaster attending the passage of the earth through the comet's tail, others, notably Flammarion, advance theories that instant death to all life on the earth will be the result of the contact of the planet with the luminous tail which trails some possible 100,000,000 miles behind the comet. If the worst does not happen—and all exact astronomers expect little disturbance—the spectacle of the comet in the evening sky from that time fill the end of the month will be one of such magnifispeeding freight train and shots were fired at dark objects which were thought to resemble the bandits. When at last the train came to a stop at Verona the cars were searched by the sheriff and posse. In an empty baggage car of the train were found three of the bandits. All three were wounded and their comrades had fled. Of the four men were captured later at Joliet.

VOTES TWO BATTLE SHIPS.

House, by 162 to 110, Orders War Craft to Cost $6,000,000 Each.

The naval appropriation bill carrying $125,977,000 and providing for two battleships was passed by the National House of Representatives the other day by the decisive vote of 162 to 110. The ships are to cost $6,000,000 each. Thirty-three Democrats voted for the two battleships and twenty-four Republicans against the proposition. In addition to the battleships the bill also provides for the construction of two fleet colliers and four submarine boats. As amended on motion of Mr. Fitzgerald of New York, the two battleships and two fleet colliers must be constructed by firms operating under the eight-hour law.

The committee on naval affairs had reported in favor of authorizing two battleships. Mr. Tawney of Minnesota, chairman of the appropriations committee, offered an amendment providing for one battleship instead. Mr. Hobson proposed an amendment providing for two battleships. He contended that three battleships would give us superiority over any navy, not only for the ordinary depredations in the naval force. By an almost unanimous vote the House rejected this proposition.

WOMAN REVEALS COAL STEAL.

Stenographer Exposes Plot Which Stirs Indianapolis.

After a desperate battle of conflicting emotions, the instinct of self-preservation and a sense of honesty, a struggle continuing for almost a year, Mrs. Jeannette Florence Stern, formerly of Chicago, a stenographer in the employ of the Jellico Coal Company, 4630 Indiana avenue, Indianapolis, yielded to her better promptings, as she thinks, and has given to the police startling information, which has already resulted in the arrest of six men; said to be involved in the most gigantic coal graft scheme in the history of Indiana. Six big coal companies are concerned in the alleged steals.

A searching detective campaign of a year came to an end in the offices of Superintendent of Police Hyland when Mrs. Stern confronted each of the six men arrested and accused them directly of conspiring to rob Henry Lawrence, superintendent of the Claypool Hotel; W. E. English, proprietor of the Hotel English, and the city of Indianapolis, besides several other corporations in the city, in the coal trade in weight many thousands of pounds. One by one, the men were compelled to face the woman who looked up a history of policemen and detectives, finally causes them to quail and confess.

REHEARING IN TRUST CASES.

New Arguments Ordered in Standard Oil and Tobacco Suits.

The Supreme Court of the United States has consigned for argument the cases of the United States against the American Tobacco Company and the Standard Oil Company. The argument of these cases comes as the direct result of the death of Justice Harlan, the ancient jurist died just a few days after the Standard Oil case had been argued. As Justice Moody, one is the fact that an attorney General he had directed the suits, was unable to participate in the consideration of these cases, only seven justices were left to give a decision.

How the court was divided in regard to the decision is a matter of still so much a mystery as before the assignment of the cases for reargument. It is believed, however, that the court was evenly divided on almost, so, as was it probable was loath to give to the country a decision which was not supported by a majority of a full court. Such a majority would be five members.

The fact that the corporation tax cases were not set for reargument is taken to mean that a decision will be announced in regard to the constitutionality of the law authorizing it with in a short time.

HALLEY COMET DRAWING NEAR

Earth Will Pass Through Tail of Traveler May 18.

Halley's comet, coming toward the earth's orbit at a rate of nearly 2,000,000 miles a day, is rapidly approaching the point where it will be observable in the sky again, reappearing from behind the sun where it had been obscured since March 26. On account of its position to the right of the sun the comet will soon be visible in the morning sky before sunrise, when any observer who has the desire to arise before the sun will see Halley's comet, then about 12,000,000 miles from the earth, a brilliant spectacle in the skies of dawn.

On the 20th of April Halley's comet will be at its nearest point to the sun and will therefore be at its brightest, as its brilliancy corresponds with its nearness to the sun. But since the comet keeps coming closer to the earth until May 18, it will seem more brilliant to us after that date, when it will be visible in the evening sky. On the 18th of May the earth will pass through the tail of Halley's comet. What will happen in that case? The comet itself will be 12,000,000 miles from us, the nearest approach of any heavenly body to the earth except the asteroid Eros.

Prof. Ejnelr Hrand Frost, director of Yerkes observatory, has already determined by means of the spectroscope that the comet's tail has cyanogen gas as it predominant element. This discovery has led to the theory that the earth will be devasted by the poisonous vapors of the gas, a theory discredited by Professors Frost and Harnard because of the exceedingly attenuated atmosphere of the comet's tail. They point out that the earth passed through a comet's tail in 1861, and that no one observed anything unusual.

Although the principal astronomers of the world deprecate any idea of disaster attending the passage of the earth through the comet's tail, others, notably Flammarion, advance theories that instant death to all life on the earth will be the result of the contact of the planet with the luminous tail which trails some possible 100,000,000 miles behind the comet. If the worst does not happen—and all exact astronomers expect little disturbance—the spectacle of the comet in the evening sky from that time fill the end of the month will be one of such magnifi-

AT PEACE ON TARIFF WITH ALL THE WORLD

FEARS OF DUTY WAR GONE.

Canadian Settlement, Made on Slight Concessions by Dominion, Does Away with Last Hitch.

The word of the President giving to Canada the minimum tariff rates under the Payne bill puts the United States on a basis of trade peace with the world, writes a Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. The commercial concessions that have been made to this country have not been all that it was hoped they would be, but they have been sufficient in number to remove some of the appearance of sharp discrimination and to enable the administration to assert that all nations shall be admitted to trade with us on equal terms. It is the belief in Washington that the present maximum and minimum schedules of our tariff will be kept in the high water stage of protection, and that when, as it undoubtedly will be, the United States will have better terms to offer other nations in return for concessions to us.

For months there has been fear that this country would be forced into commercial wars with other countries which would be disastrous to our trade, to the business interests of the United States. A study of what the other countries had to offer us and what we had to offer them, it is only proper and fair to say, has convinced the commercial conflict.

By the terms of the Payne-Aldrich law March 31 was set as the date on which the President must declare the maximum rates in effect against any country which had made discriminations against us in tariff rates. Rates by one the different countries of the world admitted the United States to the list of favored nations, or made concessions which it believed would insure the coming country the right to ship its goods to American ports with the certainty that the minimum rates would apply. Canada held out until the last. Finally she made a few concessions, not enough to save this country from humiliation, but enough to save the situation and to say trade peace with the world is a fact.

Trade Arrangements Ended.

Under the provisions of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law various commercial trade arrangements with France, Germany, Portugal, Italy and one or two other countries were abrogated. Every nation was given the general tariff rates which, in the case of

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR

The East Jordan Fruit Growers' Meeting.

About forty farmers and fruit growers attended the special meeting of the Association held in East Jordan on Saturday.

Prof. Taft of Lansing gave a very helpful address on the subject, "Raising Good Fruit."

He reviewed at some length the somewhat general opinion that the fruit business might be overdone Said that statistics showed that the acreage of apple orchards had almost doubled in the last few years yet in spite of this fact the demand for really good fruit was steadily increasing.

He emphasized the fact that we are raising altogether too much poor fruit. He says that he knows from experience that Michigan can raise as good fruit as any state in the union yet the fact remains that Michigan apples are not sought in the markets and this is due largely to the fact that packers have been in the habit of facing barrels with good fruit and filling the centers with culls.

There was some general discussion by the farmers as to the best means of preventing this practice which is surely killing the market for Michigan apples and several suggestions were made such as packing in smaller packages, labeling, etc, but we think that Mr. Taft gave the best solution of the problem. He said, and it is surely true, that so long as poor apples were raised they would be packed and would hurt the market and that as soon as the growers began to raise nothing but good apples that packers would stop packing poor ones.

He said that Michigan can grow good apples for less money per bushel than it costs some of the western growers to get theirs to market and that because of the expense in getting to market the western grower was forced to produce an article that would command the very highest price when it reached the market.

These facts surely ought to set our growers to thinking and with such facilities as are natural to Northern Michigan, the growers here by giving the business the same care and study can certainly outdo our western neighbors.

Mr. Taft did not give much time to the subject of spraying as an exhaustive paper delivered by him before the State Horticultural Society appeared in the report of the Society, a copy of which was given to each one present.

He says that he has found that the lime sulphur solution will take the place of the Bordeaux mixture and that he is using it this year and advises farmers to use it on account of the fact that it is easier to apply and costs no more.

If Bordeaux mixture is used he warns farmers to be sure that it is fresh as it very soon becomes stale and practically useless if allowed to stand exposed to the air.

He says that it will lose its value in a very few days therefore the farmer who buys it is very likely to spend his time and money in applying something that has lost its value by being exposed.

He gives this as his reason for using the lime sulphur instead of the Bordeaux.

He says that we have no trouble in managing any of the insects or diseases that are here. We have no such things to combat as the Aphis, a leaf louse or the Twig Blight, two of the most troublesome things the western grower has to combat and that if the western grower can overcome what we have and also these two worse ones there is no good excuse for a Michigan grower producing fruit of poor quality.

Mr. Taft says that by careful cultivating the young tree can be made to produce several years sooner than if allowed to grow at its own rate.

He urges growers to be careful about cropping orchards without returning some fertilization to the soil.

Says that clover and alfalfa are splendid crop to use in a young orchard and that a clover or alfalfa mulch is a splendid thing as these crops contain a large amount of the plant foods that the young tree needs.

He also urged care in the matter of producing a late growth that would winter kill.

Barnyard manure will take the place of fertilizer but advises the use of commercial fertilizer if the manure is not at hand.

He advises the use of about one pound per tree of some good orchard fertilizer, recipes for which can be secured from any Horticulture report.

He advises that the ingredients be bought and mixed at home.

He gives as the results of the use of fertilizer a better wood growth, stronger buds, better tree trunks and helps trees to hold crop in case of wind storms.

The matter of trimming trees was given some attention. Mr. Taft favors the method of trimming for low heads.

Says he will start the heads from two to three feet from the ground and would go even lower than that were it not for the fact that he feared the deep snows might injure the branches.

He will trim well back when setting, leaving perhaps five branches at first and trim later to three or at most four of the best branches.

Space will not permit mention of all of the good points made by Mr. Taft. Among others things he made mention of the fact that some Fennville growers had received from six to ten dollars a barrel for their apples because they had taken proper care of them and produced really good ones.

This is another proof that the grower who will use his head in the work as well as his hands need not fear that he will have no market for his crop.

Many farmers really know a good deal more about raising fruit than they will put into practice.

A number in this community are buying spray materials this spring and we are of the opinion that the amount of poor fruit packed will be less from year to year.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Charlevoix on the first Tuesday in June.

Thinning and cultivating will be discussed at that meeting.

All members are urged to attend and to invite their neighbors to attend and become members.

Respectfully,
J. H. MILFORD, Sec'y.

How They Look At It.

There will be general interest in knowing how the vote in the counties of Michigan last week for and against the saloon is regarded by those who did not take any part in the contest and who therefore are in good position to judge as to what it indicated.

The review and summing up of the local option elections results by The Detroit Times well presents the opinion and judgment of the non-participant.

Here is what the Detroit paper said of the election and the situation it created:

"Thirty-six counties in Michigan voted on Monday on the question of local option.

"Of these counties the drys carried 20.

"The wets, however, are claiming a victory, basing that claim upon the fact that in the 16 counties carried by them there are 979 saloons, while the number of saloons closed in the counties which voted dry is only 282.

"We doubt if there is proper basis for any comparison that will lead to their conclusion.

"Barry county, Clinton, Midland, Missaukee, Oceana, Osceola, St. Joseph and Van Buren eight of the counties and nearly half of those voting against the saloon, were already dry and had no saloons to be closed by the vote.

"Oakland and Wexford were the only dry counties to vote themselves back into the wet column.

"While the wets took two counties away from the drys, the drys took 12 from the wets, which doesn't indicate exactly a wet victory nor anything like a reversal of public sentiment over the state at large.

"Taking into account the saloons already closed in previous elections, which could not figure in this year's victory of the drys, and leaving out the big city vote in Grand Rapids, there is no occasion for red fire on the part of the saloon element.

"Since the anti-saloon wave struck Michigan steady progress has been made and there is real cause for optimism on the part of the drys that the number of counties that do not want the saloons is now 40 as against 30 one year ago.

Michigan Financially Sound.

Indisputable evidence that the state is in a prosperous condition is shown by the fact that the business in the office of the secretary of state increased nearly $17,000 in March, 1910 over the receipts of a year ago in that department.

Secretary of State Martindale claims that the receipts for last month amounted to more than $25,000. This is not due alone to the fact that the automobile licenses are being distributed in large numbers every day but the number of new companies filing articles of incorporation has materially increased the receipts in the state office. At least 250 articles of incorporation were recorded during the month of March and the franchise fees varied from 50 cents to $2,000.

Auto licenses are being distributed as fast as the large force of additional clerks can prepare them for mailing. Since the first of the year 9,700 licenses have been issued and 369 licenses for motorcycles have been sent from the department. Chauffeurs are compelled to pay a license fee of $2 and so far 1,265 drivers have complied with the new law. The auto license retail for $3.

Secretary of State Martindale estimated that before the close of the year 15,000 licenses will have been issued by his department, and some dealers claim that owing to the rapid sale of the gasoline wagons in Michigan the number will go considerably over Martindale's figures.

The change will probably not be made until the close of navigation.

—Twelve millions of whitefish have been planted in Lakes Superior and Huron this spring, and later eight millions of the same species and five millions of lake trout will be planted in the same water. While these fish were hatched at the Soo station, the work of planting is done under the direction and at the expe[illegible] of the United States bureau of fi[illegible].

—Winter certainly "lingers in the lap of spring" for the past [illegible], but, so far as we are concerned, we have the satisfaction of knowning that the weather was worse in Chicago and southern Michigan than it was here. It snowed all day Saturday in Chicago, while the most we got here was a few flurries that did not whiten the ground. But it was cold and disagreeable, and the winter overcoats were very much in evidence.

—Down at Cadillac, according to the Evening News of that City, two men make a jackpot of their available cash, and sent it to a booze dispensary for a supply of whiskey. The wife of one of them learned of the affair, and wrote to the whiskey house protesting, and told them of the hard condition of the family, and the result is that the money was returned to the woman, while the husband still calls daily at the express office for his o be joyful, which never came. Now that is as it should be, but the News declares that as a result, the woman and her children are all warmly clad.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Burnett have been spending several days in Cross Village.

—Mrs. O. A. Sears is home again from her trip to Cleveland, St. Louis and Chicago.

—Joseph R. Cooper, who is engaged in lumbering in the upper peninsula, joined his family here over Sunday.

—The lighthouse department has planted a spar buoy in two fathoms of water on the reef off fishermen's Island, just southwest of this port.

—Forrest L. Bartholomew, of Chicago, was in town Saturday for a short time, on business in connection with VanPelt's building operations.

—The Congregational church held a vesper service at 5 o'clock last Sunday evening instead of the usual evening service. The change seems to work well, and the five o'clock vesper service will be continued until notice is given to the contrary.

—Tom Marks, the distinguished Irish comedian, and his excellent company, is playing all this week at the Majestic Theatre. Charlevoix is rarely ever favored with a comedy aggregation of greater merit than the Marks' company. Mr. Marks is distinctly a star in his line of work, and he has a support that is worthy of him.

—It is estimated that on the tenth of May the state treasurer will pay out about $3,850,000 in primary school money and there is a possibility that the figures will reach considerably over that amount. At present there is only $987,000 in the primary fund but according to state officials this amount will reach $4,000,000 by May 10th.

—Geo. R. Green, chief clerk in the Charlevoix office of the Booth Fisheries Co, lies in the Petoskey hospital in a very serious condition. Mr. Green has been a great sufferer from chronic stomach trouble, and an operation was decided on. With that end in view he was taken to Petoskey. A partial operation disclosed the fact that the stomach was badly ulcerated, and that any further heroic surgical treatment would be immediately hazardous.

—Land Commissioner Huntley Russell has a new scheme for booming the upper counties of the state. He proposes that the public domain commission shall set aside in each county 40 acres of state reserve land, to be turned over to horticulturalists for experimental orchards, where the farmers of that county can be shown how to plant and care for frui' trees, spray the trees and make fruit growing a profitable investment. He says that he knows of no way in which these state lands can be put to better use and adds that prominent men of the state are interested in the proposition.

—Governor Warner has issued the annual Arbor Day proclamation, fixing Friday, April 29, as the day on which the people of this state shall plant a tree or in some other way do something towards beautifying the state. In part the proclamation says: "The increasing importance of this day and its observance is urged upon our citizens. 'Plant a tree' should be the watchword of everyone fortunate enough to own a portion of Michigan's fertile soil. The home and farm, the parks and the highways of our state should bear evidence in the years to come that their future beauty and utility were kept in mind by those in whom their stewardship has been placed. We owe this to posterity, but we will not have to wait beyond our own time for the reward. A love for natute, for the shrubs, flowers and trees should be inculcated in the youth of our land and there should be a program arranged for every school for Arbor Day with this end in view. The planting of the trees and the sowing of the seed should be followed by exercises that will make the day distinctive in the lesson that it teaches."

Senator Burrows and the Beet Sugar Industry.

The beet sugar industry has made wonderful strides in this state during the past few years. Much of the success attained is due to Senator Burrows' enterprising generalship in leading the forces in Congress interested in the welfare of this infant industry. For several years Mr. Burrows has worked in season and out of season for such a sugar schedule as would encourage capital to develop this industry in Michigan. With what success? Michigan now has 16 beet sugar factories, representing an investment of over $10,000,000. Over 80,000 acres of land are devoted to raising this profitable crop. The yearly sales of the finished product bring $8,500,000 into the state—one half of that amount finds its way into the pockets of the farmers who are engaged in growing beets. The beet sugar industry has not yet attained its full growth. It is destined to be one of the greatest and most profitable lines of business ever known in the history of Michigan, if nothing happens to retard its success. Michigan cannot afford at this time to retire her veteran senator. Mr. Burrows is experienced and resourceful, hale and hearty, full of mental and physical vigor, and during the next few years can do more to foster the growth of the beet sugar business than a younger inexperienced man, no matter how staunch a friend he might wish to be of the beet sugar industry.

Phillip Morse.

Deceased was born in the township of Climax, county of Calhoun, and within 3 miles of Battle Creek, state of Michigan, Jan. 19th 1847.

When about two years old his parents moved to Allegan county, on the banks of Green Lake. He became crippled through sickness at the age of four years which resulted in permanent lameness.

At the age of 19 years, while driving a team they became unmanagable, running away, throwing out the occupants, and hurting the spine of the driver, which compelled him to walk with crutches the remainder of his life.

Later he went through to Kansas with an emigrant train, of about 35 wagons, which was the only way of conveyence at that time. This was in the year of 1859, returning in 1860 to Barry county Michigan.

In the summer of 1868 he was married to Alice Jane Barton of Hasting, Barry county Michigan to whom two children were born, William Sherman and Mary Pearl, of which both are living near Charlevoix.

Later having lost his help mate in 1879, he moved to Union City, Branch county taking with him his two children and remained there till 1883 where he again moved to Antrim county near Eastport.

Later he moved to Charlevoix in 1888 and has remained there until death took him home. Besides his son and daughter, he leaves two brothers, John U. of Central Lake and Daniel of Kalamazoo, also his grandson, William S. Stinson who has made a home with him, and cared for him, as tenderly as might a son, for the last 15 years.

—C. C. Keller, deputy superintendent of public instruction has compiled figures on the disposal of primary school funds, which he says show the present method of apportioning to be absolutely unjust and inequitable. In 1908, he says that 1054 districts had enough of this money to their credit to pay their teachers for two years, while a thousandless populous districts are getting practically no benefit from the fund. Westphalia township, Clinton county, has enough balance on hand to pay its teachers for 23 years,

The Tax Commission.

Attorney General Bird furnished an opinion to the state tax commission today holding that the commission has power to review assessments generally, upon its own initiative. The opinion was written upon the request of the commission for a construction of the advalorem tax law as amended by the Copley act passed by the legislature of 1909.

This construction of the law restoring to the commission its original power to increase or lower general assessments without waiting for any complaint to be filed is most important. The corporation assessed under the advalorem system are threatening an attack upon the rate at which their properties are taxed. They charge the rate is exorbitant in consequence of general property being assessed below its cash value and because the commission has no power to interfere except complaint was filed.

Local assessing officers opposed the law when in its original form it gave the commissioners power to act upon their own initiative in reviewing assessments and induced the legislature to repeal it.

The attorney general holds, however, that the amendment by the last legislature again gives the commission authority to go out into assessing districts and investigate the valuation placed on general property and order it raised or decreased.

High School Athletics and a Chicken Feast.

Saturday, April 30, is to be a big day for the local high school and citizens of Charlevoix. At 3:15 the high school base ball teams open the season by crossing bats with its arch enemy, Petoskey high school, and immediately following the game the whole high school will give a chicken pie supper at the Bank hall.

The base ball team has been practicing faithfully for a month, and, despite the fact that they were defeated in the initial contest with Harbor Springs last Saturday, they promise to make Charlevoix people happy and Petoskey correspondingly sad over the results of the game. Under no circumstances will they cast a gloom over the big supper, for in order to enjoy a big feast, one must be happy and the team must contribute their share to this feature.

Incidentally, it might be well to mention that the local boys are out after the championship of the North again this year. Last year Charlevoix base ball stock went soaring because of the magnificent way in which the boys won the championship of the North and prospects are indeed bright for a repetition of the feat this year.

Of last year's team, six are in school and enough good material has shown up to insure a winning team. The team has two good pitchers in J. Powers and W. Poole, a good catcher in J. Krulik, a well rounded infield in L. Powers, R. Bridge, L. Hamlin, and H. Wallace. The out field is strong with W. Mitchell, L. Cram, J. Gaskins, G. Papineau and either J. Powers or Poole.

County Normal Notes.

Miss Sophia Matson, class of '05, who is teaching in the north ward school, visited the normal Thursday morning, April 21st.

Miss Vera Nowland visited the normal Thursday afternoon, April 21st.

The housekeepers for the week beginning April 27, are Georgia Redfield and Bessie Marlindale. The editors for the same week are Bertha McCalmon and Georgia Scroggle.

The class was given a holiday Friday, April 22, and in the evening the class accompanied by Miss Himes attended a program and social given by the school in Maple grove.

The normal class accompanied by Miss Himes attended the social given by the Maple Grove school at the Maple Grove Grange Hall. All report an enjoyable evening.

THE RETAIL MERCHANTS

The Local Association Will Hold its Annual Banquet May 4th—Will Entertain the Gubernatorial Aggregation.

The notice is given that the Charlevoix Retail Merchants' Association will precipitate its annual banquet at Baker's Inn at nine o'clock Wednesday evening, May 4th. There will be present as guests of the Association the three surviving candidates for governor—Osborn, Kelly and Musselman. We give them in the order of their seniority. All have signified their intention to be present.

This latter fact warrants us in saying that the occasion will have a lurid political complexion. But, we are also safe in saying that, so far as the hosts are concerned, partisanship will have no place at the banquet table. Hospitality will reign supreme, and eloquence will drown the din of the harbor sirens.

Members of the association are graciously permitted to bring their wives. To those not member tickets will be on sale up to Tuesday noon at Chapel's. At 7:30 p. m. on the evening of the 4th, the republican city committee will give a reception in honor of the distinguished guests at Bank Hall, to which everybody is invited.

Charlevoix has never before been honored by the presence of more than one gubernatorial candidate at one time, and the event should be made one of unbounded success.

Pomona Grange

The ideal Spring weather prevailing April 21, brought with it such a rush of farm work that many Patrons were prevented from attending one of the most enthusiastic Pomona meetings ever held in our county. The attendance however, was good, eight granges being represented.

The lecturer's program proved in all its parts, a very strong feature of the session, some of the discussions reaching a very high and inspiring plan of thought. This was particularly true where the discussion related to improvement of the home, the school and the grange. These topics were handled by Worthy Master Meare, E. S. Stacks John Jones, Mrs. E. J. Creyts, and others in a most thorough and earnest manner. In the evening, State Speaker, Mrs. E. J. Creyts, of Lansing, delivered a most excellent address on "Opportunity".

Permanent committees for the present term were appointed as follows: Finance; B. C. Barber, John Jones and E. S. Brintnall. Fifth Degree Membership; Miss Minnie McGeorge, Mrs. Mary Poquette and Miss Ursula Crawford. By Laws; Lozell Heaton, Peter Knudsen and H. L. Willson. The Fifth Degree was conferred on seven applicants, Bro. Glenn DuBois, ably presiding as Worthy Master during the history work.

It was decided to make an agricultural exhibit at next annual session of Mich. State Grange, and all Patrons in the county are urged to unite in making this exhibit an unrivalled success. Owing to lack of time, action on report of Spec. Com. on By-Laws, was deferred until next meeting. A careful investigation of the reports of thirteen granges disclosed the fact that Deer Lake Grange was again in the lead with a score of 310 points and that Ironton was again a close second with a score of 260. Deer Lake Grange was accordingly declared the Banner Grange of the county for the 2nd Qr.

By unanimous vote, the grange expressed satisfaction with present conditions existing under Local Option, as compared with previous conditions, and adopted a resolution urging all friends of Local Option, not to sign any petition for re-submission of the question, to be submitted to the Supervisors at their Annual Session in October; expressing the belief that by so refusing they can save a large expense to tax payers and others, in money and time, and that longer time than two years is needed to make a complete and satisfactory test of Local Option. The hospitality and entertainment extended to the visiting granges by the local grange was highly commendable. The next meeting will be held with Ironton Grange, June 28.

R. A. BRINTNALL, Sec'y.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Charlevoix county, on the republican ticket at the primary election to be held Tuesday, Sept. 6, 1910.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Your story is very strange," said the middle-aged man, with a thoughtful look in his intelligent face, the director of Bacteriologist, had been engaged in the death chamber of Sarah Jane and theft of a good fully. Major Jem wanted had to provide evidence against the prisoner and David Jones to weight as he had to obtain material for the defence. The difficulty taken up by Mr. Jones, Major Jem was unfortunately cool.

After this memorable interview it the Major David Jones was arrested and arraigned. After that case, his prisoner's counsel, Mr. Jones, was called and said to Major Jem alone with the counsel for the prosecution, the request of Blackley carriage, had died soon, in the indigent Jim, who had left to kept silence, caused his hand upon Jem's shoulder.

"Well guy," he said in an his voice to his client, "you are in a fix, you blackguards this year, eh?"

"I am certain of all save one," replied Arkel in a disconsolate tone "and that I shall be able to get over."

"I should think so. Simply because he is the friend of the Voodoo Stone. The only chance of setting the express confession of the truth is for either you or I to gain possession of that stone."

"Where is it?"

"David carries it on his watch chain. I saw him the other day in London, and he showed it to me. A common little black stone it is, but he has sworn it is the very pleasure to get it."

"Kill Blackley," ejaculated Jem. There after a pause, he added, "I believe you are right, Arkel. I shall be down himself above anent, but the stone I must have. Blackley and you go to Bermuda Islands to spend against Jem."

"The Major went at once to "The Wigwam." Arkel remarking all his preparations in spite of the tears and impatience of his wife. The urgent pressing only declined to say a word against the Great Stone.

"While at his own house Voodoo Stone, the authoritative." she said to her husband, "I shall be in the position that all failed to move her.

"Why should you?" said the Voodoo Stone, "you are not the woman."

"Yes," cried Mrs. Dallas, exasperated by this obstinacy.

"Ah, if I had a fair Voodoo Stone, I be great, great—the queen of the delirium. But he only laughed.

"Wife and son for Blackley and tell him to go to Bermuda." he said to her, "and tell him I shall be down in a few days." Arkel, who was both in tears, she left the room. In the afternoon the Major was at home, and with Mrs. Dallas and Lady Jem, the conclusion that she was had to avoid being forced into going to Bermuda, and Major Jem, who was one another's crime, and were be-

CHAPTER XXII.

Naturally, the tragic end of the accused for the murder created a great sensation. The trial was brought to an abrupt conclusion, and the body of the dead man taken to the residence of Major Jem. Of course, the prisoner was found guilty, the confession sacred by him, and which was subsequently the means of that which he had made in court. Of course, Dr. Blackley was set at liberty on the charge of murder.

Wherever he appeared he was hailed as though nothing had happened. Mrs. Dallas and Isabella came back to "The Wigwam," but without Dido. On the day of the trial Dido mentioned to a tragic a manner the negress disappeared, and with her the famous Voodoo Stone.

"I wish I could have caught her," said Arkel to Major Jem. "She committed perjury in order to get it. Mr. Blackley, I shall be very much hanged, if she ought to be a Voodoo Stone." Major Jem, whose face is better a little after, Major." Jem, "Dido is a very old and shrewd woman, agreed with a and shake of the head.

"My poor lady," said he, in a voice of compassion, "I know that it is the only thing you have them both in this world."

"What?" cried Arkel, in surprise "Do you still Mr. Jem?"

"Why not" answered the Major, quietly. "To my mind be people would pity than pass Mourner. The but was stolen, and by Dido; and he was marked on by Dido to commit the crime. The crime of all these troubles but, however, is not Dr. Blackley, at that black witch. I wish she could be found.

Dido was never caught. She was never seen more. The police, in the interest of being hands on her. Like a point side themselves with terror. All the people of Dido's Blackley's residence, Blackley in fell upon their innocent heads.

"Still, there is hope," said Blackley. "We will speak to Major Jem, and ask him to send the poster after this wonderful woman.

This matter was at once acted upon, and a messenger was sent to "Admiralty." but the ship was from home and it was not till 6 o'clock that the intelligent black in "The Times" and heard the story of Dido's flight. "Dido is a very old woman," said Jem, hopefully, "I saw her in London, and thought she look some there with a message from you that even if we had found her into the loss of Dido, it is impossible to get it back.

"Why did she not come in?" asked Jem, coldly, for he did not feel very amiable disposed towards the white lady. "She is a strange girl, and the events of the last few weeks have shaken her mind.

"They have shaken mine," retorted Jem, sharply. "But to return to these things, Mrs. Dallas. May I ask you how you came to this city?"

"To tell you that we are going away, have to Barbados," replied Mrs. Dallas, with a sigh. "Yes, Major, after what has happened to us, I can stay no longer in America. I shall sell my house and have for the West Indies with my daughter within the month.

"I think it is the best thing you can do," said Jem, heavily.

GENTLEMEN OF OLD SCHOOL.

Some Observations About a Type Existing a generation Ago.

Not very long ago there was a dapper old gentleman at Boodle years who, having published in his youth a famous bachelor book that remained in wide demand even to this day, used to call frequently at his publishers, on matters of business, Harper's Weekly says. Although his face was furrowed by the years, and had lost of great age and his carriage was a little jerky in the nature of its springiness, he was, nevertheless, clad upon these occasions in the latest fashion of a been absent town. His clothes were not plain, they really were perfect of having a pattern—was it A invisible cross or pane—and trousers were cut and generally high in back; his neckties were not those of a man of Should and over his trousers shoes he wore light tan gaiters. The crowning glory of his garb was a tall silk hat, very glossy, very upon an ancient rule—was the extreme of fashion. Upon his head it rested it with a low hole to some fashion. A gallant gentleman, who declined to surrender to age and was only surprised by Dido's assertion that iron necessity of our human face.

The society of which he was a president has passed. Thirty men of his day regarded women as the fair sex, with all which the words imply; they cherished them, not as something too good for human nature's daily food, and they even wrote verses to them in an old book which contained "hearts fragrance," "modest eyes," "bashful sweetness" and the like, and in such a chirography! Theirs was not the handwriting of our contemporary "business men"; it had an almost feminine delicacy and a precision which is now supplied only by the typewriting machine.

There were many specimens of this verse and this chirography of 1828 in an old book which Dido found by chance late the hands of the Weekly—one of those autograph albums bound in red leather and lavishly tooled in gilt, which were owned by the young ladies of the period, and which is whose pages were embalmed the sentimental addresses of their admirers.

Quite civilized in tone, tender in spirit, with no hint of the young men of 1828 who were not ashamed to write a copy of verses in their ladies' albums? Contemporaneous gentlemen, armored in the gaiety and annalists of the motor car, might be inclined to sneer at them, but the record of world's achievement in the work of the world war at least, has impression in 1828 as it is now. Auto tours, motor mouse, but the world moves 28 more or less the same.

Her Hired Help.

At Cumberland, Md., the colored servants, as a class, go to their own houses at night. The cook in the family of the Episcopalian clergyman not only does this, but of late has frequently arrived at the rectory too late to cook breakfast. Hence her mistress has had to get the cook breakfast herself, and the rector's wife has been obliged to do the work of a suffragette in her wages. Drink (evasively asserted to be the cause) is the cause of the trouble. The rector's wife is the author of the following dialogue, which was given in the Cumberland Times:

"Dinah, I do wish you would be more punctual in the morning. I have to get breakfast myself and I can never get it ready. Can I depend on you?"

"Yes, Mahsa, I will be there."

A ROUMANIAN LEGEND

The Tragedy From Which Sprang Manolli's Welt.

A WEIRD TALE OF OLDEN DAYS

Neither Fate Nor Flood Nor Hurricane Could Keep the Faithful Amiker From the Man She Loved and From Her Horrible Doom.

Tradition is not history, but it serves to fill in the gaps left by the chroniclers of olden time and throws a light sometimes a lurid one—upon the manners and customs of bygone ages. A dark deed cruel enough to be remembered even in a cruel age is repeated from father to son, each generation adding its touch of superstitious marvel to the story till it proves into the fairy tale of today, without, yet nor without a kernel of truth.

Among the picturesque peasantry of Roumania flagers never a week tale of olden time. One such legend is related concerning an ancient monastery, the remains of which are still to be seen on a wooded hillside. Beneath the weird walls lie nine great images of granite, and among these rocks rises a spring of clear water, called by the peasants "Manolli's well" and believed by them to have a strange and wonderful origin.

Once upon a time, we are told, a Roumanian noble named Negen was a captive in the hands of Selim, the sultan of Turkey. During his exile Negen employed his time in studying architecture, and, possessing considerable talent, he undertook to superintend the building of a celebrated mosque. Charmed by the beauty of the building, the sultan granted Prince Negen his liberty and permission to carry back to his native land certain costly materials similar to those used in beautifying the mosque.

Accompanied by other nobles and masons Negen returned to Roumania, resolved to immortalize his name by building there a religious house such as had never before been seen.

The site chosen, the builders set to work under his orders, but their labor was in vain, for every night evil spirits pulled down what had been erected during the day.

One night Manolli, the chief of the builders, had a strange dream. A mysterious voice warned him that the building they had undertaken would never be reared unless they built into the walls the living form of the first woman who appeared at break of day.

On awaking from sleep Manolli told his comrades of this vision, and together they made a solemn vow to sacrifice that first woman, maid or matron, who appeared the next morning.

With the first streak of dawn Manolli mounted the scaffolding and scanned the surrounding hills with joyful anxious face. Alas, who is it he sees in the distance? His own fair young wife, bringing food and wine for her lord.

Then Manolli threw himself upon his knees and brought heaven to send a flood to prevent her from coming, and at once the rain poured down, and the river rose so that a waste of water covered the valley. But the young wife waded through the water, and Manolli in despair beheld her still approaching.

Again he prayed, and a fierce hurricane swept over the mountains, leveling trees and hurling rocks in the way. Yet on she came. Another had a brave spirit, and neither food nor water could keep her from the master loved.

Joyfully the masons received her, but Manolli's face was pale and stricken with sorrow.

They led the young wife to a niche in the newly built wall and told her to stand there for a time, while they retailed to build her in. At first she laughed merrily and entered into the jest, but her smiles vanished as quickly as they came when notes as low and from knee to waist. Dear Amiker's entreaties and cries did not move the hearts of these stern builders, and soon her voice was heard no more.

The prophetic vision proved true. The building suffered no more from lightning flash and storm, and Manolli felt the pride of Negen's heart. Manolli alone took no pleasure in the old fane which had cost him so dear.

It was finished, and the masons proceed to return to their own country. Negen, however, determined that they should never depart. The design which they had worked out so admirably was the creation of his brain, the darling of his heart it should never be reproduced. So he invited them all to the roof for the last time. Then, treacherously removing the ladders, he left them there to die.

The masons devised various means for reaching the earth. But they were all killed in the attempt to escape and were changed by fairies into the blocks of stone which form the rocks to this day in proof of the tragic event.

Manolli alone made no effort to save himself and joined in none of the contrivances proposed by his comrades. He heard only Amiker's voice calling to him—Manolli, Manolli! Following the mystic voice, he sprang from the parapet falling lifeless upon the earth, and the tears welling up from his broken heart became a fountain, ever cool, cool and fresh, and to this day it is known as Manolli's well.—London Family Herald.

THE FINAL POSE.

It Made the Thing Harmonious and Complete All Around.

In the early days of traveling by stagecoach across the rocky mountains the trip was likely to be relieved of monotony by incidents of no ordinary occurrence. But the fatigue of the jolting was not to wear upon the nerves of the week and the timid. Sometimes the passengers became so worn out as to lead to a suspicion of duel, sculpt. Two flight five. D. S. Tuttle in his "Reminiscences of a Missionary Bishop" describes an instance in point.

One forenoon the coach rolled into Denver, and as its frames came jouncing up to the office of Wells, Fargo & Co. A large crowd was assembled, as the jerking and the outgoing of the daily coaches were the great events for the town.

At the stop the only passenger quickly threw open the coach door, leaped to the ground, ran hurriedly across the street and, turning a handspring, stood on his head with his heels up against a supporting wall.

Several men followed him, quite sure that here was another passenger crazed by the long, sleepless ride. One said to him in a tone of sympathy, "Why, cap'n, what's the matter?"

Slowly coming to a right side up posture, the man answered: "Well, my friend, I'll tell you what it is. This standing on my head is the only position which I haven't been in during the last twenty-four hours to ponder much, and I wanted to make the thing harmonious and complete all round."

IN A CHINESE BANK.

The Way the Clerks Use the Abacus and Counting Boards.

The Chinese have a way of getting hold of the first principles of things, even though they may not have developed from them anything like a scientific system.

A foreigner, especially if he be of prepossessing appearance, is received with great civility at a Chinese bank. "Scientific" appears to be the head clerk's word or not, as it sounds, German, but the Chinaman pronounces it "shenteefic," banker's assistant. In response to this call a native cashier appears, indolent and deferential, with a smooth shaven skull, a four foot pigtail and a spotless, flowing garment.

With great rapidity he will make an exchange of silver, doing his calculating on an abacus, a frame of wire and beads similar to those used in country schools everywhere years ago. His long, thin fingers move over the beads more quickly than the eye can follow, but there's no mistake in the total.

Perhaps the visitor will want a large piece of money changed into small coin. Instead of going through the wearisome operation of counting out the 200 pieces included in this transaction a simple, ingenious device is employed. A flat wooden tray is produced containing a hundred recesses, each just big enough to lodge one coin and just shallow enough to prevent the possibility of two lurking together.

The pile of small coins is poured on this tray, and with one jerk of the clerk's wrist the hundred recesses are filled and the surplus swept off.—Harper's Weekly.

A Bit of Correspondence.

"Mr. Thompson presents his compliments to Mr. Simpson and begs to request that he will keep his doggs from trespassing on his grounds."

"Mr. Simpson presents his compliments to Mr. Thompson and begs to suggest that in future he should call his dogs with two legs."

"Mr. Thompson's respects to Mr. Simpson and will feel obliged if he will add the letter 'n' to the last word he made use of in his note to the present Mr. Simpson had left."

"Mr. Simpson returns Mr. Thompson's note unopened, the impertinence it contains being only equaled by its vulgarity."

He Got the Book.

Bishop Dunne used to tell the following story on himself:

"Dr. Donagh, said a parishioner at the end of a service, "I enjoyed your sermon this morning. I welcomed it like an old friend. I have, you know, a book on those containing every word of it."

"You have not," said Dr. Donne. "I have so," said the parishioner.

"Well, send that book to me. I'd like to see it."

"I'll send it," was the reply.

The next morning an unabridged dictionary was sent to the reciever.—Judge.

Quite Real.

"Well, was quite accetion to me," replied Low Comedy. "For instance, only today I saw him getting next to some free lunch, and he acted for all the world like a man who was starved to death."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Swift Thinker.

Hawker—You seem to be deep study. A penny for your thoughts, old man. Bluffwood—Oh, I'm a rapid thinker and have 500 thoughts at once! Pass me over a five spot.—Exchange.

A Cheap Hat.

She—I dreamed last night that you had bought me a hat for a present. He—Well, that's the first dream of a lost you ever had that didn't cost me money.

First Requisite for Happiness.

One of the first conditions of happiness, recognized by everybody, is a life in which man's idea with nature are not broken; that is a life under the open sky, in sunshine, out in the fresh air, near the soil, plants and animals.—Tolstoi.

No Charity in That.

Wife—I say, do you know the girl in the hat shore us was a place at the charity bazaar lottery yesterday? Husband—A place? Great Scott! And that's what it by call a charity bazaar!

CONSIDERATE.

He Spared His Guest the "Unpleasant Little Detail."

Two friends, one a prosperous looking business man and the other at least well dressed, chanced to meet not long ago, and the second gentleman remembered that it was his turn to "buy the dinner," so they were soon repairing to a fashionable restaurant. Their orders were generous, and they lingered long over the good things, not forgetting cigars at the end.

When they felt that they really had to leave or else pay rent the host showed a bit of forgetfulness and requested that the other go outside and wait for him; that there was an "unpleasant little detail" he wished to discuss with the proprietor and could not think of embarrassing his friend by having him overhear it. The friend did as requested, stepping outside and waiting at the nearest corner.

He had been waiting only about five minutes when of a sudden the door of the restaurant flew open, and his host, who had shot through it as from a catapult, followed by some most unceremonious terms.

"What's wrong?" was the first inquiry of the waiting friend.

"Oh, nothing much," was the answer, "except that the 'unpleasant little detail' I had to discuss with the proprietor was that I had no money to pay for the dinner."—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

A FAMOUS GOOSE.

Peter, the Pet of the English Coldstream Guards.

Possibly the most remarkable creature ever attached to a regiment was Peter, the ever famous goose of the Coldstream guards. This curious pet was presented to the Coldstreamers when they were in Canada by the Indian Administrator Grant, and now it acquired a fame which eclipsed that of all rivals in the way of pets in the army.

When the guard was mounted of a morning Peter always marched off with them. It is recorded that one night the goose saved a sentry's life by flying in the face of a rebel who was just going to fire at the soldier. Peter's timely call disconcerted the rebel, who fired at random. The sentry immediately responded by shooting the rebel dead.

When the guards came home and were quartered in London one of the sights when the regiment marched one was to see Peter strutting at the head of the battalion till they passed the barrack gate, when the goose returned. Unhappily Peter's fate was unheroic. His end were ill in accord with his martial career, for he was run over and killed by a cab, and that not even a trafalgar. It was a poor kind of an end for a bird with such a record.—London Telegraph.

Old English Laws About Buttons.

Buttons have engaged the attention of legislators even more frequently than hats. Five acts have been passed to protect the button industry of England, and some of these are still unrepealed. An act of George I. imposes a penalty of 40 shillings on any person using or selling "buttons made of cloth, serge, drugget, frieze or camlet."

This law, says the London Daily Mail, was a source of intense annoyance to foreign visitors, and the author of "Le Parisien à Londres," a guide written in 1826, is careful to explain its provisions at considerable length. He adds, however, that foreigners "who are able to prove that their clothes were made in their own country escape the penalty they just aimed on the understanding that they change their buttons within twenty-four hours."

Lively Times in Gillville.

"Well, sir," said the Hillville citizen, "if they isn't a power of excitement in the cities after awhile I'll give up to go!"

"What's the trouble?" he was asked.

"Well, ever yunder is Deacon Jones prayin' for rain, an' just across the way is Elder Brown petitionin' for dry, an' the whole population crowdin' round, betin' which'll win. An' the sheriff's done served notice to all of 'em to appear in court an' answer to the charge o' gamblin' in futures, an' he says he'll git enough cuts out o' the gang to finish the asteroids wen yo' point the town hall."—Uncle Hiram' Magazine.

Guarded His Beard.

As Sir Thomas More laid his head on the block he begged the executioner to wait a moment while he carefully placed his beard out of reach of the ax, for, he said, "it hath not committed treason," which reminds one of the story of Simon Lord Lovat, who the day before his execution on Tower hill bade the operator who shaved him be cautious not to cut his throat, as such an accident would cause disappointment to the gaping crowd on the morrow.—English Magazine.

A Youthful Joke.

"When Mark Twain was the editor of the Virginia City Enterprise," said an envoyée at the Franklin inn in Philadelphia, "a savant girl in the neighboring town of Lovelock unexpectedly fell heir to $200,000. Her name was Miriam Rogers. A day or two after the announcement, while all Virginia City and Lovelock hummed with Miriam's good luck, Mark Twain printed on the editorial page of the Enterprise this paragraph:

"'If Miriam Rogers of Lovelock, who recently inherited a large fortune, will call at this office she will hear something greatly to her advantage. We are uncertain.'"—New York Press.

Less Production of Flax.

Examining the map of Russia, with the figures at hand, it is found that the greatest falling off in flax culture is in those provinces that formerly produced the largest quantities of good flax fiber for exportation.

Limited Experience.

Great Point of Difference.

At the trial of Mrs. Wade at Carlisle, England, after the 1745 rising, one witness was, although a Scotsman, examined under the English form of oath. When he gave his account so palpably wide of the truth that the prosecuting counsel led him more pointedly the form of his own country. He then gave evidence of a very different stamp. On being asked how he came to offer so many falsehoods when first sworn, he replied: "Sooth! There's an unco difference 'twixt blawing on a buek an' swearin' auch and to lie!!"

Experimental Root Garden.

One of the most remarkable gardens in the world is established on the roof of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy. There a botanist is experimenting with the use of drugs in plants, to determine the possibility of growing some less artificial medicinal plants from which valuable drugs are taken, and also to learn what effect drugs can have upon our plants.

THE CRASH OF WORLDS.

A Scientific Theory Concerning the End of the Planet.

Credulous individuals who are always fearful that some of the ends of the world predicted by scientifical prophets may prove to be true will find considerable comfort in the assertion of Professor Lowell that there is good scientific evidence for the belief that mankind still have many years' warning of the great catastrophe that astronomers tell us is sure to all things on this planet.

According to Professor Lowell's statements, there is somewhere within the remote confines of space a great mass of matter—once a world, but now dead—that is hurling itself toward our sun. In time it is certain to reach the goal to which it is tending, and when the two come together the globe on which we live is destined to cease to exist.

Fortunately for our peace of mind, there is at the present moment no such dead world within dangerous proximity, and yet any day it may appear. Any day the morning paper may announce that one of these dark bodies has come within the reach of the telescope—that it may readily be seen by the light of the sun reflected upon it.

While it would then be certain that the end of the world was in sight there would still be ample time in which to prepare for the inevitable. If the first view of the intruder was taken when it was still comparatively far off, it would scarcely cause much uneasiness, but if it should not be until twenty-one days later that it would become visible to the naked eye and three years more would elapse before it appeared to us to equal in size a five magnitude star in two years and three months more it would have come so near to us as to appear as large as the moon and as far the brightest star in the sky. In fact, its effect upon the world would already be felt. Our seasons would change, and the days would grow longer. Finally, just 115 days later, those who were still alive would sit down the beginning of the end. The stranger would not strike the earth, but would pass so close to its side as the sun that the earth would turn and follow until together they would drop silently into the water—Brooklyn Eagle.

Discourtesy Rebuked.

Lord Dunsany is expected every so to done with, but Mr. Frederick Jameson in his book tells us that of mere personal politeness he never knew any gentleman in the foreign office assumed a discourtesy by-thinking" could be shown, who lived on the other side of the street—that is, by catching the rays of the sun on a mirror and dazzling them over the way. The father of the young ladies complained to Palmerston, who thereupon issued this minute:

"The secretary of state desires that the gentlemen in his department will cease disagreeable reflections on the ladies opposite."—London Chronicle.

How to Test Paper.

You cannot test paper as you would string, by stretching it. It has been stretched so much in the process of manufacture that it won't stand much more. The way to test it is to rub it in the hands. After such treatment your paper is full of holes and cracks. Good paper simply takes the appearance of leather. If much white dust is produced we know there are cracks in it. If it cracks it has been stretched too much.—Stationer.

Surmounting a Difficulty.

A man of tact always manages to get out of a difficulty. The clerk of a church in Sunland whose business it was to read the first lesson in the church came across the chapter in Isaiah in which the names Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego occur twelve times.

Finding it extremely difficult to pronounce these names, he went through the chapter referring to them as "the aforesaid gentlemen."

A TENDERFOOT AT POKER.

He Knew How to Play a Good Hand When He Got It.

"Hyr Slowly," said a sporting editor, "would you like to know how I visited his art shop with gambling men?

"There was one late about a hundred years ago, when he had painted that masterpiece of his called 'Cupid Asleep.' It was a great piece of work, and he had put his heart into it. He was in some thinking town, considered with three strangers, and dear help you tenderfoot that ever ventured to sit in a little poker game among that crowd.

"One night the tenderfoot tenderfoot imaginable, after a half dozen drinks in the saloon, agreed to take a hand in a silver dollar game.

"Things went along in the usual way for awhile. Then an amazing series of ends and winks began to pass about. The tenderfoot had observed that the tenderfoot had kings on the draw. There were more nods and winks and betting began.

"In the midst of the betting a waiter brought some drinks and whisky in glasses to obtain the tenderfoot, and while the poor dupe was raising off his drink, the stranger next him slipped a sixth card on to his hand, thus, of course, giving him a flush.

"The unconscious tenderfoot took up a huge sandwich, bit off a large mouthful, and then said, in a quiet, stuff life is made of." Lond'ow ow ow! Why, I should be the wishbone of every individual. 'Dest thou lov' me? Dest thou love Pauline? Thou do not consider time, for this is the end of life." "Art to long and time is fleeting." The speaker continued to sit wals of life time is a great factor in life you can do hundreds of actions, palaces, poets, born into the world for every one who who recognition. The cost who does in the cost who knows the value of time.

There are various ways of wasting time. The most common is the method of the dissipated. He sets up sleeps, enjoys sunlight and cool breeze. So long as he has food, clothing and a bed he is contented. He is delighted with the beauts of the field. He has words of revenge. The old age of the disgraced is usually spent in poverty and pain. There are those who squandder time. They have energy and intellect, but they dedicate such a life of pleasure, "to fleet from flower to flower gathering honeycle. Flight of pleasure." They live purely sensuous lives. Bitterness and disgust follow every wrong. These neon hat energy and opportunity. They misdirected opportunities and misdirected time and their life in the end brings them bitterness. They have perfected with pleasure, but not unhappy have squandered, their fortune and wasted their strength and intellect. Their closing days are filled with regret and bitterness. Mainta

COL. COOPER IS FREE; NASHVILLE IN FRENZY

THREATS FOLLOW HIS RELEASE

Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, sentenced last year, with his son, Robin J. Cooper, to twenty years in the State penitentiary upon conviction of the killing of former United States Senator Edward W. Carmack in Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 9, 1908, was granted a full pardon by Governor Patterson a few minutes after the Supreme Court had affirmed the sentence. The court ordered a new trial for Robin J. Cooper. Colonel Cooper was released soon after his pardon was signed. His son is at liberty under his father's bond, his friends freely predict that he will not again be arraigned for trial.

Governor Patterson's action has aroused Nashville and Tennessee as nothing ever did before. There is the most intense excitement throughout the city. The street corners, hotel lobbies and other places where crowds congregate have been the scenes of the most violent discussions. Rumors of the Governor resigning, of an attempted assassination and of a plot to lynch Colonel Cooper have filled the air since the pardon was issued.

Governor Patterson, in the pardon which he wrote for Colonel Cooper, said: "In my opinion, neither of the defendants is guilty, and they have not had a fair and impartial trial, but were convicted contrary to the law and the evidence. The action of the Supreme Court in vacating the judgment of Robin Cooper, leaves the sentence of four years against him in force. The proof showed that Robin Cooper killed deceased and that D. B. Cooper did not fire a shot. Without reflection upon the court, it is inconceivable to my mind and repugnant to every principle of justice that a man should be found guilty of murder who was not in a conspiracy to kill and who, in fact, did not kill."

The Supreme Court's reversal in the case was based on the assignment of error in the trial judge's failure to charge the jury as to Robin Cooper's theory of self-defense, insisted on by defense of the two defendants together. Holding continuance of Governor Patterson as to talks with Robin Cooper and other points.

PERISH IN CHINESE RIOTS

In the rioting at Chang Sha, city in which not less than 21,000 persons, including the governor of the province, have been killed, all the foreign-owned buildings in the city have been destroyed by fire except the British consulate. All the buildings rented by foreigners have been burned. The Chinese officials as long ago as Thursday issued a proclamation that they were unable to protect the lives and property of foreigners, and therefore advised foreigners to leave the city. So far as is known no foreign resident lost his life.

The missionaries attached to the American Episcopalian Alliance, the United Evangelical Church and the Wesleyan and Yale missions, number forty-one in all, took refuge in boats. They lost all of their effects. The destruction of all foreign property, including the Japanese consulate and the British warehouses, followed the fate of the Standard Oil Company's new tanks is unknown.

SAFE IN POSTOFFICE BLOWN.

Crackshun Wreck Motive Robs Station and Escape.

Crackmen wrecked the safe in the Melrose Park (Ill.) postoffice while deputie at 3 a. m., the other day and escaped with $50 in currency and $200 worth of postage stamps. The terrific explosion shook the building, shattered windows and tore away part of the flooring. The entire village was awakened and thrown into excitement. The safe-blowers escaped by boarding an outbound freight train on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad. Two Chicago police were asked to search the trains and several detectives were hurried to the Western suburb. The crackmen are believed to be Chicago crooks.

The court held that trading stamps did not constitute "sufficient element of chance to bring them within the prohibition of the statute against gift enterprises

BASEBALL SEASON BEGINS.

Opening League Games Are Played in Eight Cities.

Big doings the other day on the ball lots of the National and American leagues. Smiling skies prevailed everywhere, eight umpires each "tossed out a new white ball," eight umpires each in his finest voice cried "play ball," and in eight cities the sporting writers chronicled that "the game was on." At least these quotations have come down to us from time immemorial and there is no reason why they should be discarded at this late date.

It was the day when all the teams were equal and that marked the initial precision or the initial impetus to the hopes of several million fans. What will the end be? Call around in October and the answer will probably be ready.

In the American League the rapid development last year of Philadelphia and Boston and the hard tussle that Detroit had to repeat for the second time for pennants have turned the development that year of Philadelphia and Boston and the hard tussle that Detroit had to repeat for the second time for pennants, coupled with the picking of a championship team by the great guess work.

ACTIVE LAKE NAVIGATION OPEN

First Boat Passes the Soo and Excursion Steamers Made Ready.

Reports to the effect that the first boat has gone through the Soo, coupled with the meaning of Chicago's excursion steamers and the leasing of new pilot charts of the great lakes by Hydrographical Department of the United States yesterday, signified the active opening of navigation on the great lakes. The first boat to enter the Chicago harbor was the City of Traverse, on March 12. On March 6 the Ira had disappeared from Lake Michigan, according to reports in the weather bureau. The average closing season of navigation about the Chicago harbor is from Jan. 7 to Feb. 27, and the closed season in Sault Ste. Marie usually is from the middle of December to April 20. A report from Sault Ste. Marie stated that the steamer J. E. Upson, in charge of Captain J. H. Wood, the first up-bound boat to pass through the Soo this season, had signaled for landing.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

The Maryland Legislature passed a resolution favoring the adoption of the federal income tax amendment to the Constitution.

Federal supervision of speculative exchanges was recommended by W. R. Thompson, president of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, in an address before the Republican Club of New York City.

East and West will lock horns in an unusual struggle for control of the appointment to the Supreme Court bench in succession to the late Associate Justice Brewer, according to predictions heard in congressional circles.

The governors petition development of the past few weeks has been generally concurred with by the Federal administration that Secretary Ballinger's money Blaine will form the subject of a party conference soon to be held by the Republican leaders in Washington.

With a brass band parading the streets, and with the gray uniforms of the Y. M. C. A. packed to the doors with enthusiastic citizens, Tom Moore closed one of the most remarkable campaigns ever fought in any city of the United states for pure government and freedom from the yoke of corporation.

There were comparatively few private conferences held in Washington preparing in most cases the party nominees for a big contest. The Taft bench law makes the court of appeals, which has in the majority of cases, contests were settled without reference to the bench.

Governor Vessey at Centerville, on the occasion of the opening of the progressive Republican primary campaigns. They point out that Governor Vessey is the leader of the progressive territory.

THE PRESIDENT IS HISSED.

Women Disapprove of Speech by Taft at Suffrage Meet.

President Taft was hissed while delivering an address of welcome at the convention of the American Woman Suffrage Association in Washington. The manifestation of disapproval was not unanimous, but it was pronounced. It interrupted the President's speech, but did not disconcert him. He waited a few seconds for the feminine abbreviation of respect to subside and then finished what he had to say.

The President was describing the two conditions he would insist on granting suffrage to any class. "One is," he said, "that the class should be intelligent enough to know its own interests. The theory that Hottentots or any uneducated, altogether unintelligent class is prepared for self-government at once, or should immediately take part in self-government, is a theory I wholly dissent from—but that is not applicable to the present situation. The other qualification is that the class should be capable of exercising that right

The Old Settlers' Association of the Grand Traverse region will hold its annual meeting at Traverse City on June 8th. The officers of the association are already arranging for the meeting.

Elk Rapids Progress: We hear that more than 5,000 fruit trees, berry bushes and shrubs are being planted this spring on the John Westerveltplace on Torch Lake, managed by Carlton W. Scott.

Last year the village of Central Lake raised by taxation the sum of $4,550. This year the amount will raise $4,350, or $200 less, although that year the village had the revenue from two seasons and this year she will have none. It don't look as if taxes would be any lighter in that village.

E. G. Schaub, aged 56, one of Charlevoix county's pioneers passed away at his home in Boyne City after a bigger lingering illness. He leaves a family besides a brother and sister. He was at one time one of Boyne City's leading business men, but was forced to retire on account of ill health.

Reports from Boyne City bring the news that the emplyees of W. H. White company and the Boyne City Lumber company will receive an increase of five to eight per cent in their wages in the near future. The H. S. G. & A. R. R. will also give an increase in wages to their employees in a short time.

Boyne Journal: M. J. Fox is on his way home from the wilds of the upper peninsula and is expected in Boyne City today or tomorrow. It is understood that Mr. Fox will soon move to Iron Mountain where he goes to take charge of the big lumber mill and plant which is to be erected there by G. Vom Hatten.

Traverse City Herald: It is stated that fruit farmers have badly damaged the cherry crop on the peninsula. The crop of our cherries, it is said, will not amount to more than one-third of an average year, while sweet cherries will do better any may be third of a normal crop. The peach buds on the hills of the peninsula have not been injured, but those in the ravines have suffered somewhat. The apples bereft only a few fruit buds have not been injured.

Traverse City Eagle: The 104 workers' association is planning for the greatest meeting in its history. This meeting will be the twenty-ninth annual session and will take place on June 8. During the past year over forty of the old settlers of this county have passed away after spending their lives in the work of building up this section, and it is fitting that those who are left should get together and talk over the old times and form closer acquaintance during the time that is left to them. Special speakers will be on the program and everything done to make the meeting one of special interest to the old residents.

Traverse City Eagle: Dr. W. E. Groom was wearing a broad smile in his business the gang of tree planters and completed the job of setting out 11 of his young fruit trees Friday which in time for them to receive the full benefit of the heavy rain that continued through the night. This was one of the largest jobs of the kind that has been done in this section this spring. In all there were 5,750 trees set out on the farm of the Groom Fruit Farm. Apples, 230 each of Duchess, Wealthy, Baldwins, Northern and Winesap, 110 Greenings, 20 West River and the balance in Northern Spy and Kings. In the line of peaches there are 550 each of Early Crawfords, Elbertas, Mammoth and St. Johns. The cherries consist of 300 Montmorencies, 250 Early Richmonds, 300 Wiekes and 200 Early Arlingtons. These trees are all planted in double order and over an area of 11 acres. Next year he plans to plant 10 acres more, which will consist of 4,000 trees comprising 1,000 apple trees and 3,000 peach trees.

Chatham Press: Judging by the editorial comments of the county newspapers of Michigan Chase S. Osborn is the choice of the newspaper men for governor. It would be almost unheard of if this were not true. Chase Osborn was himself a hard working Michigan newspaper man for more than twenty years and during those years he generously gave to others the moral and living support which now in kind is being returned to him. It was never time of Mr. Osborn that he was regarded as the advocate of a section or a faction. He was always a Michigan republican in principle and in action, and the interests and desires of the counties bordering on Ohio and Indiana was respected and urged as earnestly through his newspaper as were the purposes of the Lake Superior region. And because this was true of Chase S. Osborn as a newspaper man through many years is why the republican newspapers men of Michigan are now favoring his nomination for governor.

Chebogan Democrat: The local news item is principal actor in a big suit recently filed in the Emmet county circuit court against the Harbor Point Association, a corporation owning the widely-known Harbor Point, a magnificent piece of land jutting out into the bay at the west of Harbor Spring, owned and occupied by a bunch of millionaires who have had summer homes on the point for many years. When the association was just formed it was found by peculiar rules and laws that forbid the members from ever making transfer of the property. Jane Clark, one of the original owners of a certain parcel of the point died and left her property to a relative, Anita C. Hitch, and according to the laws of the association this piece of the property must revert back to the association, and in consequence the association refused to recognize Mrs. Hitch as an owner. Now comes Mrs. Hitch in all of her womanly dignity and seeks to break the barriers that seek to force her out of her property and securing the aid of an attorney of Chicago and the local law firm has taken the first steps in a case that will probably be bitterly contested, and fought by the ablest attorneys that millionaires can obtain. A bill has been filed in the local law firm, asking that the association be dissolved, they contending that they have allowed their charter to expire and that they are no more bound by its provisions. There seems good grounds for their contention. There are others much interested in the outcome of the case, hoping that its iron bound rules will be broken and that its seeming arrogance will be put to the four winds.

A GHOST AT SEA.

The Phantom That Boarded the Bark Sea Flower.

The following incident is recorded as a true short story by an English publication:

It was about four bells in the middle watch or 2 a. m. and when the mate, who was standing near the binnacle giving the helmsman his course, suddenly became aware of a mysterious presence in the wake of the ship. At the same moment his companion clutched him by the arm, and, pointing, shrieked, "Look yee him, sir!"

Before he could reply the mate became aware that the dark shadow he had just before observed had so far materialized that it bore the appearance of Captain Ellis. The figure of the captain advanced along the deck and disappeared shortly down the companion.

Recovering himself, the mate left the helmsman and hurried down into the cabin, meeting, just coming out of it, the second mate, who had been in my watch and who had gone to sleep, dreaming that the captain had come aboard and was calling him. Both men then made a complete search of the cabin and the other cabins, but, to be useless to say, without result.

Later it was found that Captain Ellis had died between 1 and 2 a. m. in the morning of June 23.

The story got abroad, and the ship obtained a reputation for being haunted; consequently a difficulty was found in obtaining crews, and in the end it was resumed was sold to a foreign firm.

CARE OF PARROTS.

The Proper Way to Feed, Cage and Teach the Birds.

As few people who own parrots really know how to care for them, a few good rules may be of interest.

As to their food, it should be needs—coarse, hemp (but not too much), millet, boiled maize, linseed, rape and the like. Bread soaked in hot water is good, given twice a day, and fruit in moderation and in variety is wholesome, such as grapes, apples and pears, an occasional raisin and lettuce.

Gray parrots are very fond of rice, and almost all parrots appreciate rice pudding and have a taste, too, for bread and butter. Meat is bad for them. Clean, fresh wood should be given them to gnaw—bits of elm, birch, larch and chestnut. Fresh dry gravel must be sprinkled at the bottom of the cage every day and fresh water be put in the glass.

It is important that parrots should have the opportunity to stand flat-footed, so if the cage has wires at the bottom it is well to remove them. Always to have his claws clipping a round perch is injurious to any bird, and two perches of different sizes are advisable, so that he may change his posture at will.

When a parrot continues to scream he wants water or food or feels ill and uncomfortable or maybe is unhealthy dull. Music, which he loves, will cheer him up at all times.

A parrot learns to talk only from one who speaks very slowly and distinctly to him and preferably when he is about to fall asleep. Last, but not least, a parrot should be carefully covered at night.—London Mail.

THE PYGMIES.

Of the pygmies of southwestern Rhodesia a modern traveler writes: "The males stand about four feet high and are long armed, short legged and ugly, being unusually prognathous. The legs are disproportionately short, the foot large, and the body is covered with a wet of down. Both sexes affect a state of complete nudity. They have their own tongue, but usually know a little of the language of their big neighbors. No attempt is made to till the open forest glades. They depend for food on game and what they steal from the fields and plantations of the surrounding tribes.

"Though there are seven different tribes of pygmies, they appear to have no tribal organization. It is the custom for a group of families to attach themselves to a negro chief and in return for food to assist him to fight his enemies. The standard of morality of these little people is high, and, strange to say, they are remarkably intelligent."

"The wife boasts trying to this forest are killed for food, even the elephant. Buffalo, snares and heavily weighted spears are used, but their favorite way of hunting an elephant appears to be with bow and arrow. Poisoned arrows are shot into him, and the great beast is followed until he falls, when the little hunters camp around the body and feast on the carcass until it is finished."

Catch-as-catch-can.

She gave him a playful pinch on the cheek.

"New suit?" she exclaimed. "And what a beauty!"

"Darker also, don't it?" he agreed, surveying himself proudly in the glass. It was a spring suiting of the very latest style. Even the editor of the Tailor and Cutter could have found no fault.

"And doesn't it fit well?" she cried. "Turn round! To a T! Lovely! It must have been expensive!"

He put his fingers on his lips. His other hand wandered affectionately down a very pronounced crease, and his eyes filled with a look of pride.

"Hush!" he whispered. "Not so very! Five bob down and five bob every time the collector sees me first!—London Answers.

"Same to You."

Addressing the boys on the eve of the holidays, the headmaster of a London elementary school wished them a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. "The same to you, sir," they responded. "And be careful not to eat too much pudding," was his parting injunction. "Same to you, sir!" yelled the young hopefuls.

Dan Gallagher returned from Ireland where he had been spending the winter bringing with him John Gallagher and also a young damsel as a life companion from from the shamrock beds of the "Auld sod."

By the death of Mr. John Gillespie in his 70th year, which occured on the 22nd inst after a prolonged illness, the island loses another of its pioneer inhabitants. Born in Ireland he come to America in the early fifties and settled in Toronto Canada where he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Doheey sister of John of Chicago and James and Francis Doheey of this place, coming to Beaver Island in 1858, taking up a homestead upon which he has resided up to the time of his death. Besides the widow Mr. Gollespie leaves twelve children and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss.

The Demon of the Air

is the germ of lagrippe, that, breathed in, brings suffering to thousands. Its after effects are weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys, and in such a manner that future repairs are unnecessary for a long time. Thoroughness and care characterize every job we carry through, and none but the best materials are used. We solicit your plumbing work on the understanding that if it is not done to your satisfaction we will not charge you. But our prices are very moderate under any circumstances.

—The bridge is being re-floored.

—W. A. Loveday, of East Jordan, was in the city Friday.

—George Blaney, of Charlotte, is here spending a few days with his son, Dr. Harney.

—Representative Peterson, of Boyne Falls, was in town Thursday and Friday of last week.

—For the farmer first the stump puller, then the improved orchard sprayer and the automobile.

—Mrs. Fred Bailey, formerly of the Inn, has leased the Harvey Campbell cottage, on River street, for the summer.

—Horace Wakefield, who has been in Minnesota the past year, has been spending a week here. He returned Monday.

—The "King's Daughters" will give a "Penny Social" at the Baptist church on Friday night. Come and bring all your pennies.

—August Hummel, a retired merchant of Fort Worth, Texas, is here for the summer. He is guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cameron.

—The marked contrast between the prices of tenderloin steak and potatoes still continue visible to the naked eye. Eggs and lapels lavall still continue high.

—The McKinnon house, Park Ave., badly damaged by fire last winter, and recently purchased by Mr. Jackson, of the Savings Bank, is being rebuilt, and will soon be ready.

—A hydrophobia scare has moved the board of health to warn dog owners that their canines must either be muzzled or shot. What this become of the dog poisoner with his Hamburg steak?

—Miss Elsie See, who is holding down a good stenographer's job in Detroit, and Lou See, who is a student at the Big Rapids Ferris Institute, are here visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. S. See.

—Those who wish to see one of the foremost of this season's successes will be well repaid in attending "The Quality of Mercy" which appears at Charlevoix Theatre on Friday May 6, with an exceptionally strong and specially selected company.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Kenyon spent Sunday in Bellaire as the guests of Ira Adams. Mr. Kenyon has assumed his position as superintendent of the Maples' tract, vice Park. He has taken up his residence there, Mrs. Kenyon will join him there later in the season.

—We know of no more valuable evidence of the superior adaptability of Charlevoix county for fruit culture than the fact that Prof. Taft, of the Michigan Agricultural College, has a mile front on the west side of the south arm of Pine Lake, in Eveline township, embracing 400 acres, all of which is being set out to young orchards. Prof. Taft was here last week and again this week, on business connected with the work. As an educator along the line of scientific farming Prof. Taft is one of the best posted men in the State, and that he should select this section of the Grand Traverse region for such a large investment is a big plume in the cap of Charlevoix county. His well known scientific attainments shows that he knows what he is doing.

—The Beaver Island tug Margaret McCann was here Monday for her annual inspection.

—Van Van Leuven received his permanent appointment as rural mail carrier last week.

—Mrs. Dr. Bon has been called to Lansing by the sickness of her sister. She will be absent about ten days.

—Miss Jackson, of the J. L. Crane force, was called to Chicago last Friday by the serious illness of her father.

—Special business to come before the I. O. T. M. M. at the next regular meeting. All members are requested to be present.

—Never mind who is going to be governor; set out the young fruit trees. They will grow and yield good profit under any old governor.

—Circuit court, May term, begins next Monday, with an unusually large calendar. Judge Mayne is holding court this week in Lelanau county.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Burnett are rejoicing over the fact that their daughter, Mrs. Nellie Hinchey, of Gladstone, is the mother of a good husky boy.

—Mrs. Dr. Thielen, who has been in poor health for some time, leaves today for Ashville, N. C., where she will remain for several weeks. She will be accompanied by her aunt, Miss Harris.

—E. S. Stacks, has been elected by the State Sunday School Association as delegate to the Worlds Sunday School Association convention to be held in Washington, May 19th to 26th, and will attend.

—Mary Isabel Clarke, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Fred Howard Clarke of Norwood, passed away suddenly, Monday evening, at the home of her grand mother, Mrs. O. D. Wood. She was a bright, attractive child six and a half years old. Private interment Wednesday a. m. at Charlevoix.

—A horse belonging to Henry McClanathan broke loose from a hitching post Saturday evening and ran around the Bridge street. He brought up on the sidewalk in front of Mrs. Emery's clothing store, where he got tangled up in a bicycle. Before he could be captured he sent his heels through one of the plate glass windows of the store.

—Hotel people and cottage owners are kept busy these days in preparing for the influx of the resort people, which promises to be greater than ever. The fact is becoming more apparent every year that another big summer hotel could be filled here, and it is acknowledged fact that we are very far from the limit of demand for furnished cottages. There is no better investment than a furnished cottage in Charlevoix. It is always sure of a tenant.

—"The Quality of Mercy" a play of unusual entertainment, bright, clever and clean, with nothing to offend and everything to commend; will be offered at Charlevoix Theatre on Friday May 6, by the E. & A. Amusement Co. In interpreted by clever artists with the necessary accessories and scenic surroundings. To the point nothing has been left undone that liberal outlay or the knowledge, experience and ability of its proprietors could insure.

—It is an interesting evidence of agricultural progress to see, from the sanctum window, the trucks pass by from the docks and railroad station, loaded with agricultural implements of all descriptions. Charlevoix dealers are making large sales of that class of goods that denote development of the farms and dairies. Another item that speaks volumes is the enormous amount of eggs that come to local dealers from the farms, and the large shipments of that lucrative product that are made to the burger cities. Eggs and butter spell thrift and profit to the farmer to a greater degree than is realized by most people. The hen and the cow build barns and silos.

—We have a few more garden and flower seeds to dispose of.

—The SENTINEL office is doing stacks of good job work. Come in and see some of it.

—A. H. Reinhart, the landscape gardener, is doing some good work on the grounds of the Carnegie library.

—The steamer Huron City discharged a cargo of coal for the Charlevoix Coal and Wood Co. last week.

—The Chebogan Association of Congregational ministers and churches will meet at Manistee May 11th and 12th.

—The I. O. Mosher barn, just outside the corporation, north of the city, was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Cause unknown. Fully covered by insurance.

—Homer Fitch, of Livingston county, and a law graduate of the Michigan University, is here to remain and practice law in the law office of his brother, postmaster Fitch.

—The fine new steel steamer Shenawater, belonging to the U. S. Fish Commission, was in port Tuesday, on her way from Chicago to Put In Bay, where she will be stationed.

—Sunday will be observed as mothers day, at the Methodist church. Each person is requested to wear a flower in honor of mother—a colored flower if mother is living, a white flower is she is gone.

—Mrs. J. O. Plank arrived Monday from Ohio, where she has been spending the winter, and quartered at Baker's Inn. Mr. Plank will join her here soon for a short time before taking up his summer's work on Fox Island.

—One of the U. S. engineer corps is expected here from Grand Rapids this week or next to make soundings of the channels and inspect harbor protection. It is expected that the dredge Gillespie will do some work here early this season.

—The captain of the U. S. Fish Commission tug Shearwater, was taken ill when in this port Tuesday, and Capt. George Weaver, of the Cummings, was induced to take the boat to Detroit. Capt. Wm. Finneran has command of the Cummings during Capt. Weaver's absence.

—Through the kindness of the local B. Y. P. U. Rev. F. Dewey Eele is in Chicago this week and part of next, in attendance upon the National Missionary Congress and the Northern Baptist Convention. Being away on Sunday, the mother's meeting announced for Sunday morning will be postponed.

—George H. Green, chief accountant for the local office of the Booth Fisheries Co., died in the Petoskey hospital Tuesday afternoon, of cancer of the stomach. He leaves a wife and one young child. Mr. Green was a most estimable Christian gentleman. We are unable at this time to announce the funeral arrangements.

A play should entertain and amuse. We all know that. At the same time there should be depth and strength to it. It should instruct along some certain lines. If it lacks this element the audience cannot become sufficiently interested in it to do good—their best work. "The Quality of Mercy" which will be played at Charlevoix Theatre on Friday May 6, is one displaying all of the above qualities and a dramatic action including a splendid moral. Tickets on sale at Chapel's drug store.

—Superintendent Marting, of the sugar factory, expresses himself as pretty well satisfied with existing conditions with reference to the crop of 1910. About the same acreage has been secured as last year, but an encouraging feature of the situation is the fact that there is a large increase of acreage closely contiguous to the factory. Reports from the field indicate that ground is being prepared, and the factory force is kept busy sending out seed and fertilizer. Weather conditions are favorable, and the outlook for a good crop is good.

—If money talks, as it is alleged that it does, the people of Western Michigan are doing a goodly amount of talking in behalf of the campaign for the development of the region. During the past two weeks the treasurer of the Development Bureau has received a check from the Grand Rapids Board of Trade for $600, a check for $580 from the public spirited people of Oceana county and an order from the treasurer of Manistee county for $900 (?). During the same period the supervisors of Benzie county appropriated $224.20 for the work of the Bureau, the supervisors of Kalkaska $300, and the progressive business men of Cadillac pledged $750.

THE GREAT GRINNELLS

The Well Known Piano House Breaking All Precedents—An Opportunity for Everybody to Have a Piano.

Everybody knows that Grinnell Brothers, of Detroit, conduct the largest music house in the west, and one of the largest in the country. They have branch houses all over Michigan, and one of them is in Petoskey. Another well known fact is that Grinnell Brothers are noted for square deal. What they tell you about their goods you may depend upon.

This celebrated concern announce one of the most startling of departures from the usual methods of selling pianos, and it affords an opportunity for those of small incomes to install a good piano in the parlor on terms that are as easy to meet as your cigars and tobacco bill. It is a club movement, and they want one hundred members. Every member of the club will have an opportunity to get a $350 Smith & Barnes piano for $275. And $5.00 in the form of coupons will join the Grinnell piano club, and $5.00 per month thereafter until the piano is paid for. Your piano is delivered immediately and the instrument is guaranteed.

This is an opportunity that comes to you but once in a lifetime. The club movement was inaugurated last Monday, and will be held open but thirty days. These pianos may be seen at the Petoskey branch house, Mitchell street. See their big advertisement in this paper next week.

—The Librarian of the public library has the following report to offer for the month of April: No. of fiction given out, 345; juvenile fiction, 169; No. of nonfiction, 98, of these philosophy 1; sociology 1; natural science, 3; useful arts, 2; fine arts, 4; literature, 13; history, 29; travel, 17; biography 18; total number 509; daily average 20. Number of new patrons enrolled 11. Total number enrolled 978. Fines collected $2.05. During the month 6 new books have been presented to the library.

—County clerk Payton was in Traverse City again this week attending a meeting of the board of directors of the West Michigan Development Bureau, at which important business was done. Mr. Payton informs us that The Bureau has been granted 200 square feet more floor space in next fall's Chicago exhibit than it occupied last year. This fact alone is a tacit recognition of the increasing importance of western Michigan as a fruit growing section. But in the midst of all this enthusiasm about fruit, we should not neglect to emphasize the fact that western and northern Michigan are unsurpassed as a general agricultural section. Our sugar factory and seed warehouse represent profit to the farmer from under the apple and cherry trees. Mr. Payton knows this, and he talks it whenever and wherever he finds an opportunity.

—The work of reconstructing the old Waddell block into the crowning glory of the Van Pelt cluster of buildings was practically finished last week, and the structure is one that we may justly be proud of. The front of brown vitrified brick contains two of the finest plate glass windows north of Northern Michigan, and the store occupying the entire ground floor, will be formally dedicated by M. A. Levinson & Co. with a grand opening the middle of this week. Every feature of this beautiful store is metropolitan, and the stock of goods will fully correspond with the building. The basement will also be occupied by Levinson for the rug and carpet department. It is certainly one of the finest establishments of its kind in the county. The office rooms in the second story have been re-arranged and much improved, and every modern convenience installed. The building is a credit to its owner and to the city.

—From the straits of Mackinac to the bottom end of the Grand Traverse region the cherries are growing, and well they may. As usual the region finds itself outside the "disaster belt." While fruit was badly damaged in Southern Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio and parts of New York, careful and scientific investigation of the conditions in Northern Michigan proves that the fruit buds are uninjured, and that, with proper situation, the cherries will yield as abundantly as they did last year. This being true, it proves that Northern Michigan is the greatest fruit section of the Michigan fruit belt. It proves that there is one place for that Grand Rapids board of trade from the Grand Rapids board of Trade for $600, a check for $580 from the public spirited people of Oceana county and an order from the treasurer of Manistee county for $900 (?). During the same period the supervisors of Benzie county appropriated $224.20 for the work of the Bureau, the supervisors of Kalkaska $300, and the progressive business men of Cadillac pledged $750.

NOT SO BAD

A Traverse City special says: It nothing unforeward happens between now and picking time, the Grand Traverse region will have a great crop of fruit. Also, if the reports from other sections of the country are to be taken with even a semblance of the truth, the prices will be so high that money in a golden stream will flow into the northland.

For to days the growers have been watching their trees very closely. A little over a week ago a freeze got some of the sour cherries, about two-thirds of the buds being killed, some of the growers on the Grand Traverse peninsula claim. But yet the trees have blossomed with such an abundance that even should there be but one third of the promise fulfilled, the crop will almost equal a normal year. One-third of the sweet cherries were killed on the peninsula, said reports, yet the sweet cherry trees are so covered with blossoms that the one-third won't be missed at all.

Over in Leelanau county everybody is optimistic. Conrad Weisler is a prominent grower living near Fouch. The strictest examination fails to show any damage to his orchard. George Heimforth is another prominent fruit grower and he reports that his trees were never in better condition. From Empire come reports that not one cent's worth of damage has been done to the cherries. Similar reports come from Northport and Sutton's Bay.

In Emmet county the growers held a meeting after the storm at Petoskey, and they were a unit in stating that they had suffered no loss. Antrim county reports are to the same effect, while Benzie county also has had no material damage.

In various parts of Grand Traverse county growers report the same condition, saying that as the mercury has not gone below freezing and hot days have not followed the cold, there is nothing to fear.

"Old Grand Traverse bay has done another good turn," said one of the growers to a Herald representative as he picked some buds from a peach tree, opened them and found them full of life. "Look at that. A peach is as tender a tree as you can find, but even the peaches have not been hurt. Applies? The coopers this fall, if nothing further happens, will be so hard pressed that they won't have time to eat, let alone sleep. Cherries? Some of them were killed a little in the peninsula, but not enough to make a great difference in the total amount received from the crop. We owe a great deal to the hot water heating system of ours. I should make that plural. Take Weisler over at Fouch. Lake Leelanau protects him and the rest. At Northern Michigan, and the store occupying the entire ground floor, will be formally dedicated by M. A. Levinson & Co. with a grand opening the middle of this week. Every feature of this beautiful store is metropolitan, and the stock of goods will fully correspond with the building. The basement will also be occupied by Levinson for the rug and carpet department. It is certainly one of the finest establishments of its kind in the county. The office rooms in the second story have been re-arranged and much improved, and every modern convenience installed. The building is a credit to its owner and to the city.

This being true, it proves that Northern Michigan is the greatest fruit section of the Michigan fruit belt. It proves that there is one place for that Grand Rapids board of trade to invest their money in any other part of Michigan. It proves that there are fortunes in fruit in Charlevoix county. It demonstrates that nature is backing up the contention of education that is being prosecuted under the management of the Development Bureau. The record of this spring, emerging as it do, unscathed by storms and frost, justifies all claims made, and doubly justifies a continuance of vigorous work. Let the good work go on.

An Ideal Husband

Is patient, even with a nagging wife, for he knows she needs help. She may be so nervous and run-down in health that trifles annoy her. If she is melancholy, excitable, troubled with loss of appetite, headache, sleeplessness, constipation or fainting and dizzy spells, she needs Electric Bitters the most wonderful tonic and nerve tonic. Thousands of sufferers from female weakness, nervous troubles, backaches and weak kidneys have used them and become healthy and happy. Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by F. G. LOSS IS $50,000,000 FROM WINTRY BLAST

CROPS RUINED IN MIDDLE WEST

Sudden Blizzard with Below Freezing Temperatures Leaves Destruction in Its Wake.

BOTH GRAIN AND FRUITS SUFFER

Democratic holding sway of the middle West have been swept away in the most disastrous and far-reaching storm experienced in a generation. The disturbance has wrought more than $50,000,000 damage to fruits and vegetables and has started an upward shoot in the price of fresh food stuffs that promises to affect the entire season. The Mississippi frost left the backbone of the fruit district—is described as almost wholly wiped out for the season, while the freezing temperature in Illinois and Iowa not only has killed buds, flowers and fruits, but threatens to ruin oats.

In and about Chicago truck gardeners have suffered a loss of early vegetables blasted in a single night. Vegetables and flowers that had produced bona profits and low prices because of the early spring have been damaged beyond hope. All that can be done is replant, where this is possible, making the season several weeks backward rather than early. But in the end it will be the housekeeper who will feel the effect of the storm. The expected early vegetables and low prices, promised because of the healthy March, have given place to promises of such high prices for green foodstuffs as have not obtained in years.

The story of the storm is told best in the weather bureau reports that showed freezing temperature in practically all of the points that have been visited by the storm. Here are some of the temperatures reported:

Chicago	26	Grand Rapids	26
Kansas City	28	Lander, Wyo.	28
Omaha	28	Lincoln	28
Indianapolis	28	Marquette	28
Des Moines	28	Marshfield	28
Davenport	28	Moline	28
Dubuque, Ia.	28	Pierre, S. D.	28
Burlington, Ia.	28	Sioux City	28
Cedar Rapids, Ia.	28	Springfield, Ill.	28
Keokuk, Ia.	28	Springfield, Mo.	28
Louisville, Ky.	28	Concordia, Kan.	28
Lexington, Ky.	28	Dodge City, Kan.	28

In the central and southern districts of Illinois the temperature fell to a fearful 15 degrees, with the result that truck growers announced that they had little hope of any crop at all this season.

Paradoxically enough, the only mitigation in the bad news was in the fact that rain and low temperatures were thought not freezing temperatures—prevailed throughout the whole Middle Western section. Had the snowstorm been followed by a bright, warm sun, nothing could have saved fruits and berries now in blossom from complete ruin. As matters stand, while many of the buds will be killed, the cool weather and rain of the next few days may save the others.

What effect the damage will have on prices this summer is problematical. The indications up to the day before the storm were that fruit prices would break all records. Fruits, grains and garden truck were from two weeks to a month ahead of time this year. The question now is whether enough of the crop will be saved to make the harvest sort fair something like normal.

Even if the fruit crop of the Middle West were half destroyed, prices might not be seriously affected, for reports from other sections indicate a bumper crop. It seems certain, however, that the loss on apple, pear, cherry and peach orchards will be so serious as to make prices for those fruits higher than usual.

Drastic are reported to have suffered severely—everywhere, the loss in oats being particularly heavy. In some sections the entire oats crop will have to be removed. Wherever the first joint was cut of the ground the frost killed the growing grain.

OHIO MINE EXPLOSION KILLS 18.

Disaster Near Steubenville, O., Encombs 25 Victims in Shaft.

Eighteen of a night force of twenty-five machine men employed in the mine of the Youngstown & Ohio Coal Company, near Amsterdam, Ohio, are thought to be dead, as a result of an explosion in the mine late the other night. Seven men were taken from the shaft alive, but unconscious. Rescue parties began work at 2 o'clock after the explosion. About 200 men are employed in the mine during the day time. They quit work before 4 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The machine men work nights, completing the work for the day shift. It is believed that the explosion was caused by coal gas.

WOLTER FOUND GUILTY.

Youth Who Killed Fourteen-Year-Old Stenographer Must Die.

Albert Wolter, a 19-year-old youth, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in the Court of Special Sessions in New York, and by the verdict the contention of the State that Wolter on March 24 last strangled and buried to death 14-year-old Ruth Wheeler was substantiated. The boy's counsel said it is doubtful if that Wolter was too tender-hearted to harm a cat, but twelve jurymen decided that he had strangled Ruth Wheeler, whom he had enticed to his room by a promise of work, and threw her while yet alive in his fireplace, where, soaked with oil, her clothing had been piled and set on fire. With the same waxen-faced indifference he had shown throughout the trial, Wolter evinced no emotion when the verdict was announced. His face with his lip twitching.

The law was quick to deal with the unnatural desperado, who was "crazy about women." In was one month ago that Ruth Wheeler left her home, where she lived with her widowed mother and two sisters, to answer an advertisement for a position as stenographer. She never returned, and when her movements were traced it was found she not her death in a struggle to save her honor. Falling in terror of her body in the fireplace, Wolter cut it apart and left the pieces in a barrel in a barbyn on the fire escape from where it was pushed into the yard below. He was arrested on Saturday, March 26.

ENORMOUS STORM LOSSES IN STATES OF THE MIDDLE WEST

Illinois—Greatest damage was done in the strip that extended the entire State. Early vegetables on the truck gardens in the northern districts and berry patches, where buds had reached an advanced stage, are ruined as total loss. Damage, $2,000,000.

Iowa—Storms in Iowa have really set back vegetable growth a full week by a week, but the frigid atmosphere and snows of the last two days have done the greatest damage. Not only fruits and vegetables, but even the oats crop is threatened. Damage, $10,000,000.

Indiana—Apple orchards and truck gardens that supply Chicago were the greatest sufferers. The damage, which is confined to the northern and central districts, amounts to $2,000,000.

Michigan—Fruit belt almost entirely nipped for the season. All that remains, according to expert growers, is the berry crop, which has been damaged to a great extent. Damage, $1,000,000.

Wisconsin—It is estimated that 20 per cent of the fruit crop and all of the early vegetable and green stuffs intended for the Chicago market have been killed. Damage, $1,000,000.

Nebraska—Small gardeners and truck farmers were the heaviest losers in the storm that, it is believed now, has not damaged the early wheat loss. $1,500,000.

MAKE BREAK FOR LIBERTY.

U. S. Convicts Flee the Prison at Leavenworth.

Five train robbers, serving life sentences, escaped from the federal prison near Leavenworth, Kan., early the same day. Within a short time two were recaptured. At 11 o'clock three others were surrounded in the brush within a short distance of the prison and it was believed all would be taken. The men recaptured were Jack Clark, sent up from Tyler, Texas, and John Gibbons, of Moscow. The three others were Thomas A. Kalmer, from Alma, Okla.; Arthur Hewitt, from Caddo, Okla., and Frank Grigware, one of the men who held up a Union Pacific mail near Omaha last fall.

The keys for liberty were made about a week, and was the result of a clever plot on the part of the convicts. The excuses was used during Tom Ryan were at work in the carpenter shop in the prison and in the tailor shop. A Union Pacific switch engine had backed into the prison yard, and at the sound of the whistle the men dashed into the yard and made for the engine. Leveling dummy guns at the engineer they climbed into the cab and compelled him to reverse his engine, and, crashed through the west gate into the open country and soon was speeding south on the road.

When the escape became known a posse mounted on fast horses stolen at the prison was sounded as a warning to farmers to be on the bottom. The whistle can be heard for miles and its sound caused consternation. At the time heavily armed guards were thrown around the gates to prevent further attempts to escape, while others started in pursuit. When the engine had reached a point half a mile from the prison the five men jumped to the ground and made for the woods. Gibbons was separated from the others and soon were captured. Then by a ruse Clark was lured to the Lemen, started after the other three men. Hewitt was farther on they were surrounded in the woods.

CHICAGO.

H. G. Dun & Co's weekly review of trade says:

"While an excellent exhibit appears in both aggregate payments through the banks and commercial defaults, the business situation presents some irregularity, mainly due to weather uncertainties and labor disputes. The matter of outs also suggests some serious thought as to future undertakings. Further weakening in prices of raw materials affects all interests and large consumers apparently avoid new investments in long terms. Continued low temperatures have adversely affected leading staple lines and outdoor activity, but transportation has suffered little hindrance and freight movements have remained exceptionally heavy in factory outputs, general merchandise from first hands, hardwoods and grain.

"Interior advices indicate that merchants have done well thus far in seasonable goods. Reduction of thirty per cent in sales of shoes at factories is in part delayed by the cold and wet conditions, but local sales have been on fair volume. The movement of leaves has been equal to expectations in the wholesale district and ordering for branch lines and fall lines at about a reduced margin. Jobbers' orders remain fairly large in textiles, but, however, cotton, cotton sails and home needs. Dealings have been unusually active in food products and spotting goods.

"Bank clearings, $792,549,981, reveal some of the effect of prevailing weather in the business world, being 1.9 per cent less than last week and 1.9 per cent less than the week before, but 10.1 per cent more than the week last year. Compared with the same period brought into the financial centers 1909, the current amount that had been received from the country is a corresponding period. Was the President in error when he spoke of the tariff and the revenue?

"But some are not so pessimistic, this large gain is because of higher dollars. Not so. The eight leading cities reported February (March's figures are to be published in a few days) showed a decrease in the aggregate of 2.1 per cent, and compare with last year by 12 per cent, of which those who insist on "down-ward revision" seem certainly complacent, even though the wisdom of some of the "drops" in that respect is open to doubt. The fact is, there is a steady increase in the amount of duties collected, coming in. While the amount of imports for the month of February is known, the proportion paying duty is not yet at hand, but at no loss at the figures for the period from December 1 to February 15 in 1909 and 1910, which comprises with 27 last issues, and 26 in the corresponding week of 1909.—Bradstreet's.

Charlevoix Sentinel

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR

Good Words for Charlevoix.

We take the following from the Christian Science Monitor, of Boston, which, by the way, we regard as one of the best newspapers in the United States:

On the east Grand Traverse and Little Traverse bays, enclosing Crooked Lake, with Pine Lake forming her eastern boundary and stretching southeastery 16 miles into the interior with an arm about midway on the southern shore, is situated the city of Charlevoix, known as "Charlevoix, the Beautiful," famed for its natural advantages, and one of the fine summer resorts of Michigan. To substantiate the claim Charlevoix points to her boating, bathing, fishing and golfing, and to her exceptionally fine scenery, climate, hotels and her transportation facilities, including railroad, steamboat lines, motoring, driving, rolling, etc.

The boating facilities are such as to suit the most fastidious and variegated tastes. Lake Michigan affords scope for the most adventurous and the waters of Round lake afford a secure place for any sized boat.

For bathing, the sandy stretches of the Lake Michigan shore, with its rolling surf, cannot be surpassed, while on Pine lake there is the additional advantage of shallow water for quite a away out from shore. The fisherman also finds unlimited opportunities in angling his pastime. Charlevoix maintains a fine 18 hole golf course.

The hotel facilities also are of the best. On the shore of Pine Lake are the Belvedere, the Inn and Chicago Club, while a mile away to the west on the bluff of Lake Michigan lie the beach hotel and Fountain City house, and overlooking Round Lake, the Hallett and Linda Vista, which are each and all exclusively for the accommodation of summer visitors. The Edson Bakery Inn and Hartlett house operate their doors the year around for the commercial and resort trade.

Charlevoix also has advantages and attractions industrially. In farming and fruit growing it is also exceptionally well situated.

Boy City, an institution just founded here by Judge Willis Brown, promises to be a great addition to the resort features of Charlevoix, as well as a great educational institution for the boys. The tract of land purchased on Pine Lake is being developed.

Elias Finches a Child

In Pittsburg a savage lion fondled the hand that a child thrust into his cage. Danger to a child is sometimes great when least regarded. Often it comes through Cold, Croup, and Whooping Cough. They slay thousands that Dr. King's New Discovery could save. Charles Carter writes: "I used it for a few days cured our baby of a very bad case of Croup," signed Mrs. George H. Doyle, of Flat Rock, N.C. "We always give it to him when he takes cold. Its a wonderful medicine for babies." Best for Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Asthma, Hemorrhages, Weak Lungs. 50c. $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

Bertha McCalmon's sister, Mrs. Will Webster, of East Jordan visited the class Monday morning, May 2.

The Fly on the Ceiling.

It is often a matter of wonder how flies get on to the ceiling, because to do so they have to turn a somersault in the air, said Mr Henry Hill in the course of a lecture delivered at the London Institution. A fly, said Mr Hill, has a backward and forward movement of the wings and one part by turn then round. In addition to the up and down motion of a fly's wings, they enables it to turn in almost any direction. At the end of each one of a fly's feet there is a white pad with about 1200 hairs on it. Upon these hairs are great small drops of gum so that the fly is really glued to the ceiling.

A Man's Pay For Her.

Mrs. Rafferty—Are ye insine' much stock in this attempt that a lot in the Missions are made to get a wife for us, Mrs. Rafferty? Mrs. Rafferty—I ain't botherin' me head about such things. I'm satisfied to let Danny and the boys do all the voting for me family. But I do think that a woman should get man's pay. Mrs. Kelly—Wuh, I can assure you Mrs. Rafferty, that I get one man's pay or know the reason why. Jerry Saturday night.—National Monthly.

An Instrument of Torture.

In the Isle of Man the wedding ring was formerly used as an instrument of torture. Mr. Cyril Davenport in his book on jewelry remarks that there once existed a custom in that island "according to which an unmarried girl who had been offended by a man could bring him to trial, and if he were found guilty she would be presented with a sword, a rope and a ring. With the sword she might cut off his hand, with the rope she might hang him, or with the ring she might marry him. It is said that the latter punishment was that invariably inflicted."—London Standard.

Humoring Him.

"Oh, I forgot to tell you to bring down my scissors, too," said the spoilt wife. "They're on the table in the bedroom. Won't you get them for me?"

"See here," complained the indulgent husband, "I'm tired of waiting on you in this way."

"Are you, dear? Well, just be patient, and I'll let you wait on me in some other way."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Contradictory.

"Mrs. McManus, you're a lady and your husband is a gentleman, but mind you Mother O'Leary, he thinks he comes from a family of robbers, so he does."—Boston Transcript.

Defer not till tomorrow to be wise.—Cosgrove.

Notice to Lot Owners in Brookside Cemetery.

The Board of Cemetery Commissioners have found that the present method of doing work in Brookside Cemetery is unsatisfactory, both to the Board and the lot owners. In the future the lot owners will be mailed a bill during the month of April, or care of lot during the season, and until the amount is paid there can be no work done on the lot.

Those who pay their bills prior to May 5th, can have their lots fixed up before Decoration Day—others will be taken care of as fast as possible after the bill has been paid.

—Harry Dodge has accepted a position as clerk in the Lewison store.

—Geo. H. VanPelt and wife are spending a month at Asheville, N. C.

—The fish hatchery has closed for the season, and the force has returned to Northville.

—Miss Jillian Emrey, who has been spending the winter in Grand Rapids, is home on a visit.

—James Perry, a well known old resident, who has been in Massachusetts the past year, is here on a short visit.

—"The Sunny South," a colored minstrel aggregation of good reputation, at the Charlevoix Theatre Saturday night of this week.

—The election of some of these city editors is amazing. The Grand Rapids Press says that "Charlevoix is epitomizing in Irish an name."

—Dan Durance, of this city, who has been working at Boyne City for some time, was reported yesterday as very low with pneumonia, at that place.

—J. J. Hallett has converted the lot in the rear of the Hallett House into a beautiful park with tennis court. The Hallett House is one of the best summer homes in Northern Michigan.

—The Concert band, now under the business management of Lisle Shanahan, will give weekly street concerts during the summer. The boys have made remarkable progress during the winter, and do good work.

—W. G. Campbell, manager of the Majestic Theatre, has leased the Charlevoix Theatre, and will conduct both places. The Majestic will be continued as a vaudeville and vaudeville place, and the Charlevoix will continue the same line of entertainments as formerly. The "Sunny South" colored company will appear at the Charlevoix May 14th.

—Even Garden Island, of the Beaver group, is slipping into the fruit belt. Fred M. Benham, a well known fruit tree man, who was in the city Saturday, has 500 acres on that island, and he went there Monday to arrange for the setting out of a large number of trees.

—Hon. John Nichols will sail from New York May 18th for a trip to England. An interesting feature of the trip is that he will be accompanied by his four daughters—Mrs. Bessie Mason, of California, Mrs. H. W. Peddock, Mrs. A. F. Bridge and Mrs. D. F. Morch, of this city. Mrs. Mason is now on her way east. The party will go by way of Washington, where they will remain several days.

—Harry Nicholls,—modest, quiet, reliable Harry,—has repudiated single blessedness," and now, right in the epoch of thrilling, exciting events, has quietly and modestly become a Benedict. He slipped away north recently, but, owing to his frequent business trips in that direction, his absence was not noticed. He returned last week with a bride,—who was Miss Mabel Wood, well known in Charlevoix. They may have taken a wedding trip, but Harry is blushingly reticent. However, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls are at home at the Nicholls residence, on the north side. A large circle of friends, in fact everybody in Charlevoix, extend hearty felicitations.

—Miss Merle Fehs returned home from Chicago Friday evening.

—Chas. Nosrey, who has a Grand Rapids position, is home on a visit.

—Wm Finneno Jr., has accepted a position as book-keeper in the Booth Co. offices in this city.

—Mrs. Jones McCrory, of Grand Rapids, is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Carpenter.

—Mrs. H. P. Foley is at her cottage on the Belvedere grounds. Mr. Foley has been in Chicago several days, but is expected here this week.

—The lighthouse engineer's steamer Hyacinthe arrived Tuesday afternoon with the material for the Keeper's new residence at the buoy station.

—Geo. Schulte, of Hayes, was adjudged insane in probate court last week, and was taken to the Traverse City asylum last Friday by undersheriff Weiker.

—The Ladies' Auxiliary of Marion Center Grange will give a warm sugar social at the Grange hall Friday evening, May 20th. A program will be furnished. Still 10 and 15 cents.

—Grant Harrison, the premier lumber inspector of Northern Michigan, and a resident of Petoskey, was in town this week, on duty at the Charlevoix Lumber Co. dock.

—John A. Lynn returned from New York last Saturday, with pretty good prospects of building another Summer Garden for the Anheuser Bush people at St. Louis, and another on the Hudson at New York.

John Cobiens, an inmate of the Traverse City asylum from Eveline township, this county, died in that institution last Saturday. The funeral and interment took place here Tuesday afternoon. Deceased was 79 years of age.

—Frank Glassford has taken the contract of erecting a bungalow for Egbert Carpenter, on the lot in the rear of the Carnegie Library, on Clinton street. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter expect to occupy it during the summer months.

—The Levinson opening last Saturday was an event that marked a distinct forward step in the mercantile progress of Charlevoix. The beautiful new store was crowded all day, and many words of praise were spoken of both Van Pelt and the Levinsons for the enterprise shown.

—Mrs. Louise Mueller, (Miller,) widow of the late Leopold Mueller, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Millard Olney, in this city, last Saturday. Deceased was a pioneer of this section. She was born in Germany, coming to this country while young. She came with her late husband to Northern Michigan thirty years ago, buying forty acres of the Robert A. Miller homestead, on section 4, Marion township. She sold the farm and removed to town about ten years ago. She was a member of the Hemon Catholic church, and was 82 years of age.

—Western Michigan land prices should be advanced at once, especially the prices of the land suited for orchard purposes. People of means are a little shy about Michigan lands because they are in a different class from California fruit lands, which are no better than ours, are often sold at $1,000 an acre. As soon as we get our lands marked up $100 and better an acre, we will begin to see more of the class of people that we are anxious to have as settlers instead of our unemployed acres. All Western Michigan farm lands should be advanced in price at once, so the impression will not get abroad that our lands are cheap and poor, for they are not poor, and should not be cheap.—Development Bureau Bulletin.

CALLED HOME

Sudden Death of Mrs. Mary Wood—Another Pioneer Gone to Her Reward.

Mrs. Mary Wood, relict of the late Orvis D. Wood, died at her home in this city last Thursday morning. The death of this pioneer lady was not only a surprise but a shock to the entire community.

While not enjoying the best of health recently, her family and friends had no thought of dissolution. Grief following the very recent death of her little grand daughter was undoubtedly the cause of her taking off. The six-year old child of her daughter, Mrs Fred H. Clark, of Hankes township, was living here with her grandmother and attending school. Mrs. Wood was devotedly attached to the child. Last week, after not a brief illness, the sweet little girl, the pride of her parents, was waited to the angels. From the hour of the child's death the broken hearted would until it ceased to beat.

Deceased was born in Hartford, Ohio, in January 19, 1844. She was married in 1866 in Hartford, Ohio, to Orvis D. Wood. In 1867 they removed to Northwood, this county, where Mr. Wood was engaged in the lumbering and mercantile business for several years. Mr. Wood removed with his family to Charlevoix about twenty-five years ago. Mr. Wood died in this city Sept. 27th, 1902.

Deceased was the mother of three children, all of whom survive her—H. B. Wood, of this city, Miss Phila Wood, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Fred H. Clark, of Hanks, Antrim county.

Mrs. Wood's solicitude and affection for her family was not only familiar to her immediate friends and neighbors, but to the entire community, by whom she was always known as thoughtful and sympathetic in the presence of neighborhood afflictions, and cheerfully helpful in all good works. The pathetic circumstances attached to her death elicit more than usual interest and sympathy.

The funeral was from the north side home Saturday afternoon, Rev. H. A. Pennsun conducting the services. The attendance was large, and the floral tributes were profuse and beautiful.

Fruit Crop Will Reach $6,000,000

George E. Howe, editor of the Fruit Belt of Grand Rapids, has sent the following telegram to the Chicago papers that spread stories of great damage to fruit:

"Michigan will have more than $6,000,000 worth of fruit to sell in spite of the reported damage by cold winds and frost.

"Orchards that were plowed early so as to give time for the small rootlets to heal before the buds opened will have the advantage over neglected orchards and those plowed later in the season. The new feeders starting out before the buds opened in early tilled orchards will help greatly to give food and vigor to the young fruit buds and help to carry them through the cold shock.

"Early warm weather started the propagation of scale and scab as well as other orchard pests and the recent cold winds and frost came in time to destroy them while they were yet very young.

"No Michigan fruit will be better and cleaner this year than ever before and it is quite likely that the frost and cold that have frightened so many will do more good than harm."

To Gasoline Boat Owners.

Attention is called to the regulations governing the running of gasoline boats, which I am instructed to strictly enforce.

A bell shut up in a locker or lying loose upon the bottom of the boat is not compliance with the regulations. It must be mounted when the boat is running.

Marine lights must be displayed at present.

I speak only of these two regulations because they are so frequently violated. I had much rather do a kindly, accidentally than to report infractions, and scolding boat not be construed as ridiculous. These co-operate with me to avoid trouble.

Deputy Collector and Inspector of Customs

WANTED—Mich., Farm Land. Improved and unimproved, write me for information, also city property and building lots to exchange for farms towns. CALVIN E. FRENCH, 1112 North Jefferson Avenue, Peoria, Ill.

FOR SALE 4½ acres well adapted for fruits or gardening purposes one mile from Court House. Also fruit farms, apply to H. S. HARSHA.

—Robert Caldwell, of Traverse City, was in the city on business Tuesday.

—Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew, who has been south all winter, arrived home Thursday for the summer.

—Hyen A. Marshall will give weekly dances at Bank Hall during the summer. The first one will occur May 20th.

—Ralph W. Smith, for the past year or more a clerk in L. S. See's store, has accepted a position in Pontiac, and has already moved there.

—Dallas Boudeman and wife and J. J. Knight and wife, of Kalamazoo, were here Monday and Tuesday, in preparation for later occupation of their summer cottages.

—Miss Smith, the efficient book keeper at the Charlevoix County Bank, feeling the need of a rest, has decided to spend the summer with her parents in Hayes. She is succeeded by Miss Elsie See.

—A. S. Coutant, formerly editor of the Mt. Pleasant Enterprise, special agent for Michigan Indian census, has been working among the enumerators of Charlevoix and Antrim counties this week, and made the SENTINEL office a call.

—Geo H. Markham, the Big Rapids scenic artist has completed the scenery for the Majestic Theatre, including the splendid drop curtain. The center piece of the latter is taken from a view of the Charlevoix harbor entrance and is not only correct in every detail, but exhibits the touch of a master hand. The outfit of scenery is complete for all ordinary requirements. Mr. Markham also did some very artistic lettering on the Levinson store and postoffice fronts.

CIRCUIT COURT

Regular May Term Began Monday Morning—Prosecution Fails Down On One of the Three Swift Cases.

After a review of the calendar Monday morning, Judge Mayne called the first one of the three cases of The People vs. Herman I. Swift. Then it was discovered that the boy who was the complaining witness had gone back on his story and acknowledged that he had lied. Of course this threw the case out of court. The prosecution claims that the boy was "lured," and the defense retaliates with the assertion that the whole outfit of witnesses against Swift was lured, and there you have it.

Two cases against Swift remained on the calendar, but by mutual agreement of counsel and the consent of the Judge, they were put over to the August term. The court then proceeded to the trial of civil cases.

Le Roi Est Morte. Vive le Roi.

Edward VII of England is dead and George V is king.

After an illness of but three days the king died Friday of bronchial pneumonia. The Prince of Wales, as George V took up the sceptre.

The king's last words were—"I think I have done my duty." He spoke well. Whatever may be said of Edward as Prince of Wales, as king he measured up to the full stature of wise and humane kingship.

History will give Edward a place among the great statesmen of the age. His reign has been marked by masterly diplomacy and distinct rectitude of rule. "The king is dead; long live the king."

MICHIGAN SUCCESS

D. B. Gerew Went to California Where He Flourished.

From Petoskey Evening News:

The memory and reminiscences of many an old pioneer of northern Michigan, and particularly of East Jordan and Charlevoix county will be aroused at the mention of the name of Dan B. Gerew as he was more familiarly known and called. Dan Gerew was a common woodsman in those days, and was first known to a few Petoskey people down about Cadillac, where he drove an ox team in a lumber camp. That was along in the seventies, and no one ever dreamed that Dan Gerew would ever develop into a financier or capitalist, but his career is a sort of a fairy tale.

A little later Gerew drifted, either intentionally or otherwise, over to East Jordan, and became a lumberjack at Wm. Cobiens' camp, and though a half fellow, well met, and capable of making and holding friends, he gave no appearance of having reached his awakening, though the friendships he made later stood him well in hand, and he became the owner of the leading hostelry at East Jordan and enjoyed a splendid patronage, and a little later on was elected sheriff of Charlevoix county, serving with distinction and efficiency for one term, retiring at the end thereof, concluding that there were greener fields for the picking out west, to which he went, landing first at Bakersfield, California, where he remained a few years, later going to Los Angeles where he seems to have made a veritable ten strike, for he has acquired a most desirable property in that city and contiguous places easily worth a half million of dollars, and is piling up wealth with ease, for everything that Dan Gerew touches seems to turn into gold under his Midas finger.

In addition to two magnificent places in Los Angeles, Mr. Gerew has a summer resort business at the Catalina Islands off the coast of California which literally coins money for him, and no more popular caterer has ever been in the west, but the best thing about him is, that he is the old Dan Gerew of no team and lumber jack days, and when he made friends in his little East Jordan hotel and as sheriff of Charlevoix county, and in that capacity his acquaintances and friendships grew in Petoskey and Emmet county.

Last winter Jake Struble and Grant Harrison went to California for recreation, and happened upon Mr. Gerew, and were immediately recognized by that gentleman, and his hospitality was more than of the warm variety, for everything, including his automobile, was placed at their disposal at the home on, without money and without price, and nothing was quite good enough for the friends of less prosperous days. Messrs. Struble and Harrison received the most royal entertainment at the hands of Mr. Gerew up to the last moment of their visit there, and no wonder they hated to leave, even to come back to the only one.

Mr. Gerew has not lost one iota of his interest in his old home and the people and inquired very particularly of many of the pioneers of northern Michigan and East Jordan, and expressed a desire to meet some of the old friends and swap reminiscences with them, and enjoy living over again the days of his younger manhood. He delights to keep in touch with Michigan and people of this region, and promises that his system of irrigation will be extended freely to any northern Michigan people who drop in on him at Los Angeles.

"The Mystery of a Hansom Cab," Etc.

CHAPTER XXIII.—(Continued.)

But she was too late, for before I could complete the sentence Mr. Elwell—as smiling and composed as ever—entered the door, followed by himself quietly before the enraged Mrs. Dallas.

"Do not go, madam," said he, quietly. "I have something to show you."

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Dallas, her curiosity—like that of the fairer sex—getting the better of her rage.

"You will see in a few minutes. Miss Dallas—you pale, I hope soon to bring back the roses to your cheeks—Mr. Lyimer—

"Don't speak to me, you scoundrel, until you tell me what you have done with the Miss Dallas!"

"You must know in a few minutes. Mrs. Dallas—Mr. Lyimer—I believe that this remedy should end—

"Scoundrel! end what? Speak, I command you. You mean tragedy!"

"I mean no ill to the lady," interrupted Elwell, opening the door. "All true comedies end in the marriage of the hero. There, is my explanation."

The whole people gave a simultaneous cry of astonishment and delight, for there, on the threshold of the door, stood—alive and well, stood—Maurice Lyimer.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"My dear Lyimer, I owe the joy with which you and Miss Dallas hailed the appearance of Mr. Elwell, to my own thought, dead, I was—for the time being—quite forgotten—and very natural, too, for, in the excitement, I had quite left the room and went to the Lodge, where Mr. Sarby was in a trance, waiting for the time to which Mr. Lyimer, Miss Dallas, Mrs. Dallas, and myself, had agreed for the release of the poison of the devil-stick. I, as I have learned since, had been a very long time, and I received his friend, as now, my cousin Jim, you have your two boys with you again, alive and well. The comedy is finished and we have not right in denying to these past events the melodramatic sense of tragedy.

"Naturally, you will wish to know how the dead came to be alive, and for what reason I behaved as I did. Well, here you shall hold the whole explanation so fully given that there will be no excuse for you to seek further. Indeed, if you do so, you will not find one, as by the time you receive this letter I shall be well on my way to New York, where I have an appointment to go attend, and as I told you at our last meeting, you will never see me again. When, you finish this letter, you will think that I ought to be sorry, but it is just as well that I should remain beyond your ken.

"I am—as you know—a physician, but I am also a chemist, and I am a kind—a man of genius, I have brains, but not money, and I have discovered a chemistry, money, I regret to say, is entirely wanting in my pocket. In this case, I have needed money, and that in large quantities, for my work, I need and make it for myself—not having the time to waste in hunting for what I gain it by making a rich marriage. For many years I had loved one which was Lilie Lyimer. I have known men and ladies, old and young, confound my modesty at alone sitting I always say to myself, I have a rich mortgage, I have large quantities, all my life. As I could not make my fortune in the ordinary and honorable manner—I resolved to make it by a rich marriage. I have loved the world Lilie Lyimer. I have traveled the world Lilie Lyimer, and some years ago, Chancellor, and some years ago, Chancellor, dirty at whose office I was then, introduced me to Mr. Harbedous. While there I was attracted, as I always am by the superstitious of the African race of mind, to the idea of the devil-stick, the Voodoo Stone, and by a strange chain of circumstances, which I do not relate, I gained possession of that powerful talisman, and I learned its all mystic Anerites. With this stone in my possession I was king—as I speak—of all the black race. This power I determined to use to my own advantage, and through it to make a rich marriage.

"I discovered that Mrs Dallas was the richest woman in the West. Know that she had one fair and marriageable daughter, and that Miss Lilie and her sister were under the influence of a Negress called Dido, who was a perfect believer in the cult of Obi. I determined, then, that I would be the husband to my will in honor of the Voodoo Stone, and to make the daughter, unfortunately, Mrs Dallas and her child were in America, so, instead I went in order to procure my son, and obtain a rich wife in the person of Miss Isabella Dallas. From information obtained in Harbedous I learned that they were living so to their town I regulated my actions, and I made the acquaintance of yourself, of Mr. Elwell, and Mr. Sarby, and also of Mrs. Dallas and her daughter. I was not charmed, all which I intended to make my wife.

"But here, as you may guess, I found an since-owned obstacle. The young man was in love with Mr. Ayimer, and would have nothing to do with an elderly lunatic like myself. I determined to remove that difficulty, but, by death, but by great misfortune I could so away with all risk and injury. Miss Dallas is my prisoner. Shall I say that I abide to the devil-stick?

"I know that you possessed it, my dear Major, as I had been informed of the existence and of its owner by Dido. Over this mystery, by means of the Negroes, I had a strong and powerful power. She was ready to do whatever I wanted, and I employed her in unwarding my schemes. Her grandmother, we had known from childhood, in the country of the wand of sleep, and knew all about it, for she had been a high priestess, in polish. Those secrets, Dido, I unskilled to Dido, and I commanded obtain the devil-stick, to make that proper fresh poison, and to make the stick against my rival, Mr. Ayimer.

"And now I need scarcely say that it does not kill, but merely sleeps its victim in a trance state, which is so closely resembles death that not one in ten thousand can tell the difference. If the trance continues, the victim dies, and it is that which I, by the way, I intended from Lilie Lyimer, the only child of my uncle, if, at the time, can restore the victim from a state of lethargy to his relative value. I had made up my mind to use the stick, if, in the end, I could not get Mr. Ayimer, a chance of escape, I proposed to him a state of life in death. This phrase describes exactly the trance state. I have wounded by the devil-stick—impersonated with the poison.

"However, Mr. Ayimer did not take my warning and leave off of paying Miss Dallas. On the contrary, he seemed to have an added myself. Here, I must confess, I was wrong, I should have left the lady to my fate, but I was so jealous of Mr. Ayimer, I was so—I was—I was—I was

The Most Liberal and Most Remarkable Offer that Has Ever Been Made to Piano Buyers of Charlevoix and Vicinity

Grinnell Bros.' Piano Club

A Club of 100 Members to Participate in one of the Greatest Deals Ever Made in the History of the Piano Business

On Monday, May 2d, we inaugurated the biggest and most sensational Piano Sale ever conducted by any House. We are going to decisively demonstrate to the people of Charlevoix and vicinity our undisputed leadership in the Piano business and our ability to make far lower prices on high-grade Pianos than any other concern in the entire State.

The Deal and the Piano

This transaction involved the purchase, at one time, for cash, of one thousand (1000) Pianos. One hundred (100) of these have been allotted to our store at Petoskey, and for thirty [30] days—MONDAY, MAY 2d, to TUESDAY, MAY 31st—the GRINNELL BROS.' PIANO CLUB will afford Piano buyers of this section the greatest opportunity ever known to obtain a beautiful, high-grade Piano at a remarkable saving and on the most liberal of terms.

The instrument we have chosen for this great Piano Club is the well known, reliable SMITH & BARNES, built by one of the largest and most reputable concerns in the entire United States. We have handled the SMITH & BARNES Piano for upwards of twenty years and we cannot speak too highly in praise of its sweet, sympathetic quality of tone, responsive touch, splendid durability, and the remarkable satisfaction it invariably gives in the home.

-- Is $350.00 --

Thousands of these Pianos have been sold all over the United States at $350. Hundreds more are being sold every month at $350—many of them right here in Michigan. They are worth $350. Measured by any standard of value you wish, they are worth $350. They are worth it on our floors, or on the floors of any reputable Piano Dealer in the country. . . . . .

The Grinnell Bros.' Club price is $257.50. This includes freight, drayage, stool, scarf and one tuning. At this price, considering its real value, and what it is sold for everywhere else by other houses, it means that 100 families will each effect an actual saving of $92.50. Our gigantic spot cash purchase makes this possible. Remember, this opportunity is available to but 100 people in this locality—100 people who join the Grinnell Bros.' Piano Club at once.

The Grinnell Bros.' Club Terms

These 100 Pianos will be sold on terms of $5.00 Cash; the balance in monthly installments of only $6.00 each. The $5.00 just about covers the cartage and delivering, yet the $5.00 payment made when you join the Club, is Credited to Your Account.

The Piano is delivered immediately. You do not have to wait until the Club is filled. You get your Piano when you join, and your next payment is not due until thirty days after you make this initial payment of $5.00.

Here is a proposition which must appeal to every Pianoless home. It places a splendid Upright Piano within reach of every family. So liberal is it and so great the value offered that our Club membership will be complete and each of these 100 instruments occupying a place in some music-loving home before the 30 days have expired. Act promptly. It is not at all probable that such a remarkable opportunity will ever be presented you again.

THE GRINNELL BUILDING, DETROIT.
The Headquarters of Grinnell Bros.' 24 Music Stores.

The Advantages of the Grinnell Bros.' Piano Club

You have a choice to save ninety-two dollars and fifty cents on your Piano purchase. This is the discount each and every member of the Grinnell Bros.' Piano Club receives. No Piano at $350 offers greater value than does the celebrated SMITH & BARNES. There's even more than $92 to difference between this instrument at $257.50 and any other you might purchase at $350, for this piano is made by a concern noted throughout the country for the excellence of its goods. It is high grade in every particular and certain to give permanent satisfaction.

Every Club Piano is guaranteed without reserve for TEN YEARS. There are no "ifs" or "ands" in the guarantee—just a straight-out guarantee as strong as we know how to make it in writing—a guarantee backed by forty two years of honorable business dealing, and vast resources. We know the character of this Piano—it is worthy our guarantee, and worthy a place wherever a really fine instrument is desired.

That there be no hesitation whatever on your part in joining the Club and purchasing the Smith & Barnes Piano—that you may absolutely assure yourself of the quality of this instrument, we make you the following unprecedented offer: We will allow you twelve months—one whole year—in which to satisfy yourself as to the quality of the Grinnell Bros.' Club Piano. If, at the end of that time, this instrument does not prove to be all that you expect, you have the privilege of exchanging it, WITHOUT ONE PENNY'S LOSS, for any other instrument we sell, of equal or greater value. (and we sell over twenty would famous makes.)

A beautiful stool to match the piano, and latest style silk or velour Drape, are included without extra charge.

The piano will be delivered FREE anywhere in Michigan and tuned once with no charge.

And $5.00 is the total sum required to join the Grinnell Bros' Piano Club—to obtain this handsome and dependable instrument—to share in all these special privileges. Why longer put off buying? It is not this opportunity you have long waited for?

$5.00 mailed today makes you a member of this great club, and one of the beautiful pianos will be shipped to your home tomorrow.

In your letter state what style and wood you prefer.

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone." MRS. LIZZIE PAINTER, 804½ 3d Ave, Evansville, Ind.

Western railroads fired tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission, showing the rise in freight rates of from 16 to 33 per cent, effective on June 1.

BJORNSON IS DEAD.

Famous Novelist Dies in Paris from Paralytic Stroke.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the famous Norwegian novelist, playwright, poet and publicist, died at the Hotel Wagram in Paris in Paris the other night in the 78th year of his age. His wife, whom he married fifty-two years ago, was with him at the end. Bjornson suffered a stroke of paralysis last June, and was brought to Paris in November for electrotherapeutic treatment. It was reported lately that he was growing better. The change came unexpectedly.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson was born near the town of Molde, Norway, December 8, 1832. Poet, novelist, dramatist, editor and apostle of peace, two brief years ago he was described in his character—the jaunty nature, which he drew from his father, a country parson, and the fighting spirit, which came to him from his more remote ancestors, the old Norse sea-rovers. He was known as the Prophet-Poet of Norway. Toward him the people looked for guidance, and with his cudgels he fought in the cause of truth and justice.

At the age of 20 he entered the University of Christiania, and while there began writing in a serious vein. After leaving the university he became editor of the Bergen Theater. This was in 1857. The next five years were devoted to travel and study in Denmark, Germany and Italy, and then Bjornson went back to Norway for ten years. He began the work of plays which conquered the Norwegian stage and also invaded the Danish, Swedish and German theaters. As Bjornson grew older he went into politics as a reformer.

PLAN TO RAISE FREIGHT RATES.

Railroads to File New System of Tariffs with Commerce Commission.

Freight rates showing considerable increase over the present rates from western territory to the Atlantic seaboard will be filed with the Interstate Commission to become effective June 1. This is the first step taken by the railroads which appears to indicate a purpose generally to increase freight rates throughout the country in order to enable them to meet their increased operating expenses.

Already tariffs have been filed for western rates from Chicago for the transportation of wool from Minneapolis and St. Paul to New York and other Atlantic seaboard points. The present rate on wool from Minneapolis to New York is 34 cents per hundred pounds. Under the proposition of the tariff the rate will be 44 cents a hundred pounds, an increase of nearly 29 per cent. The rate to Boston will be proportionately higher. An increase has been made in the freight rate on live hogs between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Chicago of 2½ cents a hundred pounds. This is an increase of about 12 per cent over the present rate. The tariffs filed by the railroads with the commissioners are for all the country west of the Pennsylvania territory and the increase will become effective simultaneously on all of them.

WEATHER COSTS $500,000.000.

Warmest April Day in Eleven Years and Chilliest in 30.

One record of a kind was set warmest April day in eleven years. The thermometer said 84 degrees Friday. April was the coldest April day in thirty years. Temperature 23 degrees. The mean average for the two days 55 degrees.

This conflict of the gods of heat and cold, and the resultant extremes, will cost America a billion dollars in 1910. Oats, cotton, corn, fruit trees, vegetables, wheat and other crops were damaged to a sum estimated at $500,000,000. And reports received from all over the Middle West and South indicate that the extremely hot and dry weather will add much to the damage.

Warm rains, which are not forth coming are needed everywhere. Wheat and corn in Illinois are deteriorating, like in Missouri. The situation in Kansas and Nebraska is pictured as worse even, being aggravated by the extremely dry weather. It is estimated that 3,000,000 acres of spring wheat, and 10,000,000 acres of winter wheat in the United States and other grains seeded. Twenty per cent of the South's cotton crop will be replanted or abandoned entirely.

SCHOOL ROD UP TO HIGH COURT.

Supreme Justices Take Case of Teacher Who Dropped Boy.

Is the "tune of the hickory stick" to be given the moral support of the Supreme Court of the United States? That is a question it will be called upon to decide between now and vacation days. If the court gives its approval to this method of discipline, Annie Kelley, an Illinois teacher, will escape from a school squabble with no greater punishment than having been declared a bankrupt. If the court puts the foot down on corporal punishment she probably will have to go to jail for flogging a pupil.

In 1906 Miss Kelley was teaching in the primary department of the public schools of Tolono, Champaign County, Ill. According to a brief Miss Kelley has just filed in the Supreme Court, Michael Burke, 11 years old, was not as good as he could be. In the presence of the school on Dec. 4, 1906, Miss Kelley tells the court, he committed a breach of proper decorum by using vulgar and profane language at and toward your petitioner and jerking her upon the floor and striking and kicking her." After the principal had ordered her to chastise Michael, she flogged him with a pointer. When the Burke brought a suit for damages against her, alleging trespass and other things, the State courts referred a judgment against Miss Kelley.

After the judgment Miss Kelley was declared a bankrupt in the ground that the national bankrupt law does not release a person from payment of a debt incurred through the commission of "willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another." Miss Kelley was arrested similar as in Illinois cases for failure to satisfy the judgment. She went into the federal courts for her discharge. The district court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois found that the debt was not incurred through willful and malicious injuries. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the judgment. Miss Kelley now has asked the Supreme Court to review her case.

WESTON SETS NEW RECORD

72-Year-Old Pedestrian Finishes Transcontinental Walk.

Edward Payson Weston's record-breaking walk across the continent is at an end. At 5:37 o'clock the other morning he set foot on Manhattan island, crossing King's bridge over the Spuyten-Duyvil creek. Cheered by thousands of persons and followed by a cavalcade in the roaring crowd, he walked down Broadway on the last few miles of his journey to the City Hall.

The feat which Edward Payson Weston thus brought to a happy conclusion is unique in the annals of sport. The original program called for the covering of the distance from the Pacific to the Atlantic—approximately 3,400 miles—in ninety walking days. In the face of rains and storms, in defiance of heat and cold, undeterred by numerous minor accidents, and, in the last stages of the journey, trudging along in spite of a sprained ankle, the heroic old man has made it in seventy-seven days. Glorious as is this accomplishment from the point of view of sport pure and simple, it assumes the character of prodigious when it is considered that Weston is 72 years old, and proved that no tempting amount of prize was held out as a reward for his feat. The transcontinental walk was made by the aged philosopher and athlete as an object lesson to the youth of America of the beneficial results to be attained through walking.

GIRL IS A FILEBUG.

Anna Fay Says She is Seized with Desire to Burn Something.

An absurd twist in the psychological processes of Anna Fay, a pretty 19-year-old girl, is indicated by a confession to the police in Newport, R. I., that she is a fire bug. The girl, who was employed as a maid in the home of George W. Iselein, told the police she was subject to violent nervous attacks, during which she felt she must set something afire, so she set fire to the Iselein house. In each case she applied the match in broad day light and helped to fight the blaze after an alarm had been given.

FRIENDS OF MISSIONS IN GREAT GATHERING

AN EVENT OF HIGHEST IMPORT

Every Protestant Church Is Represented in Step Toward Christian Unity.

Representing every Protestant denomination in the United States, labor, business men, foreign missionaries and men of national and world affairs, 1,000 gathered in Chicago for the men's national missionary congress, one of the greatest religious events of recent years. It was the climax of the national campaign of the laymen's missionary movement, in which conventions have been held in seventy cities.

The event which opened at 2 p. m. Tuesday in the Auditorium was the first gathering in the history of the country of representatives of all the Protestant churches. It is regarded as one of the greatest steps ever taken toward christ ing the world and the delegates were from every State in the Union except Nevada. Miss Kelley was arrested similar as in Illinois cases for failure to satisfy the judgment. She went into the federal courts for her discharge. The district court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois found that the debt was not incurred through willful and malicious injuries. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the judgment. Miss Kelley now has asked the Supreme Court to review her case.

Chairman Colgate Hoyt, of the executive committee of the congress, in his address, said: "Christ in Chicago to forward missions from 1910 to 1915 will mean a million dollars a week for five years, and a million men and women." Hoyt said the Christian Science Church, which shook State politics to its foundation, were followed by immediate steps on the part of the authorities to start investigations.

Senator Lorimer broke unexpectedly into the meeting and said: "Christ is the only way." Senator Lorimer said he was a member of the Methodist church and that he was a member of the Methodist church and that he was a member of the Methodist church and that

THE MERCHANTS' FEAST

First Annual Banquet of the Charlevoix Retail Merchants' Association a Pronounced Success.

The banquet given last week Wednesday night at Bakers' Inn under the auspices of the Charlevoix Retail Merchants' Association, was one of the most successful events of its kind in the history of Charlevoix. It was not only a conspicuous event in a gastronomic sense, but broke the record in there being present as guests of the Association two distinguished citizens of Michigan, both candidates for the governorship—Lieutenant Governor Kelley and Hon. Amos Musselman. The banquet followed an informal reception at Bank Hall, where many of our people were permitted to meet the two distinguished guests.

There were 144 covers laid, and every one of them was used. Thirty-two came down from Boyne City in seven automobiles. Of course it was a republican blowout—nobody denies that—notwithstanding the necessarily non-partisan complexion of the Retail Merchants' Association. Therefore county chairman Pearson, of Boyne Falls and secretary Kenyon, of East Jordan, graced the board with their presence. We shall pass over the menu with the statement that it was perfect, as all menus of this kind are at Baker's Inn.

When the cigars came in, Association president Crane introduced toastmaster—Lisle Shanahan—in a few well chosen words. It is need less to say that Mr. Shanahan shone effulgently as a toastmaster. The brevity of his opening speech and introductions showed that he came to the task with a determination to avoid the shoals upon which so many toastmasters are wrecked. His brief talks were marked by humor intelligently placed, hence never misapplied.

Mr. Musselman talked on "Organization," not particularly that sort of organization which some people are pleased to call "the ring," but such organization as that typified by the affairs, and he told them proudly, as one who loves his state.

Mrs. J. L. Crane gave an address on "The Women,"—not the new women, the business women, nor yet the suffragist or suffragette—but the women of the home circle, the kind of women that are the pride of the Nation and the glory of the race,—just the sort of women that the speaker herself so beautifully personifies. Really, we have heard more talk about Mrs. Crane's address than of any other feature of the event. "Splendid" is the expressive term applied to it on all hands. When the banquet broke up it was nearly time for the comet to appear in the eastern sky.

Much, if not most of the credit for the marked success of the occasion is due to the energy and executive ability of the secretary of the Association, Mr. Shanahan. It was an unbounded success in every feature.

AMOS MUSSELMAN

A Compliment That is Deserved.

The Charlevoix Board of Commerce, at a recent meeting, passed the following resolution as a fitting recognition of the valuable work, done by D. S. Payton, in the West Michigan Development Bureau:

D. S. PAYTON

WHEREAS, Daniel S. Payton was duly appointed by the Charlevoix Board of Commerce, whose appointment was endorsed by the Board of Commerce of the Village of East Jordan, to attend the opening meeting of the West Michigan Development Bureau, at Frankfort, Michigan, for the purpose of including the County of Charlevoix in the Association.

AND WHEREAS, Daniel S. Payton succeeded in having the County of Charlevoix included in the said Association, and did thereafter solicit and raise the amount of money necessary to pay the membership fee for said county, and it's share of the expenses for the year 1909.

AND WHEREAS, Daniel S. Payton represented the County of Charlevoix at the Fruit Exhibit of the United States Land and Irrigation Company at Chicago, November 24, 1909 to December 7, 1909

AND WHEREAS, the County of Charlevoix received the highest praise at said Exposition.

AND WHEREAS, Daniel S. Payton does not receive any salary or compensation for the work he has done in the interests of the County of Charlevoix, in the West Michigan Development Bureau, and at the Exposition of the United States Land and Irrigation Company.

THEREFORE, be it resolved that the unanimous vote of thanks of the Charlevoix Board of Commerce be extended to Daniel S. Payton, and that a copy of this resolution signed by the Committee and the President and Secretary of the Charlevoix Board of Commerce, be presented to Daniel S. Payton, and that a copy be furnished to each of the newspapers of the County of Charlevoix.

J. C. Rockwell's New Sunny South Co

After years of experience with all the greatest colored shows of recent times and years of endeavor as a manager of his own aggregation, J. C. Rockwell has reached a secure place in the recognition of the theatre going public Today it is conceded and undisputed fact that his New Sunny South Co., which will appear in the Charlevoix Theatre, Saturday evening, May 14th, is one of the strongest, brightest, most complete and capable colored organizations ever sent on tour. Mr. Rockwell does not believe in putting the greater part of his salary allotment into one or two acts and allowing the balance of the performance to suffer through the employment of cheaper ones, which always disgust the experienced patron, but, he has found that the expenditure of money for the purpose of making each act and detail complete pays twice over in the box office receipts. This explains why the Sunny South always gives unbounded satisfaction. The organization is one of the largest of its kind, being composed of twenty-five colored people, each and every one an expert in specialty work, who do everything funny that darkies can do well and keep the audience in a constant state of laughter and excitement from start to finish.

The organization is accompanied by a high-class vaudeville concert band and a superb orchestra. The band will head the Keystone parade, which will take place at noon.

The prices of admission have been placed at 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Reserve seats are now selling at Chapin's.

Cheboygan Tribune: Never in the history of the city have we heard so much in favor of the local option movement as we have during the last ten days. Men who were rapidly opposed to local option now openly assertion it the law and order league has proved a dismal failure. The Warner-Cranston law is apparently powerless to improve conditions in Cheboygan. The blow that broke the camel's back came when it was announced that one of the signers of the law and order league resolutions had agreed to act as surety on two bonds refused by bonding companies because the parties engaged in the business were looked upon as unfit to be entrusted as saloon keepers. When this state of affairs exists in the city every decent law abiding citizen is justified in rising up in wrath to demand a betterment of conditions. Many of our law abiding, progressive saloon keepers are indignant. They have a right to demand that keepers of disreputable saloons be refused a license.

Traverse City Record: From all over the northwestern part of Michigan comes reports of the large amount of nursery stock that is being planted this spring. Hundreds of thousands of fruit trees are being set out and a great deal of credit is due the West Michigan Development Bureau for by constant agitation, backed up with facts, the Bureau has convinced the farmers that this locality is especially adapted, by reason of climate and soil conditions, to the raising of orchards. What has been done in Boyne City, has been repeated in nearly every town in the western part of the northern half of the lower peninsula. A rough estimate of the number of trees received at this point this spring by delivering agents and large private buyers, places the figures in round numbers at about 50,000.

—We regret to learn that John Dougherty, of Hurlbut Avenue, has sold his property here and will remove to St. Joseph. Mr. Dougherty has made many friends here and the loss will be felt.

—The senate committee on judiciary Monday agreed to report favorably a joint resolution that has already passed the house, authorizing the states bordering on Lake Michigan to enter into a compact for the better enforcement of laws on the waters of Lake Michigan by defining the respective jurisdictions of the states interested over the waters.

—Monthly report of Baxter W. R. C. for April. Our regular meeting April 7th. Thimble party at Mrs. Dutton's April 14th. Visited Bellaire Corps April 16th, and were royally entertained. A thimble party at Mrs. Grays April 28th. About twenty of us visited Mrs. Porter April 30th having a nice ride and a pleasant visit with our past president. Our thimble parties keep up our flower fund, besides paying for other little incidental expenses. We have forty-six members in good standing and wish all to help for Decoration day.

Charlevoix, May 16th, 1910.

Special Order No. 28

In obedience to General Orders from National and department headquarters, Baxter Post will observe its 28th anniversary of the decoration of the soldiers' graves, on Monday at 10 a. m. May 30th, 1910. The soldiers of the Mexican war, the Spanish American war, members of the Women's Relief Corps, ladies of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, Civic societies, city officers, teachers and pupils of the public schools, are most cordially invited to unite in the general ceremonies of Decoration Day.

The members of Baxter Post and W. R. C. will meet at the office of Major E. H. Green, 224 Bridge street, on Sunday at ten o'clock a. m., May 29th, 1910, and march to the Episcopal church corner of Clinton and State streets, where arrangements have been made for holding divine services, preceding Decoration Day; Rev. Herman J. Keyser, rector officiating.

By order of
HARRISON BERDAN,
Commander.

Adjutant.

Charlevoix—Traverse City.

The local high school boys did the unexpected Saturday by winning from the strong Traverse City high school base ball team on the latters grounds at Traverse City. The game was fast from the beginning, only six errors being made by each team which is remarkably small considering the very poor condition of the grounds on which the game was play.

The final score stood in runs 10 to 8 in favor of Charlevoix.

THE BIGGEST AND BEST

Such Was The Recent Meeting of the Western Michigan Development Bureau.

The biggest and best meeting yet held in the history of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, was that of May 4th. It was the annual gathering of the members of the Bureau for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year. Better than twenty Western Michigan cities and villages were represented and all but two of the counties that have joined the Bureau had representation by taxpayers. Furthermore all of the officers, save one, were present and several of the leading newspapers of Western Michigan had representatives on the ground to report the proceedings. The business before the meeting was disposed of with dispatch and with but very few differences of opinion. An immense amount of "boosters" enthusiasm was generated and the entire plan to bring Western Michigan to the front, was given a big lift.

In addition to the election of directors for the coming year, the annual reports of the several officers were received and considered in detail. Plans for the future were discussed at considerable length. It was the general opinion that the work should be extended and broadened and that the future should witness even greater aggressiveness than the past. Plans for advertising, for the offering of premiums for fruit displayers, and for exhibits of farm products were considered and the officers of the Bureau were directed to proceed to their work with increased energy. The treasurer reported a substantial amount of cash on hand and the reports from the counties were to the effect that the 1910 assessments, not yet paid, would soon be taken care of.

The Tax Commission Again.

The Michigan Tax Commission is before the footlights again. This body was established in the interests of the State with reference the assessment of railroad and other large corporate properties. To confine its official functions to this alone would come pretty near being class legislation, and therefore the act gave it general powers.

And so, ten years ago the board went about the State ripping up townships and municipal assessment rolls, raising the assessment on John Smith's forty acre farm and lowering that on the little house and lot of James Johnson. Of other case they knew about as much the true value as the supervisors of Charlevoix or Marion townships knew about the value of a residence property in Detroit. In Charlevoix they made several stupid blunders, and all over the State the Commission made itself ridiculous. Much time was taken in, in Northern Michigan, where the August weather was cool and the hovels at their best.

The storm of protest that went up all over Michigan caused the curtailment of the pleasant official junkets, and local self-government, in the matter of assessments, was restored, outside the limits which the spirit of the law originally designed for it.

And now we are told that the ancient prerogatives of these pleasant parlor car magnates have been restored, and, when the weather gets hot and the choice and juicy sirloin cuts begin to come from Chicago, we may look for a visit and a session with the Michigan Tax Commission.

There is But One Place For Them.

There is but one proper place for "misnargents" and "independents," and that is the democratic camp. This class of dissenters have twice sided in the defeat of the republican party, but it adhered to its principles in defeat, and it will continue to do so if again it goes down under the weight of weak-kneed half-breeds. If it goes down it will go with its colors flying.

The tariff knockers, muck-rakers and yellow journals cannot kill the republican party. It had much better go down in defeat than to truckle to malcontents in its own camp.

Let them get over into the democratic camp, where they belong.

A HEALTHY GROWTH

Nothing of the Mushroom Order in the Growth of Charlevoix—Gratifying Evidences of Prosperity.

Never, since Charlevoix was given a place on the map of Michigan, has there been more striking evidence of the growth and prosperity of Charlevoix than is shown this spring in every phase of its activities. The nature of this evidence is such that permanence and beauty is so plainly inscribed that the wayfaring man though a fool cannot fail to read.

A former resident of Charlevoix, returning from the effete East, where he has been living the past year, lately remarked to the writer that he was amazed at the improvements here during that period. We who live in "Charlevoix the Beautiful" do not fully realize what we are doing until we are thus remined of it or move about and note the contrast. Industrial activity in Charlevoix was never so early manifested in 1909 and thus far in 1910, and we shall keep up the pace for the balance of the year, and close it with a corresponding future outlook. There has not been an idle mechanic or laborer in Charlevoix since the snow-drifts disappeared.

Within the year ending May first five substantial business structures have been erected, and in the neighborhood of twenty good residences have been built, to say nothing of numerous enlargements and improvements of residence property. And an equal significant fact is that public improvements are keeping pace with private enterprise. Paving and sewering is being done in the most attractive parts of the city, and still more being seriously contemplated. There is not another town in Northern Michigan that can make an equal showing.

Local trade is prosperous. Our merchants report steadily increasing cash sales. This is, in a large degree attributable to progress and prosperity among the farmers, as is manifest in the steady and increasing activity in the agricultural implement trade. Indeed this phase of our progress is the most apparent of all.

There is no room for a pessimist in Charlevoix. There is every reason for optimism. The outlook was never more encouraging.

The Mistakes of Swift.

In the matter of this odiferous Swift case the SENTINEL started out with the proposition that the accused was innocent until proven guilty, and viewed with some disapprobation what appeared to be a pre judgment. And we would not now express an opinion as to his guilt or innocence.

But we do not hesitate to express the opinion that Herman L. Swift is an ass, if not a criminal; and he may be both. Three cases, all identical, appeared in the circuit court calendar for the May term. When the first of the three cases was called last Monday it was found that the young complaining witness had recanted and acknowledged that he had lied. Of course that particular one of the three cases was out of court. He was almost immediately thereafter re-arrested on another count for the same offense, and the accused stands just where he stood before the bailiff's gavel fell last Monday morning.

The news that appeared in the Grand Rapids Herald of last Tuesday morning a special news dispatch from Charlevoix, unquestionably written or dictated by Swift, that the defendant in the case will not had been vindicated and discharged from custody. Mr. Swift knew that two cases remained in the calendar, even had not the first one been removed by a new complaint. He knew that he was under $7,000 bail bonds to appear in August.

With Mr. Swift silence is golden, but he does not appear to appreciate the fact. Lying to the public will not help him any, and either he is some fool friend, with his knowledge, lied in that Grand Rapids special.

Zelda Dameron

By

MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

ZELDA DAMERON, an idyl of the Ohio Valley, a natural but entrancing romance, and a real life. This is the truly charming serial which is now presented.

When you read this sterling story you will be delighted at its brisk, fresh tone of modern town life. The characters are genuine flesh and blood men and women. The heroine is a girl who has seen travel abroad and now at home. Zelda Dameron is the typical American girl of the hour. She is something more—a dutiful daughter who sinks all her own individuality in protecting and cleaning a miserly, and later a speculating father, whom she wins to the higher life of true manhood by her noble self-sacrifice.

There is a war flavor to this charming story, a college tinge, and Western-Southern characteristics that will fascinate the reader. The hero is a type of the ambitious young man of the day, an aspiring lawyer, chivalrous and honorable in his dealings with all mankind.

Story is a series of vivid life pictures. You will find no unnatural coloring to its settings, no actors in the rapid life drama that you will not recognize as strikingly natural.

"Zelda Dameron" is sure to meet your approbation as a bright, wholesome story of to-day, full of sparkling incident and a coherent progressive plot that will interest intelligent readers.

CHAPTER I

"She's like Marmaduke; she's really one of us," explained Mrs. Forrest for however "she carries herself, as Marmaduke is her girlhood name, she's dark as we all are."

"I hope she resembles the Dameron traits, they're unattractive," said Rodney Merriam.

Mrs. Forrest and Zelda Dameron, her niece, were sitting in the sunny room that was "your whence-it-stood, bad, so to speak," stepped directly from the train into Mrs. Harris's drawing-room. The place was full of sunshine and warm August and their animated talk blended.

Mrs. Carr was spending the season at Trifleton—a summer resort of Southern Indiana, and had asked her young friend to come to town unexpectedly, while Mrs. Carr's girl protégée had been called home. Mrs. Forrest had her brother and crowed talking to Mrs. Carr's cousin, the girl protégée, who was to join the old gentlemen called "the good points of her father." She was talking to Zelda and Mrs. Carr's cousin, who was a natural other girl, and proved her a deference. Zelda turned from the conversation to Mrs. Carr's cousin, asking if her uncle with a happy conclusion.

"Mr. Rodney Merriam, I believe, she said, "I'm sure I remember that the odd Mr. Merriam. Mrs. Forrest, I'm sure, I remember the Merriams. Why, I remember Mr. Merriam's father was a big man, who came and spent an awfully wicked time with Mrs. Carr's father, who was a big man, who was Zelda's father, who was a big man, who was Zelda's father, who was a big man, who was Zelda

OSBORN FAR IN LEAD

Kelley Strength Dwindling as Campaign Progresses—Osborn People Claim Primary by 50,000—Muskegon Last—Campaign Is Analyzed.

It is prophesied in Detroit by close followers of politics that Chase S. Osborn will win in the gubernatorial primary by more than 50,000. Enthusiastic Osborn supporters declare that it will be nearer 75,000, while none of the users in the state's metropolis put the Soo man's plurality at less than 50,000.

It is conceded by everyone who follows politics here that never has there been such a setback in public sentiment through a short length of time as has been witnessed in the present fight for the Republican nomination for governor of Michigan.

Even the most loyal Osborn man will acknowledge that if the primary had been held about ten days ago Lieutenant Governor Kelley would have been the winner.

But with the opening of the "banquet circuit," Chase Osborn literally gained thousands of votes daily.

When Mr. Osborn took up the active end of the campaign he was unknown to the bulk of the people in the state. But with his first speech he became almost a popular idol. His campaign was opened at Greenville, where he was unknown, but within a month the results of that speech had been to shatter the Eleventh district, schooled previous to that speech as a Kelley stronghold, and to make that district an even chance. And so it was with every speech.

Osborn was an even money proposition by Feb. 1, but from then on he gained by leaps and bounds. At St. Johns he was given an ovation only equalled by those given to president candidates. In two speeches at Detroit he made a tremendous impression, and the Keller workers practically gave up in Wayne county.

Probably the greatest indication of how Mr. Osborn has turned over the state is shown by his county. Here Slater, Labor Commissioner "Dick" Fletcher reigned supreme, and there was betting by the Keller adherents that the lieutenant governor would carry this county 4 to 1 over Osborn. But the Osborn sentiment reached a point in March where, on a direct Osborn-Keller issue, Fletcher was beaten in a county convention, something that hasn't happened in years before.

Many reasons are responsible for the Osborn sentiment. First of all comes the personality of the man. He is the most magnetic speaker in Michigan, and he makes votes with every word he utters during a speech. Backed up by the feeling against the present state administration, which is typified by Mr. Kelley, and the fact that the entire state machine is balancing with might and main to elect Mr. Kelley, or at least to nominate him, for there is a growing feeling in the state that if Mr. Kelley is nominated he has but slight chance of being elected.

The very idea has lost him a good deal of support, many delegates feeling that he will weaken the ticket and hurt their own campaign if he should head the ticket.

Getting down to the matter of figures, the Republican enrollment in the upper peninsula was 44,000, which means that Osborn will come to the state with a plurality in excess of 30,000. This is a tremendous lead for any candidate to overcome, and there is not one chance in 100 that Mr. Kelley can accomplish this.

Warner county is solid for Osborn, and a transfer of delegates from such shops that Osborn will have 15,000 plurality in the county. This goes as well for Sullivan, Ann Arbor, Kalamazoo, Port Huron, Benton Harbor, Muskegon, Manistee and Lakeshore towns.

In the will survey the Tenth district by a big majority, and also the Eleventh, although the latter will be closer. The Fourth district is apparently the closest to the lower peninsula, with McAlister Hamilton ahead, but Osborn will offset this by his vote in the Third district and in the Second. The Third is also conceded to Osborn, with the Ninth and the Seventh will offset Gov. Kelley gains in the Sixth. The development of the congressional fight in the Sixth may work to Osborn's advantage. Congressman Sam Smith is going to be opposed by Senator Frank J. Shields of Howell. If Senator Shields lets in he will keep the Democrats so busy with his own nomination that he will not have time to help Mr. Kelley very much.

Mr. Shields will play but a small part in the state. If he had stood firm for the original declaration for prohibition he might have become a factor through the Democratic vote. He would have secured in addition to the "dries" he was sure of in any event. But his later straddling of the liquor question has disgusted all factions.

Riding it up from all sides, the claim of the Osborn people that Mr. Osborn will be nominated for governor of Michigan by 50,000 looks like a proposition reasonable on.

Northern Michigan

Joseph Warnock has resigned his position as editor of the Emmet County Appeal, and that paper also announced last week that the sheet will be suspended.

A conservative estimate places the number of fruit trees set out this spring in the twenty counties comprising western Michigan at one million. This is a large number. But large numbers are necessary to tell the true story.

Judge Shepard of the Petoskey Circuit Court made a decree that the sum of $5,000 which has been raised by the city of Petoskey for the Petoskey Hook and Manufacturing Co., shall not be paid to that private institution, but must be returned to the city treasury.

Traverse City Eagle: Steward W. S. Walker of the Westpatmog club assisted by Frank Hoard, captured a big rainbow trout in the river by the club house Thursday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock. The big fish when measured was found to be twenty four inches in length and weighed between seven and eight pounds dressed.

There appears to be some friction between Petoskey and the Western Michigan Development Bureau. Petoskey expected that one of her citizens would be elected director of the Bureau at its recent annual meeting, but instead Judge Dodd of Harbor Springs and E. C. Foust of Petoskey were chosen. Petoskey now declines to contribute more to the Bureau until matters are adjusted, and insists that Mr. Foust shall withdraw from the directorate.

A vein of cannel coal five feet in thickness, has been discovered three miles north of Ontawa by Fox Sisters of that city. A shaft is now being sunk to the vein which is reported to be at a depth of twenty five feet. Fox Bros. have been prospecting for over a year and had drilled a test well thirteen inches in diameter and five hundred feet deep. It was understood they were looking for oil. The coal which they have found is highly inflammable and a piece of it can be set on fire with a match and will burn until consumed.

Settlers in the vicinity of Grand Marias having lost their homes and everything else except the clothes on their backs, began arriving in that village according to reports by wireless telegraph. One group arrived there early after they had spent the night in the bed of a stream. Part of the time they were compelled to submerge themselves to keep the flames from burning the clothes from their bodies. In this party were five children who were so severely burned that they had to be cared for in a hospital.

Traverse City Eagle: J. B. Sunday of High Island is in the city today on business, and when interviewed by the Eagle representative he said that he work on the island is progressing rapidly, and that the mill will begin sawing next Monday in full blast. The mill will employ between sixty and seventy-five men when running full and a store out of logs is awaiting to be sawed. The boom on the dock is under way and will soon be completed, although the steamer Chequamegon is able to land there at present.

It is only a matter of a few months before Western Michigan will have its magazine for the advertisement of its wonderful natural resources and to many opportunities for those desiring to get ahead in the world. The name of the publication will undoubtedly be "Western Michigan" and although it may appear first as a quarterly, it is expected that it will soon become a monthly and will be sent to the many locations that belong to the class with "Sunset," which magazine is issued for the advertisement of the Pacific Coast States.

Hope Journal: The Deer Lake people were greatly alarmed yesterday afternoon when the mill at that place caught on fire, resulting from forest fires which had been started in that vicinity a few days ago. Six men were employed in the mill at the time of the fire, but were unable to save anything. It will mean a total loss. The mill has been run by Mr. Keech, resident of Deer Lake, and it is very doubtful that it will be rebuilt. L. F. Knowles owned the structure. This saw mill originally was the leadership mill at Thumb Lake, and was afterwards moved to this city, and then again taken out to Deer Lake, where it was located at the south end of lake.

Traverse City special: Miss Olive Spencer left today for San Diego, Cal., where in a short time she will become the bride of Clark Stocking, a well-known California man and a successful banker of a century ago. In 1852 Miss Spencer with her parents came to Elk Rapids, Mr. Stocking also being a pioneer. Fifty years ago he went west and has never seen his brothers since then. Fifteen years ago his wife died and several years ago, thinking of the pioneer days of Northern Michigan, he wrote to Miss Spencer and, finding her still single, there followed a courtship by mail and then she proposed. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's brother, Milton Spencer, in San Diego. The groom's home is in Los Angeles.

Andrew Yell, a well known Charlton farmer, was terribly injured Friday while dynamiting stumps. He had returned to inspect a fuse which had not gone off, when the explosion took place and as a result he lost a hand and both eyes, besides other injuries.

Petoskey News: Julius Savlan, a former Petoskey boy, [also Charlevoix] who now holds a position with the Monarch Brass company, Cleveland, Ohio, is spending a few days in the city on business and pleasure. His friends will be greatly surprised to learn of his marriage on April 10 to Miss Janet Bodwelas, at the bride's home at Cleveland.

The plant of the Lake Superior Iron and Chemical works of Elk Rapids was damaged about $10,000 by a fire which was discovered in the condensing department about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. The building and engine house were destroyed, also nine condensers and two gas washers as well as the pan house. Rebuilding and repairs will be started at once but the chemical department will be shut down about 20 days.

Commencing on June 24, and continuing all through the summer thereafter, the Northern Michigan Transportation company's steamer Missouri will inaugurate an entirely new weekly service, which will leave Chicago each Tuesday for certain intermediate points, and going through to the Soo, making a regular schedule. It is also expected that the Illinois, which has undergone some extensive repairs and rebuilding, will be in service soon.

Boyne Journal. A little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Whitney, of Lake street, died Sunday night shortly before twelve o'clock. Little Miss Mabel was seven years of age and was sick nine days. The remains were in charge of undertaker Millspaugh, and after a short service at the home conducted by Rev. Hess, they were taken to Charlevoix this morning. Funeral services were held at that place in the Methodist church by Rev. F. M. Taylor and interment made in the Charlevoix cemetery, where a sister was buried some time ago.

Traverse City Record: A week ago today, Mrs. W. O. Holden accidentally dropped a small chamois skin bag containing two diamond rings and other jewels down a waste pipe at the Park Place not noticing her loss until it was too late to recover the valuables. Last night, Lloyd Spafford, an employe of the Park Place, found the bag with the contents intact at the mouth of the drain at the foot of Wellington street. As soon as the loss was discovered Mr. Holden secured a plumber to go over the piping in the house. The loss, however, had gotten into the main, and H. O. Joyce, water works superintendent and George Lutman, street commissioner, took the matter in charge, constructing a screen for the mouth of the system and keeping watch for developments. It took just a week for the jewels to travel from the Park place to the river.

Petoskey News: About a year ago the Evening News printed a story of very interesting home character, Aunt Sarah Scroggie, interesting not only locally but throughout the state and community where she lived on the west side, but because of her great activity at her advance age of eighty one years since that time "Aunt Sarah" as her relatives and near friends love to call her, has gone to Bay Shore, where she makes her home, but her children, grand children, nieces, nephews by the hundreds do not fail to be the dear old lady's guests on her birthday anniversary, and last Friday, such as were not already there, hurried up and went down to help her observe the day in a fitting manner, and there was a large company present to celebrate her 100 and 1 birthday, a worthy mother in Israel. Mrs. Scroggie takes care of herself, and lives in a perfect flower of beauty, cared for only by a music school, and enjoys every moment of her life, which she lends her heart to help as well spent, and eighty two years, just passed have slightly upon her shoulders, scarcely but with age, that she readily enters into the pleasures of her younger friends and kinsmen, who love to be with her upon such occasions. Mrs. Scroggie makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. William Gray at Bay Shore, and the party of thirty-five which attended the anniversary celebration last week declare that Aunt Sarah is the most charming hostess they have ever met up with. Many Petoskey friends, among them Mrs. D. S. Hinsa and little daughter, and Mrs. George T. Zapp, and all of her children were present on the occasion twenty one aunt Scroggie of Owosso, who could not get there.

CHANGES SENTIMENT.

Detroit News Acknowledges Success of Osborn's Campaign.

The Detroit News has been anything but friendly to Chase S. Osborn since he entered the gubernatorial campaign. But the News has been compelled to acknowledge the force of Mr. Osborn's campaign. In a recent issue, commenting on the situation in the state, the News says:

"Osborn's picture is appearing in more state papers than Kelley's or Musselman's. But Osborn has been at editor himself and still owns an interest in a paper. This may account for it. Judging from reports emanating from various sources, his style of whacking at Governor Warner's administration and at Cannonites and Aldrichites and Hallingerites and some other things which bear the official stamp of the old guard and purist which the Julius Caesar Burrows contingent regard as sacred, is telling him. It is not so much the speech that goes down to help her chosen day in a fitting manner, and there was a large company present to celebrate her 100 and 1 birthday, a worthy mother in Israel. Mrs. Scroggie takes care of herself, and lives in a perfect flower of beauty, cared for only by a music school, and enjoys every moment of her life, which she lends her heart to help as well spent, and eighty two years, just passed have slightly upon her shoulders, scarcely but with age, that she readily enters into the pleasures of her younger friends and kinsmen, who love to be with her upon such occasions. MICHIGAN IS "INSURGENT."

Feeling Against Old Order of Things is Strong in State.

A number of writers have been touring through the states of the west telling of the growth of the national "insurgent" movement. While Michigan has been skipped by these journeys, this state can be classed with the real "insurgent." Michigan is solidly Republican, but there is a distinct feeling that there should be a cleaning up in many quarters, particularly with reference to the present state administration. Chase S. Osborn has voiced the sentiment in the whole state in his speeches. "Half-Hagerman, Cannonism, Aldrichism and Warnerism." It may not please some of the old line politicians, but it voices the spirit of the people of today.

BIG U. P. ENROLLMENT.

A Total of 44,000 Republicans Declare Themselves.

A total of 44,000 Republicans enrolled at the spring election north of the straits. This is the greatest enrollment which has prevailed in the state, and the candidacy of Chase S. Osborn of the Soo for governor is responsible for it.

Every Republican in the upper peninsula was anxious to enroll so that he might vote in the party for Mr. Osborn. On the basis of this enrollment, it is said that Mr. Osborn will carry the upper peninsula by more than 25,000. The total Osborn vote will approximate 40,000.

Emperors and robbers are alike, and the same reason that makes us wrangle with a neighbor causes a war be twixt princes.—Montaigne.

OSBORN IS VERSATILE

Offers Unique Means of Expression to Admirers.

Some of the politicians around the state are wondering just how it would be if Governor Chase S. Osborn should come home before an audience. During the round of the banquets he made at the Park Place, found the bag with the contents intact at the mouth of the drain at the foot of Wellington street. As soon as the loss was discovered Mr. Holden secured a plumber to go over the piping in the house. The loss, however, had gotten into the main, and H. O. Petoskey News: About a year ago the Evening News printed a story of very interesting home character, Aunt Sarah Scroggie, interesting not only locally but throughout the state and community where she lived on the west side, but because of her great activity at her advance age of eighty one years since that time "Aunt Sarah" as her relatives and near friends love to call her, has gone to Bay Shore, where she makes her home, but her children, grand children, nieces, nephews by the hundreds do not fail to be the dear old lady's guests on her birthday anniversary, and last Friday, such as were not already there, hurried up and went down to help her observe the day in a fitting manner, and there was a large company present to celebrate her 100 and 1 birthday, a worthy mother in Israel. Mrs. Scroggie takes care of herself, and lives in a perfect flower of beauty, cared for only by a music school, and enjoys every moment of her life, which she lends her heart to help as well spent, and eighty two years, just passed have slightly upon her shoulders, scarcely but with age, that she readily enters into the pleasures of her younger friends and kinsmen, who love to be with her upon such occasions. Mrs. Scroggie makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. William Gray at Bay Shore, and the party of thirty-five which attended the anniversary celebration last week declare that Aunt Sarah is the most charming hostess they have ever met up with. Many Petoskey friends, among them Mrs. D. S. Hinsa and little daughter, and Mrs. George T. Zapp, and all of her children were present on the occasion twenty one aunt Scroggie of Owosso, who could not get there.

OSBORN IS VERSATILE

Offers Unique Means of Expression to Admirers.

Some of the politicians around the state are wondering just how it would be if Governor Chase S. Osborn should come home before an audience. During the round of the banquets he made at the Park Place not noticing her loss until it was too late to recover the valuables. Last night, Lloyd Spafford, an employe of the Park Place, found the bag with the contents intact at the mouth of the drain at the foot of Wellington street. As soon as the loss was discovered Mr. Holden secured a plumber to go over the piping in the house. The loss, however, had gotten into the main, and H. O. Joyce, water works superintendent and George Lutman, street commissioner, took the matter in charge, constructing a screen for the mouth of the system and keeping watch for developments. It took just a week for the jewels to travel from the Park place to the river.

EDWARD VII. IS DEAD AND GEORGE V. RULES

Last Words of Great Britain's King Are, "I Think I Have Done My Duty."

MONARCH IS PNEUMONIA VICTIM

British Sovereign Succumbs to Disease After Illness of Less than a Week.

FIRST GENTLEMAN OF EUROPE

Late Ruler Was Sincerely Loved for Character of Democratic Simplicity and Kingly Humility.

King Edward VII. of England died from pneumonia at 11:45 o'clock night at Buckingham Palace, London, and at the same moment the crown and sceptre of the empire of Great Britain passed automatically to his son and heir, Prince George of Wales, now George V.

King Edward died almost before his subjects had begun to realize that he was seriously ill. He was taken sick a week before, and for three days anxious conjectures began to develop. The fourth day the physicians issued a bulletin that stirred the whole nation to its depth. On the sixth day the king was dead. The shock to Great Britain and to the world has been tremendous. It is a national loss, for the death of the king has been discussed in the markets for many years.

Nearly all the members of the king's immediate family were at his bedside when the king died, just four before the end came the royal patient rallied and spoke weakly to those about him.

"I know it is all over," he said, "but I think I've done my duty."

These were King Edward's last words, the end coming peacefully a few minutes later.

The first official act of the new king, George V., was performed immediately after his father had breathed his last. He dispatched to the Lord Mayor of London the announcement of Edward VII's death, in pursuance to an ancient custom.

Pneumonia, following bronchitis, is believed to have been the cause of death, but the disease thus far have refused to make a statement. Some of the king's friends or crowd claim that worry over the critical political situation which confronted him together with sleepless nights, aggravated, if it did not cause, the fatal illness.

NEW KING AND QUEEN OF ENGLAND.

KING GEORGE V.

QUEEN VICTORIA MARY.

King Edward was sincerely loved throughout the length and breadth of England's possessions. He was loved as the great son of a noble mother and he was loved for himself because he had in his character that rare combinging of democratic simplicity with kingly dignity which made him justly "the first gentleman of Europe."

MASKED MEN HOLD TOWN AT BAY

Hitchhawnsvillenest the office building of the North American Manufacture Company in Newell, W. Va., at 2:30 o'clock the other morning, blew open a safe with dynamite and held up the entire community, which had been summoned by the commotion. Only $100 in cash, but many valuable papers, were stolen. Your masked men were completely in control for two weeks inside a Fifteenth Ward in the city of Pittsburgh, and the fourth street guard at the street entrance. When the alarm was given the charge startled the occupants of the building on other side. As they rushed into the street the burglar on guard ordered them back at the point of a gun and when they obeyed with arms the door of the safe being blown across the room and every window broken.

EARTHQUAKE KILLS 500 PEOPLE

Many Hundreds Injured in the Destruction of Cartago, Costa Rica.

A large part of Cartago, Costa Rica was destroyed the other night by an earthquake. Details are meager, as the telegraph wires have been severed between San Jose and Cartago. The earthquake at the latter place was felt in Kingston. It is known that at least 500 persons are dead and many hundreds injured.

15 KILLED IN DYNAMITE BLAST

Fifteen persons were killed and fifty were injured by an explosion which wrecked the plant of the General Explosives Company of Canada, four miles from Ottawa and one mile from Hull, Quebec.

WHITES AND NEGROES BURIED IN COAL MINE

Explosion in Alabama Traps Underground Workmen in Shaft Near Birmingham.

IT IS BELIEVED ALL ARE DEAD

Flames Followed by Cave-In Impede Rescue Work—Two Bodies Taken Out.

Forty-five white men and 140 negroes were entombed in No. 3 coal shaft at Palos, Ala., as the result of a terrific explosion, and it is believed all are dead. Palos is forty miles west of Birmingham and the mines are owned by the Palos Coal and Coke Company of that city. Two bodies were found.

The forces resulting from the explosion shot into the air from the mouth of the shaft a distance of 200 feet and the shock was felt for miles. Timbers from the slope were hurled several hundred feet from the mouth and rocks from the roof of the slope raved in and made access to the mouth very difficult. The fan machinery was badly damaged, but air was pumped into the mine in hopes that some of the men were still alive.

The first rescuers who went into the mine after the explosion were overcome by fire damp and had to be carried out. J. J. Rutledge, government expert, is now in charge of the rescue in Knoxville, Tenn., was among the first to enter, and after working for an hour and a half he came into the main slope.

James Stanby, a mail carrier, was killed thirty feet from the mouth of the slope and his body was buried thirty feet into the Warrior River. He was walking along the railroad track when the explosion took place and when the explosion occurred. It was judged from this that the force of the explosion was such that none of the men in the interior could possibly be alive.

The Palos mines have been worked for a number of years and the entries were extensive. It is thought that the explosion was caused by the accumulation of gas in some of the abandoned entries.

MUCH STRYCHNINE IN SWOPES

Dr. Vaughan, State's Most Important Witness, on Stand.

Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, the toxicologist of Ann Arbor, Mich., who figured in the State as its most important witness in the Hyde murder trial in Kansas City, began his testimony the other day. Searches for poison made by him alone and also with the aid of Dr. Walter S. Haines of Chicago, who has already testified, had resulted in the discovery of the following: Twenty-six thirty-third of a grain of strychnine in the entire liver of Colonel Thomas M. Swope. Signs of crystals in the stomach. A trace of strychnine in a kidney. A suggestion, but no positive proof, of cyanide in the stomach of Christian Swope. Strychnine in the contents of the stomach of Margaret Swope. Cyanide in capsules said to have been thrown into a street by Dr. R. C. Hyde the night he was expelled from the Swope residence, last Dec. 14. In reply to hypothetical questions regarding the convulsions suffered by these three, Dr. Vaughan said his opinion, they had been caused by the administration of some one or more poisons, such as cyanide or strychnine.

THREE LEGISLATORS INDICTED

Browne, Wilson and Link Hit by Grand Jury in Lorimer Case.

Indictments against three members of the Illinois General Assembly—one charging perjury and two charging perjury—were voted the other day by the special grand jury, in Chicago, which has been investigating the legislative bribery scandal.

The three men thus indicted, over both phases of the confession of Representative Charles A. White of Gillespie, and H. J. C. Beckemeyer of Carlyle, that they received $1,000 each for voting for William Lorimer for United States Senator and that later they joined in a legislative "jackpot" that was split up in St. Louis, were returned against the following:

Representative Lee O'Neil Browne of Ottawa, minority leader of the House, indicted for bribery on fifteen counts acting on that bond to lure representative Charles A. White in Chicago as part of a $1,000 bribe for voting for Senator Lorimer. Bond fixed at $15,000.

Representative Robert E. Wilson of Chicago, indicted for willful and corrupt perjury in connection with the grand jury that he did not bond and corruption in the House on June 15, 1909, the day he is alleged the "jackpot" was divided. Bail fixed at $15,000.

Representative Michael S. Link of Mitchell, indicted for perjury for swearing before the grand jury that he was not in St. Louis July 15, 1909, and the next Monday, July 19, 1909, when he is said to have had fixed at $5,000.

The true bills were returned to Judge Kersten by the grand jurors and the pleas were at once issued for the three indictments.

A fourth indictment, having no connection with the charges concerning the "Lorimer" bribery and with the "jackpot" distribution, was returned against William J. Chisholm, former president, and at one time vice president of the Western Indiana Railroad, charging him with embezzling and converting to his own use $25,000 of the road's money.

VOTES TO RAISE MAINE.

Senate, Like House, "Remembers" Havana Hulk—Will Bury Bodies.

After twelve years the ill-fated battleship Maine is to be removed from the Havana harbor and the bodies which went down with the vessel will be interred in the National cemetery at Arlington. A bill providing for such removal and burial which has been passed by the House was the other day passed by the Senate.

It is believed that the wreck of the Maine is raised, it will be possible to determine the exact cause of the explosion, which on Feb. 15, 1898 sank this vessel of the American squadron and killed 260 men in Havana harbor and brought on the Spanish-American war.

It has been the general belief in this country that the Maine was sunk by a Spanish mine, although the Spanish officers at Havana vehemently denied the charge. Some Spanish officers at either had been blown up by Cuban agents in an effort to bring about American intervention, or that the explosion was an interior one, due to some accident on the vessel. An examination of the hull, it is believed, will shed light upon the matter, a mine was fired under the warship.

LIFE TERM FOR ROY BANDIT.

Thomas J. Heal, Indiana Bank Terrorist, Convicted of Murder.

Thomas Jefferson Heal, the bandit gang, was found guilty of murder in Corydon, Ind., and sentenced to life imprisonment. Heal is the 17-year-old Louisville boy who last November executed an amazing simultaneous attack on the Merchants' National Bank of Indianapolis, Ind., with the assistance of robbery. He shot and killed Cashier J. Blangey Fatwell, wounded Frederick M. Woodward and also a negro chauffeur.

Counties in Mother Hubbards.

Twenty counties in Georgia, Cobb County, Ga., were the other day, garbed in mother hubbards by order of the County Commissioners. The dress was taken because of the numerous cases of scandal. The officials hitherto opposed the change, but the authorities found it necessary to cover up the naked legs of the birds, and so clothed they were put to work on the roads.

Shoots Herself at Big Hotel.

A woman who registered as Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt were shot in Marion, Ind., Wednesday morning. Her condition is critical. The principal activity of the association has been in the direction of securing improved legislation with respect to transportation of live stock and in promoting the industry in all parts of the country.

Over 4,000 Potato diggers are used in the State of Maine. Zone to harvest the potato crop. Each of the diggers together with a team of horses to each it would make a procession fifteen miles long.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"The current developments in the centers of trade exhibit further irregularity and the progress made is slower than expected. The record of trading defaults is seen to be comparatively low, but the volume of adverse payments through the banks is only a small percentage better than a year ago.

"Money is more costly for business purposes and strike settlements are not obtained promptly, although the west various danger to transportation is averted by other wage concessions. Other difficulties which are hurtful appear in coal mining and building Industries. Another handicap is the delayed return of seasonable weather. This adverse feature operates against successful dealings in the leading retail, jobbing and manufacturing lines.

"The distributive branches of general merchandise show surprisingly. Fashionable apparel is still in moderate request and stocks of spring goods are not reduced equal to expectations. The advent of warmer weather will stimulate the desired distribution. In wholesale branches the bookings are fair for summer and fall lines of dry goods, silks, footwear, millinery, clothing and furnishings.

"Bank clearings, $296,533,816, exceed those of the corresponding week in 15 cities by more than a million and with $253,056,942 in 1909. Failures reported in the Chicago district, numbering 16, as against 28 last week, 20 in 1910 and 24 in 1909, with liabilities over $5,000 numbered 8, as against 8 last week, 7 in 1909 and 9 in 1910."

NEW YORK.

Trade as a whole is still quiet, pending clearer views of the crop and price outcome, but there is no evidence a sinker more pronounced feeling in agricultural sections, where injury from the unseasonably backward start of spring has been somewhat exaggerated, and the securities markets are also stronger on the evidence of an enlarging demand for American bonds abroad. The best reports as to trade come from the larger markets of the central West, northwest and Southwest. Eastern trade reports are of a slight improvement at retail or large markets.

There is a slightly better feeling in cotton goods, wools being reported to take advantage of lighter prices abroad.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with May 5 were 191, as against 199 last week, 214 in the 19th week of 1910, 268 in 1909, 154 in 1908 and 152 in 1906. Business failures in Canada for the week numbered eighteen, which compares with twenty-one for last week and twenty-nine in the like week of last year.—Bradstreet's.

Political Comment.

Where Can Stumps Be Stopped?

The schemes calls for a permanent court of arbitrament. A dispute between nations shall be taken before this tribunal and according as it is adjudicated the nations in controversy shall abide. A new system of international law will thus be built up gradually, but it will differ from the present so-called international law since it will have the power to compel obedience. No blat is given of a method of disarmament, but, of course, if the court proves to be the right thing the powers will proceed to lay up their navies and the armies will be disbanded.

There is a fine quality about all peace schemes, for it is pleasant to dream of a state of being where men are brothers, national prejudice is unknown and hate is to be found only in the history of the historian. They are to be welcomed, for presently that "common sense of most," of which Thompson wrote might thus be made real. Yet we cannot ignore the true situation unless, maybe, we are of those to whom ideas are more than facts. There is a great empire which is working with unresting energy to obtain a navy which shall be greater than all others. That empire is not only pursued by a relentless ambition, but the present circumstances demands further territory, room, expansion. The one is as much the very question of consequence must spend money, must build and build and put those thoughts of conquest and war behind us, because it must obey, must add to the law of self-preservation.—Toledo Blade.

Why This Delay?

Was unable to understand the attitude of Congress with reference to the much discussed and long delayed legislation, and the week of the bee (Sunday Mains which her twelve long years has remained beneath the waters of Havana harbor. Several months ago the Taft administration asked for what was about to be witnessed. Now Congress has reduced the appropriation in order to make the economy it has convinced will be inadequate for the purpose.

Congress should appropriate $500,000 for a proper beginning of this work. We do not believe that a single protesting voice would be heard throughout the length and breadth of the nation. There are bodies unobtrusively sleeping in that historic and long water-soaked hulk which are entitled to honorable burial at the hands of a federal government. There are secrets in connection with the cause of the blowing up of that battleship which might be revealed and have an important bearing upon the trade interpenings of that unhappy May morning in 1898, and the stirring events which immediately followed.

That Heard Indorsement.

William R. Hearst's so-called indorsement of President Taft does not wash. When examined in the laundry it is found to be composed of two-thirds lye to Roosevelt and one-third jibs at the Republican party. It does not indorse the President any farther than to say that Mr. Hearst prefers him to his predecessor, and that the Republican party will not follow him in his path of progressive legislation. There is nothing in the indorsement that will preclude Mr. Hearst and his bunch of publications from doubling the administration. Their editor would very likely put it on the ground that, while Mr. Taft was all right, his party was all wrong, and must be disassociated. Mr. Hearst would be very sorry that Mr. Taft did not have a party as good as his own, but, nevertheless, he would have to consider that the party took precedence of the individual. Hearst and his crew are absent the President to one side, and attempt to create a breach between the Republican organization. The President does not seem to be in danger of Hearst.—Minneapolis Journal.

The South and Protection.

In a recent journey across the country Congressman McKinney, of California, sounded tariff sentiment in occasion offered and makes some remarks on future statesmanship on the subject. One idea that he impresses is that the support of protection is growing in the South. Many Democrats take for granted that the South are States will always be the hard and fast supporters of the party and will follow it to the ends of the earth in other respects. But industrial conditions in the South have been changing. Some of the Southern Congressmen are by no means sure that there would take the same position if the Democratic party should ever again have the power to shape national legislation. Louisiana wants its sugar protected. Alabama has large interests in iron and steel; Texas is the leading State in wool; Georgia and Georgia are extensive manufacturers of cotton and concerned just how much protection is given cotton. Most of the Southern States are large producers of lumber and want lumber. Not one in the whole list is without some interest which would prosperity resta with a stable policy of reasonable protection. Should the Democratic party ever again throw round Southern sentiment on the subject will then find it difficult.

A Neat Penny.

The subject was not before his house for the first time when the following was said in the Senate:

"What brought you here?" asked the senator.

"Well, I thought I would be nearer home."

"And where does you father live?"

"He's dead."—Life.

THE KNOX PEACE PLAN.

Philander Knox, dupeur of despots and nosser of commercial doors, has a plan by which the war drums shall become the plaything of the child and the palm of overlasting peace shall sway gently over the habitats of all men.

The scheme calls for a permanent court of arbitrament. A dispute between nations shall be taken before this tribunal and according as it is adjudicated the nations in controversy shall abide. A new system of international law will thus be built up gradually, but it will differ from the present so-called international law since it will have the power to compel obedience. The Patriots.

The latest batch of would-be presidential candidates for the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1912 now consist of:

John Burke, Governor of North Dakota.

Judson Harmon, Governor of Ohio.

Mayor Gaynor of New York.

Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

Governor Marshall of Indiana.

William Randolph Hearst is said to be polishing up a castor to throw in the ring.

And William Jennings Bryan should not be forgotten.

Patriotism is a great and noble thing. But it does seem too bad that in so many cases it should also be pathetic.

Spinning on Gas.

One of Lord Kelvin's favorite experiments while teaching natural philosophy at the University of Glasgow was to spin an egg which was suspended in the air. If the egg were hard boiled it would do a steady gyration, but owing to the friction between its contents and the shell, the motion would soon cease. Lord Kelvin inferred from this that the interior of the earth can not be a fluid, or the globe's rate of rotation would have been checked long ago. Modern experiments with raw eggs for the hard-boiled ones proved to be unsatisfactory, for one would spin properly, but Lord Kelvin, in his zeal to be fooled, "knew of them boiled," was his only comment.

PROCLAIM NEW KING WITH MEDIAEVAL RITE

Fanfare by Four Heralds Opens Ceremony at St. James' Palace Marking Accession.

GEORGE V. HAILED BY NATION

Bands Play "God Save the King" and People Wildly Shout the Refrain.

With the time-honored ceremony of a brilliant and impressive character, George V. became monarch. Was publicly proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India. Shortly after the sounding of four heralds, arrayed in mediaval uniforms of scarlet, heavily braided with gold, mounted the balcony of friary court at St. James' Palace, where Queen Victoria presented her first—the people upon the opening of her memorable reign, and Mr. Asquith, who through their long silver trumpets.

The place by the time was surrounded by a great mass of people, many of whom could secure only the briefest glimpse of the proceedings. The balconies and roofs of the ancient palace, which had been draped with fine cloth, were reserved for the notables, all of whom were in the designed uniforms. Members of the royal household, the ministers and their wives and high officers of state, in full dress, in full uniforms, were gathered around the court.

The heralds having concluded their duties, the ministers of state, of whom is the Duke of Norfolk, the hereditary earl marshal and chief butler of England, appeared in the balcony forming the great heralds' background. The ceremony of proclamation having been removed for the occasion. Sir Alfred Scott Scott-Gatty, garter principal king of arms, with the Duke of Norfolk and two officers bearing the sceptre and sword, stepped the front of the balcony, and in a voice which could be heard across the court and in the streets adjoining, read the proclamation, while great throngs stood uncovered in a drizzling rain.

The Duke and Sir Alfred then called for three cheers for the King, and the people responded with fairly deafening hurrahs, which were uttered only by the appearance of the heralds, who sounded another fanfare. The last note hardly had died away when the band of the Coldstream Guards, which had taken up a position in the street, struck up "God Save the King." As the national anthem was sounded the first gun of the battery in St. James' Park belched forth a royal salute, and the people in the square and streets at the same moment took up the refrain, "God Save the King."—Bradstreet's.

FARMERS AND WORKERS BAND.

Federation and Union Join in Industrial Lines Bill.

The Farmers National and Co-Operative Union has agreed to accept Samuel Gompers' bill, introduced by the American Federation of Labor. Long ago the Farmers' Union, representatives of the farmers' union declare the alliance has no particular interest in industrial lines only. Terrorists of the farmers' union declare the alliance has no particular clings. Organized labor and organized farmers will work together hereafter in preserving the rights and liberties of both classes of workers." The affiliation has been a favorite project of Gompers and the adoption of the resolution by the organization followed a four day conference between Gompers and the farmers' committee. The resolution says:

"We pledge ourselves to give preference to the products of the industrial workers who manifest their appreciation by organizing themselves by organization and urge reciprocal purchase of products of union labor.

"Our legislative committees are pledge to co-operate with the officers and committees of organized labor to secure such relief and reformatory legislation as may be necessary to conserve the rights and freedom to which the workers as men and citizens are entitled under the constitution of the United States."

STATE CAMPAIGN HAS SLOWED UP

End of Banquet Season Causes a Big Lull.

CONGRESSIONAL FIGHTS ON

All Candidates For Governor Claim Success—Unprejudiced Observation Puts the Result in Doubt.

DETROIT—The end of the banquet season, which came a week or more ago, has caused a big lull in the campaign for state offices. Where but a short time ago the options of the candidates for governor filled the newspapers, now little is heard of them, nor will there be much until well along in the summer.

The friends of all three of the gubernatorial candidates—Patrick H. Kelley, Chase S. Osborn and Amos Musselman—claim that their man is going to win, and give various reasons for it. The backers of Mr. Kelley assert that he has held his own during the banquet season and that he will receive more votes than the other candidates combined. Mr. Osborn's friends, on the other hand, claim that Mr. Osborn cut into Mr. Kelley heavily during the speech making tours and that the tremendous enrollment in the upper peninsula indicates that he will win easily, especially with the help of Wayne and Saginaw. Mr. Musselman's campaign managers are not making as much noise as those of the other candidates, but they appear to be confident that the Grand Rapids man is going to get a big vote. To the unprejudiced it seems that there is no way of telling just what the result will be, especially this far ahead of the election.

Many Congressional Fights.

The situation in the several congressional districts continues chaotic. In the First there is little likelihood of Congressman Darling having opposition in the primary, but he will be opposed by Alfred J. Lucking in the election. In the Second both Henry C. Smith and W. W. Wedemeyer are contesting for the shoes of Mr. Townsend. In the Third district J. J. C. Smith of Charlotte is already announced as a candidate for the nomination against Congressman Gardner, and there may be others in the race. Railroad Commissioner Glasgow is still undecided about opposing Congressman Hamilton for the nomination in the Fourth. Mayor Ellis of Grand Rapids is spoken of as a prospective opponent for Congressman Diekema in the Fifth, and in the Sixth Senator Frank J. Shields of Howell has practically announced himself as a candidate against Congressman Sam Smith. While no official announcement is forthcoming, Congressman Cranton of Lapeer is almost sure to oppose Congressman McMorran in the Seventh. No opponent to Congressman Fordney has yet appeared in the Eighth, and, despite which talk there is as yet no one in the race against Congressman Loud in the Ninth. Frank Emil of Bay City will oppose Congressman Loud in the Tenth, and L. C. Dalze of Alpena will also contest in this fight. but in the Eleventh Congressman Dodds will be given his second term without opposition. Up in the Twelfth the copper country has a candidate against Congressman Young in the person of Angus Kerr.

The Senatorial Fight.

So far as the senatorial fight is concerned the feeling seems to be growing that Senator Burrows will not be opposed when the time for the convention comes. Mr. Townsend recently withdrew from the contest in the Second district because his friends became convinced the could not be elected to congress against the opposition of Henry C. Smith, and, while he is still considering a candidate for the senate, he is expected to quietly drop out if necessary petitions for a place on the ballot.

POSTAL MEN FOR BURROWS.

Many Measures in Their Behalf Pushed by Michigan Senator.

DETROIT—Benefits received by local postoffice employes from other states around the state indicate clearly that so far as they are able under the civil service rules, the postal employes of this state are for the re-election of Senator J. C. Burrows.

When Senator Burrows was in Detroit recently a big delegation of the employes of the local office called on him at the Hotel Pontchartrain to express their support if he is to be a candidate again, and the report of this meeting, spreading through the state, has led to a large number of letters being written by clerks and carriers in other offices informing the senator that the brethren out in the state were of the same mind.

The reason for this solid support is found in the activity Senator Burrows has always shown in behalf of the postal employes. As a member of the committee on postoffices and post roads, all legislation affecting postoffices naturally comes under his personal attention, and he has always stood firmly for every measure which served to aid the employes of this big branch of the government service.

Gifts.

No one but a girl can do some things. For instance, a girl can wear an auto veil with the air of just having stepped from her own machine, when her present possessor and entire prospects couldn't be cashed for $10.—Atchison (Kas.) Globe.

BURROWS STRONG IN FOURTH

Southwestern Michigan For Re-election of Senior Senator.

BENTON HARBOR—Where Senator J. C. Burrows is best known is where he is receiving the greatest support for re-election to the senate. The present Fourth district was once a part of the district which he represented in congress, and sentiment down this way is unanimous for his return to the upper house.

Senator Burrows is believed practically, but much of support comes from people who never bother in vain to the senator for support for any worthy project when he was in the house of representatives. The prediction is freely made, and goes uncontradicted, that he will have 80 per cent of the vote through the present Fourth district.

Political Notes.

Within the last few weeks there has been a notable increase in the sentiment in favor of the re-election of Senator Burrows throughout the Tenth congressional district. The many friends of the senator throughout the counties bordering on Lake Huron and the Straits of Mackinaw have been uniting in their efforts in his behalf, and the result is that the prediction is freely made that Senator Burrows will have two votes to his opponent's one throughout this territory. As a matter of fact, no stronger has this sentiment become than in Bay City lately, if it has not been made that Senator Burrows will carry the Tenth district.

* * *

You can't lose Chase S. Osborn when it comes to getting publicity. Osborn's campaign speeches during the recent round of Republican banquets are already familiar to the people of the state, and now the happy governor is over in it engaged in filling a large number of lecture engagements in churches in various parts of the lower peninsula. On Washington's Birthday he spoke at a large church banquet at Ionia Harbor, and recently has appeared before the Monroe brotherhood, at Monroe, where he addressed some 500 people on the "Evolution of Civilization."

* * *

Senator Burrows' consistent course in support of the steel sugar industry of Michigan, at Washington, has had the expected excellent result. The industry is in a flourishing condition now—in far better shape than it has been for years, and the farmers of the state who grow sugar beets are rejoicing accordingly.

* * *

Lieutenant Governor Kelley is keeping up the strenuous campaign work that he laid out for himself more than a year ago. He is on the jump continually visiting the various parts of the state, and since the return of "Nick" Whelan from Cuba the Kelley campaign has taken on a more lively aspect.

* * *

Immediately upon his return from Washington at the close of the present session of congress, Senator Burrows will actively take up his campaign for renomination. In various parts of the state petitions are already in circulation, urging the senior senator to become a candidate for a second himself, and there is no question but what he will be in the race. While he will undoubtedly be opposed by a number of other candidates, the senator's friends are confident that the Grand Rapids man will be the only one to cause him any trouble. To the unprejudiced it seems that there is no way of telling just what the result will be, especially this far ahead of the election.

Many Congressional Fights.

The situation in the several congressional districts continues chaotic. In the First there is little likelihood of Congressman Darling having opposition in the primary, but he will be opposed by Alfred J. Lucking in the election. In the Second both Henry C. Smith and W. County Normal Notes.

Mr. J. H. Milford, county commissioner, and Mr. W. H. Hadsow, compartment officer, called at the normal recently.

Miss Kathryn LaFleur, of the class of '09, visited at the normal room Wednesday, May 11.

The editors for this week are Louis Christensen and Margaret Durand. The housekeepers are Blanche Nowland and Mary Berg.

The class were very much interested in a lima moth which was brought in to the normal room by Miss Nellie Harting, class of '09, Monday, May 16.

Miss Lulu Crites, class of '07, was in town Saturday and called on Miss Himes and Miss Reed. Miss Crites went over to the normal from and was much interested in the manual training work of the class.

Hopes Journal: The Haden Paint Association have let the contract for the erection of six cottages to L. H. White. The work will be started at once as Mr. White has already placed the order for the lumber and material. As fast as this is ready it will be taken to the Point on a scow which will be towed by the steamer Cummings. These cottages are to be ready for occupancy this summer which means a hurry up job. It is expected that other cottages will be built by private individuals, but these are owned by the association and will be held for sale to Knowles, Converse & Co. of whom lots can also be purchased. The lots on the Point have already been surveyed, staked out, and, those who contemplate purchasing can now choose their lots.

HORTON LAUDS BURROWS.

Expresses His Sentiments, and Indicates that State Grange Favors the Senior Senator.

The forces opposed to senator J. C. Burrows, who have been endeavoring to foster the idea that the State Grange is strongly against the senior senator, have been given a severe blow by the action at Adrian a few days ago of George H. Horton, publicly congratulating Senator Burrows on his speech and leading the speech for his stand on the postal deficits bill.

For several months a strong effort has been made to convey the impression, without making the direct charge, that Senator Burrows is opposed to the postal savings bank system. The truth of the matter is that it was Senator Burrows, as chairman of a sub-committee, who actually made the Carter bill come into the shape in which it is expected to pass congress. Senator Burrows had no words to "beat his own horn," but his friends insisted that he make his position on the postal deficits bill clear, and in all of his speeches in the state he frankly went into the history of the bill and what it meant.

This attracted a great deal of attention, especially among the farmers. At Adrian, the morning after the Monroe club banquet, Mr. George H. Horton approached Senator Burrows in the dining room of the Manmee hotel.

"Senator," he said, "I want to congratulate you on your speech of last night. It was magnificently done. I was especially interested in your remarks on the postal savings bill. You know, we farmers had rather patronized the idea that you were opposed to the bill, and I, for one, am very glad to know that you are for the bill. It will be welcome news to the people of Michigan to know that you favor the bill."

Mr Horton is one of the best known farmers in the state, his beautiful farm in Lenawee county being one of the show spots of Michigan. He spoke he was master of the state grange and is still a member of the executive committee.

"There is nothing so powerful as example. We get others straight by walking straight ourselves. — Mme. Gyetchka.

TRIBUTE TO BURROWS.

Perry Powers Endorses Senior Senator's Candidacy.

The Cadillac News and Express, edited by Hon. Perry Powers, one of Michigan's best known and widely appreciated Republicans, gives unqualified indorsement of Senator Burrows' candidacy for re-election as follows:

"Senator Burrows' recent visit to Michigan and his activity and successful speech-making effects while in the state made it quite evident that there is nothing in the direction of health and strength necessary for a successful candidacy. In his several speeches Senator Burrows reviewed the work of congress and gave frank and complete reviews of his position on public matters, why he favored certain legislation and why he opposed other propositions. Senator Burrows' advocacy and explanation of the postal savings deposit bill won for him the approval of all the organizations of the state, and he was cordially complimented on what he has said and done in that direction by George H. Horton, who for a number of years was master of the State grange. Senator Burrows is evidently quite able to do all that will be expected of him as a participant in a statewide senatorial contest, and presents himself as one that is will be the successful participant in that contest by a quite decided majority."

BURROWS FAR FROM DEAD.

Tires Out Young Man in Tramp Through Mammoth Auto Plant.

Anyone who is laboring under the impression that Senator Burrows is due to take to an invalid chair as a means of locomotion should have attempted to follow him when he was in Flint recently as a guest of the Lincoln club. One of the features of a day of entertainment was a trip through the mammoth automobile plant of the Buick company. The party walked and walked, until some of the younger men insisted that they had enough and refused to go further. They attempted to put it on the ground that Senator Burrows was getting tired, but the senator laughed at this.

"Boys," he said, "I could kill you all walking. Why, I haven't got started yet."

And off he went for a further jaunt, while the younger men of the party sat down to rest.

The senator is in excellent health, and in his speeches made in the state during this spring he showed all his old time power as a public speaker.

The surprise was founded as a farewell. Mr. and Mrs. Dougherty were presented with a fine lounging robe. John didn't get one, because he never leaves home. The departure of these good people is regrettable.

WOLGAST IN CHARLEVOIX

Renowned Light Weight Champion Visits This City Unheralded—Wields in With His Big Automobile.

The little chap who hammered the daylights out of "Battling" Nelson at San Francisco last February and made himself rich and famous—the Michigan boy fighter—Ad Wolgast, of Cadillac, champion light-weight pugilist of the world, came into town unannounced Saturday forenoon from the south. He came in his big Oldsmobile, and with him were two young friends, one of them a son of the mayor of Cadillac. As he swung around the corner into Bridge street the first person he met was W. G. Campbell, of the Majestic Theatre, a former Cadillac acquaintance, and then Charlie Novak, with whom the "champ" formerly worked in a Cadillac cigar factory, was greeted cordially.

Mr. Campbell piloted the car about the city to show the young man what we had, and when the outfit returned the news was pretty well circulated, and from that time until evening Wolgast was the "synosure of all eyes," even of those who would rather see a good bloody foot ball game than a prize fight After lunch he played a few games of billiards at Jim Adams', later making a big fat cigar for the SENTINEL scribe at the Novak factory.

The "Cadillac kid" cheerfully granted the writer an interview, and spent a half hour in the sanitum, modestly relating particulars of his wonderful California victory, and, with boy frankness, telling of all his career as a fighter. What ever you and I may think of pugilism, we cannot help but admire a specimen of perfect physical manhood, and Wolgast is a fine specimen. The boy is not yet twenty one. His father can legally collect his "wages" for about a month yet. While very bodily and facial muscle denotes strength, there is nothing in his face that portrays the "pug." When he smiles he shows a splendid set of teeth, and his eye has something in it that gives you a bad impression of his character. He says he goes to church every Sunday, and his parents have told the reporters that Ad has always been a good boy. One of the things that he did with his prize money was to buy his father a good farm near Cadillac, and he took his Cincinnati Enquirer scent a photographer out from Cadillac to get a picture of the young scrapper plowing. He is just a big little man, hard as iron, as mild tempered as you often find them, and entirely unspoiled by his phenomenal career.

Next week he will go into training for a bout with Jack Redmond, an aspiring young gent in Milwaukee, for a purse of $5,000, win or lose. He says he wants to meet Nelson in the squared circle again, and has no fear of the result.

The steamship Illinois arrived Saturday on her first trip out of Chicago this season. The Illinois is equipped with new boilers, and comes on the route looking fine. She is commanded by Capt. John Stuttleham. The company has recently bought another steamer, the Virginia, which will run between Chicago and Milwaukee, and will be commanded by Capt Ed. Stuttleham The Minister, which will run here, will be sailed by Capt. George Johnson, formerly first mate of the Missouri.

MAJOR GREEN DEAD

Hon. Edward H Green, who was justly entitled to the title of "the Grand old man of Charlevoix," passed peacefully away at 2:15 Monday afternoon. Major Green had been in failing health all winter, but despite the fact month had gained strength enough to resume his office work, and only last week was at his desk. But a few days ago his heart action began to weaken, and he steadily sank to that sleep that knows no waking.

Mrs Green, who has been in Chicago with her daughter, arrived only about an hour after his death. His daughters, Margaret L. Green, of Chicago; Mrs A. J. Garratty, of Milwaukee, and Mrs. H. R. Bailey, of Chicago, and his sons, Fred, of New York and Guy, of Chicago, are all here, excepting Mrs. Garratty.

Edward H. Green was born in Lancaster, Pa., 75 years ago, of German parentage. Of his boyhood little need be said, because so much can be said of his achievements, in war and peace, from his earliest manhood to the day of his death. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted as a private in the 107th Pennsylvania Infantry, attached to the Army of the Potomac, and participating in many battles, including Gettysburg. From a private he rose rapidly through the several grades to be major of his regiment, and at the close of the war he was mustered out with the brevet rank of lieutenant colonel.

The war had not quenched in him the flame west and entered the law department of the Michigan University, graduating with honor in 1867. He came to Charlevoix the same year and opened a law office, his marriage occurring the same year in Ann Arbor to Miss Lizzie Mathews. They built a little home on Bridge street, in which, with some later enlargement, he lived and died. That was forty-four years ago, and after living alone with his daughters for several years he was married to Mrs. Genevra Gaylor, who survives him.

He was raised in the Lutheran faith, but for several years has been a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church. He was a charter member and the first master of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282 F. & A. M., and also a charter member of the local chapter of Royal Arch Masons. He was made a Master Mason in Pennsylvania and a Knight Templar in Ann Arbor while a law student. At the time of his death he was a high affiliation was with Damascus Commandery of Petoskey. He has always been zealously active in Masonic work, especially in the Chapter, of which he was a past high priest.

He was never a seeker after office, and it was always said of him that he would not cross his threshold to secure a vote for himself. He was the first prosecuting attorney of Charlevoix county, and for several years held the office for old Manitou county. He held other county, village and city offices, and was most faithful in the performance of his duties. In the early '80s he was twice elected to the lower house of the legislature from this district. The family generally conceded that, had his political aggressiveness more fully corresponded with his ability and integrity, there is no preferment that the people of Northern Michigan would not have given him.

In writing of the personal qualities of this good man we approach the subject with a sense of utter incompetence and a keener sense of personal bereavement. Edward H. Green was a knight in the Christian gentleman, sans fear. There was not an element of his being that was not true to his God and to humanity. No man ever held longer or more firmly the respect and confidence of the community in which he lived. He never left an slightest stain upon his either moral or financial. Strictly dwelt in his soul, firmly entrenched; honor was his watchword and charity was built into the very fibre of his nature. He was a stranger to unkindness and intolerance, and was always an apologist for the faults and foibles of others. The bravery that he displayed on many a battle field but typified the moral courage of his whole soul. No man knew him better than the writer of these lines, and words are but weak instruments in framing a proper tribute to his manly character. The record of his services to his country and his devotion to those who were nearest and dearest to him constitutes a monument more enduring than marble or bronze. May God rest his soul.

The funeral will be from the Episcopal church, at ten Friday morning. Rev. Mr. Keyser, rector officiating. Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar, will act as honorary escort, as will also the local Masonic lodge and chapter. The Templars will officiate at the grave. The body will lie in state at the church from 8:00 to 9:45 a. m.

An Act of Questionable Wisdom

As a "rider" to an appropriation bill that has passed both houses of Congress, is a provision that, owing to the mess of our fish inspection, shall from generally unnoticed by the public.

It takes effect July 1st next, and is to last for a period of three years. The big fish hatcheries maintained in the city of Charlevoix and the two smaller ones in the state, will be closed until such time as the government shall resume the work of fish culture.

At first blush it would seem that the change is an unwise one, inasmuch as the naval officers, by reason of their long experience and experience, is more familiar with the requirements of that service than a civilian could be. There is, however, good reason for the change with which the public is not yet familiar. It is true that the navy department is short of officers with which to man the new ships, and there is a small army of officers now detailed to lighthouse service. In the new arrangement, the government appoints experienced merchant shipmasters, and places the board in the civil service, on the same status as the steamboat inspection service, there may be wisdom in the change. But we are skeptical.

Appropriate to this subject is the interesting information that Capt. Lester Young, formerly inspector in this district, and well known in Charlevoix, is now a rear admiral, and commander of the navy yard at Pensacola Florida.

—The penalty for selling tobacco to minor under 16 years is a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50 or imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than thirty days, and for selling cigarettes to any person under 21 years old, $50 or 30 days. Any person who smokes cigarettes in public may be fined $10 or sent to jail for five days.

Traverse City Eagle: Charles E. Slater, foreman of the Williams plant, had good sport last week. He caught a large rainbow trout, one weighing seven and three-quarters pounds and the other ten and one-half pounds. Both are beauties, being the largest caught so far this year, and in fact the largest ever caught in or near the city. Mr Slater has a habit of his own which is attracting much attention among the fishermen of the city and this year is practical demonstration of this habit. The big fish were caught in the city by the Hannah mill.

ATHLETIC EVENT

Northern Michigan Field and Track Meet at Charlevoix Saturday June 4th 1910.

A great deal of interest is developing in the Northern Michigan Field meet to be held at Charlevoix Saturday June 4th. At first the local high school planned having a meet to include only the schools of Charlevoix and Emmet counties, as a preliminary to the Northern Michigan meet to be held at Traverse City, but instead of its being a preliminary to the Traverse meet it is to include it and the championship of the north will be decided at Charlevoix instead of Traverse City.

On June 4th Charlevoix, will take on the appearance of a 4th of July celebration, excursions will come from Traverse City, Petoskey, East Jordan, Boyne City and Harbor Springs, bringing with them a libertious crowd of rooters, and a delegation of high school athletes to the number of one hundred or more to participate in the fifteen athletic contests and two base ball games.

Traverse City has entered fifteen men in the track meet and in addition will bring their base ball team to cross bats with the local high school team, so there is no doubt but there will come several hundred rooters. Traverse City boys have chartered a boat for the occasion.

The rivalry between Traverse and Charlevoix is especially keen as last year's Charlevoix track team won the championship of the schools above Traverse City, while Traverse won the championship of the schools below Traverse. The two schools did not meet last year in the championship contests were held too late in the year for any further contests.

This year Traverse wishes to demonstrate to the people of the north that they are far superior to Charlevoix in track athletics. Charlevoix has lost all but four of last year's point winners while Traverse have lost but one. Also Traverse have had the benefit of experience and training which results from the participation in previous meets, they having sent a team to the big M. A. C. meet.

Boyne City will also be represented, a big crowd coming over with their base ball and track teams. This is their year Boyne City have taken an interest in track athletics and so they were especially anxious to have the day of all days, a success in order that they might send a team, they will bear watching.

Petoskey is as strong as ever. They have been practicing out on bear stories about poor material, poor condition, etc., but from past experience the boys have learned to expect a tough proposition from them. Petoskey also brings their base ball team to game with Boyne City and Traverse meets.

Harbor Springs will send a delegation the second of their experience in track athletics. East Jordan will be represented with a small but strong team, and will be heard from.

Mostly from Ellsworth will not go home without a ribbon or two, and we expect Kalkaska to win several points.

Two beautiful pennants have been contributed for the exhibition to the one of the stores this week. The school that wins the championship pennant will have to make a record.

High interest centers in the ball game between Traverse and Charlevoix as the local boys have won from them, and Traverse City can turn the tables they will have some difficulty in claiming the championship in base ball.

There is not a man in Charlevoix who, prior to November, the broad jumping, high jumping and weight throwing of younger days as well as many races in which he has participated. Neither is there any man or woman who does not enjoy the sight of well trained athletes in wholesome competition. A list of the events as follows:

100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 440 yard dash, 880 yard run, 1 mile run, 2 mile run, 220 yard low hurdle, 120 yard high hurdle, 12 pound shot put, 12 pound hamer throw, running high jump, running broad jump, pole vault, discus throw and 1 mile relay race.

Mayor's Proclamation.

The sentiment is was passed to learn of the death of our honored and revered citizen, Major H. H. Green, who for so many years has been prominent in business and social life amongst us.

It is but fitting that we all join in the last tribute possible to pay to a man who for nearly half a century has been identified so closely with the history of our city.

It is therefore requested that all business houses close from ten o'clock until noon on Friday, May 27th, during the obsequies, and that as many as possible pay their individual tribute to the dead by attending the funeral.

It was announced in New Haven, Conn., that Alfred G. Vanderbilt had contributed $25,000 to the Yale University general fund, making his contributions to the fund so far $200,000.

The United States former is, collectively, the most wealthy capitalist the world has ever known. By the last census the farmers had invested in agriculture in the United States $20,000,000,000, which last year produced $7,000,000,000. Such a yearly income means $583,000,000 a month, or $19,000,000 a day.

BLAZING WOODS PERIL FARMS AND VILLAGES

Grand Marais, Minn., Reported by Wireless to Be Doomed by Flames.

WIND SHIFT AIDS ALSTON, MICH.

A Wireless message from Grand Marais, Minn., received at Duluth, said that forest fires were bearing down on the village and that it seemed doomed. The operator said it was his last message, as the fire was getting so close that he was forced to abandon his tower and seek safety. Grand Marais is on the north shore of Lake Superior and is an old trading post. So far as is known, no lives have been lost. Wild rumors are being driven to the lake shore by the fires. Reports receiving in Duluth say that the entire northeastern part of Minnesota is smoldering; that hundreds of men are out fighting the fires and that many villages are threatened with destruction.

A desperate battle is being waged by farmers and miners against forest fires in four different sections within a fifty mile radius of Houghton, Mich. They are trying to save a number of small settlements from destruction by the fast spreading flames.

The woods are dry and a brisk wind is carrying the fire from tree to tree with alarming rapidity. A change in the direction of the wind saved the town of Alston, which had the fire surrounded. At L'Anse village several hundred residents quit labor and hastened by means of their cars and hack lines worked to arrest the progress of the fire toward the town. The Baraga County infirmary, a few miles from L'Anse, was threatened by the fire, and only valiant fire fighting saved the place from destruction. The inmates were taken to private residences. Fires are raging in Ontonagon and Keweenaw Counties, and also near Alfonsa, Ahmeek, and Gay. The loss of ties, poles, and other cut timber is great, while much standing timber is fire swept. Fires are reported between Lanfrum and Horse Lake.

The entire country to the east of Washburn, Wis., is being swept by forest fires and damage running up into thousands of dollars is reported from the stricken district. The great lumber fields west of that city have been destroyed. Hundreds of miles of country is fire swept. The smoke is so thick that the rays of the sun has been shut out for days. Forest fires have leveled the north half of the town of Mosinee, Marathon County, just before wire communication was cut off. Word came that a number of buildings had been destroyed, including two churches, a school house, two saloons, post office and a sawmill.

RAIL BILL PASSED BY HOUSE.

Traffic Agreement and Buying of Noncompeting Lines Killed.

The emasculated administration railroad bill went through the House in other day according to schedule, it was passed exactly as it came from committee of the whole, the final vote, 200 to 126, with every Republican voting aye on the bill. Democrats.

Previous to the roll call on passage a motion to recommit the bill, made by Representative Adamson, of Georgia, with instructions to strike out the section providing for a commerce court, was defeated by a vote of 152 to 176. And before that a motion by Mr. Mann, chairman of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, to replace the eliminated merger section with one permitting acquisition of lines "not substantially competitive" upon authorization of the interstate commerce commission, was rejected by a vote of 160 to 167.

Not only did every Republican place himself on the side of the measure as it came to the House, but he joined in its favor, but fourteen Democrats joined the majority to make the total vote in favor of the measure 200 to 126.

EDWARD B. GARRIOTT IS DEAD.

Head Forecaster of Washington Succumbs to Sudden Illness.

Edward B. Garriott, chief forecaster of the United States weather bureau, died suddenly at his home in Washington, D. C., of acute indigestion, at the age of 57. Professor Garriott had been at the office Monday, day, apparently in the best of health.

For more than thirty years, or practically since the establishment of the weather bureau, he has been connected with government weather work, and for the past fifteen years has been assistant forecaster. He was a writer and lecturer on meteorological subjects, and was a member of the National Geographic Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Academy of Sciences.

Professor Garriott had the full confidence of his chief and his quiet and cordial manner made him exceedingly popular. He was a native of Ohio, and was graduated from Washington University in 1876. He is survived by his wife and an unmarried daughter.

KILLS HUSBAND WHO BEAT HER

Smarting under the humiliation at blows her young husband had rained upon her in a quarrel, Mrs. John Delaney, aged 24, met him on the threshold of their home in Turnbull Township, near Ashtabula, Ohio, and shot him dead. She stepped over the body, and rushing to a neighbor told what she had done. She was arrested a few hours later and locked up at Geauga.

COLUMBIA MOURNS WITH BRITANNIA.

SIX SENTENCED IN PITTSBURG.

Former Councilmen Given Heavy Penalties for Grafting.

Ten prominent men of Pittsburg, including bankers, physicians and politicians, faced Judge Robert S. Frazer the other day to receive their sentences on various charges of bribery and conspiracy in connection with councilmanic corruption. Six were sentenced, and the sentencing of four was delayed by Judge Frazer. Of the ten men sentenced in court all except one have already pleaded no defense to indictments alleging the giving and receiving of bribe money.

As rapidly as their names could be called and their appearance be made six former select and common councilmen were sentenced by Judge Frazer, as follows:

A. A. Vilsack, former member of the common National bank, eight months in the county jail and a fine of $2,000.

Charles Stewart, former select Councilman, six months in the county jail and a fine of $2,000.

Morris Einstein, former select Councilman, six months in jail and a fine of $2,000.

Because of illness in their families the sentencing of E. H. Jennings, president of the Columbia National Bank, and P. A. Griffen, former vice president of the same institution, was postponed on consent of the District Attorney until the next week. The sentencing of G. W. Friend, vice president of the Clinton Steel and Iron Company, one of the late James W. Friend, the multimillionaire, said M. L. Smith, former common councilman, was postponed.

APPLE CROP PROMISING.

Outlook Said to Be Better than for Three Years.

Reports from market centers in relation to the apple situation in the United States subsequent to the recent frosts and up to May 1, had the dealers in the conclusion that the outlook is better than they expected. Their advices are that for the United States as a country there is promise for a larger crop than for three years, notwithstanding the frost damage in Illinois, Ohio and west to Nebraska and Kansas, in Canada the prospects are excellent, as the trees were not in blossom when the late frosts were experienced in the United States. The middle west, known in the trade as the big block group, has suffered more than any other section excepting perhaps Wisconsin. Southern Indiana reports are more favorable than they were a few days ago. In the southern apple states, the Virginias, Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, etc., little damage has been done, while the Pacific group, particularly Oregon and Washington, promises the largest crop in history, with favorable prospects also further south in California.

FIGHT FANS FALL IN LAKE

A panic, an involuntary bath in Great Salt lake and a ride home in an improvised hospital train marked the initiation as a boxing arena of the Hippodrome at Saltair resort, near Salt Lake City, in which it had been proposed to hold the Jeffries-Johnson battle. Where thousand persons went to see the fight, 100 of them went into the waters of the lake with a collapsed stalwart, and more than a score of these were carried back to their homes in the city with broken limbs, contusions on mouths and nostrils soaked by the brine of the inland sea. The fight ring was erected on the stage at one end of the massive bicycle track. The bottom of the saucer had been turned into an auditorium for the spectators. On one side of the saucer and down on the other was a stairs leading to the pier jutting out from Saltair pavilion. The whole hippodrome rest on piles driven in the lake and is over the water. When "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson had been proclaimed winner of the fight and Pete Sullivan was being conxed back to consciousness after a right jab to the jaw in the ninth round, the portion of the hippodrome near the stair made a rush for the outer air. One hundred or more persons were crowded on the stairs when they sank to the floor of the amphitheater, and an instant later broke through the floor and dropped with their living burden into the water.

INDIAN MASSACRE IS FEARED

Self-Governing Village of Taos Resents Introduction of Authority.

An uprising of serious proportions was broken out among the Taos Pueblo Indians, a village of three hundred miles northwest of Fort Las Vegas, N. M., and troops were hurried to the scene of trouble from Santa Fe to check a possible massacre of white families.

The immediate cause of trouble was telegraph wires from Taos, but reports received here from the Indian nations have been confined to an attack on the wife and children of a U. S. guard, who was engaged in the cutting of fences and the theft of horses and cattle.

The uprising of the Pueblos, who for years have been self-governing, and believed to have been cowed by the punishment meted out to them by the Spanish rulers of Santa Fe two years ago, have governed themselves, electing their own chiefs and village councilors who tried and punished malefactors on the tribe without appeal to the territorial authorities. Some months ago an Indian, Isleta Pueblo, who had been imprisoned by the village authorities, appealed to the territorial courts and the chief and councilors of the village were put in jail. Since the time the Indians have been unruly and it is believed the present outbreak is the result of fear by the Pueblos that they would lose their indepent ence.

Prison for a Society Man.

Harry L. Gates, a society man, charged with attempted black mail, was found guilty by a jury in the criminal branch of court in Cleveland and sentenced to two years in prison. Mrs. Ida O. Cassell received letters and telephone messages threatening that her husband would be killed in two or two young children kidnaped if she failed to pay $2,000.

Twenty Hurt in Week in Kansas.

Twelve persons were seriously injured and eight others sustained bruises when a Missouri City, Mexico and Orient passenger train was derailed by spreading rails near Sabetha. The injured were all of Sabetha. In this week in Kansas 20 persons have been injured in collisions on railroad connection with Western Foreign Greet.

The notorious Russian Colonel Czedlowskoff, who was convicted in 1905 of attempted to murder Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian army, and who escaped from a prison in Siberia, disguised as a woman, and throwing two bombs into the general's carriage. The coach was wrecked and the horses were killed, but the general escaped serious injury.

DR. HYDE CONVICTED; LIFE TERM IS HIS FATE

DELIBERATES SIXTY HOURS.

Verdict Comes When Hope of Agreement Had Been Abandoned—Fight for New Trial Next.

Dr. B. C. Hyde was found guilty in Kansas City of murder in first degree and his punishment was fixed at life imprisonment. That he poisoned his uncle, Col. Thomas H. Swope, the Kansas City millionaire, was the verdict reached by the jury after three ballots and two days of deliberation.

"I will file a motion for a new trial and then take a appeal to the court," said Frank P. Walsh, chief counsel for Dr. Hyde. The verdict came unexpectedly. Every attorney in the case had given up hope that the jury, which had been out for sixty hours, would come to an agreement.

There was a gasp from the crowd in the court room when the word "guilty" fell from the lips of the foreman of the jury, and Dr. Hyde, with clenched fists, and lips tightly pressed against each other and his eyes staring wildly, rose from his seat. His wife broke down instantly and sobbed.

Dr. Hyde's attorneys gathered around him and comforted his wife while he stood looking blankly before him with an utterly hopeless expression. He turned to his wife, and seeing her face buried in her arms, her body shaken with sobs, he shook his head sadly and whispered huskily: "Life imprisonment."

The history of the case is summarized as follows: Colonel Thos. Swope, an Independence, Mo., millionaire, died Oct. 3, 1908; Colonel Moses Huston, his manager, had died Oct. 1, 1908. Hyde was arrested Feb. 10, 1910, and released on $50,000 bonds. Several members of the Swope family were ill in November from typhoid. They were attended by Dr. H. Clark Hyde, Uncle Tom Swope died in December, 1908. He was a brother of Mrs. Hyde.

Dr. H. Clark Hyde was placed on trial April 11 and ordered into custody without bail. The supposed motive of the crime was to prevent Col. Thomas Swope from giving $1,000,000 of his fortune, as he planned, to a hospital. Mrs. Hyde being one of his heirs.

HEINZE GETS AN OVATION.

Copper Magnate Acquitted on Charge of Conspiracy in Banking Affairs.

Fritz Augustus Heinze, walked out of the criminal branch of the United States Circuit Court in New York the free man. He had been tried three times before the jury had declared that he had not, as president of the Mercantile National Bank, over-certified $500,000 in checks for his brother-in-law, Charles W. Morse, and misapplied the money to further any conspiracy against the bank's interests.

Heinze could not have gotten out of the courtroom even if he had wished a powerful strength. He had been kissed and embraced by weeping women relatives and the friends of those relatives, he had been hugged by men and hailed by the accustomed oil officering that court officials could not subdue, until with tears rushing down his cheeks and his lips quivering he could only murmur brokenly: "Thank you—thank you."

WOMAN STRANGLED IN HOME.

Victim's Hair Was Used as Instrument of Death.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hyde, wife of a wealthy real estate dealer in Beaver, Ohio, was found dead in her home in her home. She had been choked with her own hair. A mystery surrounding the crime is the fact that there was a large triangle of skin cut from the woman's forehead. Apart from the top of this triangle there were deep cuts extending to her eyes. This strange feature was pointed out by the Japanese consul, who was called into the case because a Japanese servant was suspected of knowing something of the crime. Several thousands of dollars which had been left in the house by Mr. Hyde when he went away for a few days visit were not touched, and there were no other signs of robbery.

FARMERS IN BIG FOOD POOL.

Body Formed at St. Louis to Combat High Prices.

The American Co-Operative Union, the purpose of which is to aid the farmers in marketing their products, has been organized by farmers who attended a meeting in St. Louis. The organization was formed secretly and was announced a few days later. Thomas G. Nelson, of Indianapolis, had, in president; the Rev. J. T. Tull, of Fort Smith, secretary, and Samuel Gompers, of Hoosac, Wis., treasurer. The union is to be incorporated for $1,000,000.

Wheat Condition is Fair.

The condition of the crop of wheat when on May 1, according to the crop reporting board of the Department of Agriculture, was 82.1, compared with 85.3 on April 1, 88.4 on May 1, last year, and 85.7, the average for the past ten years.

GIRL INDICTED FOR MURDER.

Katie Mann, 16 years old, was indicted by the county grand jury in Canton, Ohio, on the charge of murder in the first degree. She is accused of causing the death of her sister Elizabeth, 19 years old, at their home in Massillon, a few weeks ago. Mrs. Mann was indicted on the charge of murder in the first degree in connection with the alleged murder of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Koons recently.

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"While improvement appears in some directions, the general state of trade is still marked by cross currents. A relatively better exhibit appears in the volume of solvent payments through the banks, but money does not loosen, and another high record of trading delinquents disturbs the opposition in credits. Movements of grain, flour, live stock, hides and wool have decreased, and now demands in leading industries and trade in the period of seasonal forward activity.

"More satisfactory features are noted in transportation of iron and steel products, finished products and general merchandise. The weather conditions turned more encouraging for agricultural interests and stimulus to outdoor construction and seasonable retail lines. Higher temperatures are necessary to effect adequate distribution of winter's heavy apparel, the stocks first and at the interior being large, although not causing anxiety.

"New contracts entered testify to sustained demand in electric equipment, heavy hardware, machinery, furniture, automobiles and brass work. Planing mills have much work for local and outside needs, and the absorption is still remarkably extended in building materials of all kinds. Operations in wholesale dry goods, millinery, clothing, shoes, furniture and food products compare favorably with the business of this time last year."

"Bank clearings, $276,985,788, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1909 by 4.6 per cent and compare with $224,095,342 in 1908. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 26, against 18 last week, 26 in 1909 and 24 in 1908. These with liabilities over $5,000 number 16, as against 3 last week, 4 in 1909 and 7 in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade is quiet as a whole, unfavorable weather, the indefinite crop outlook and uncertainty as to prices of wheat and the Supreme Court decision in the distributive demand, both wholesale and retail. Trade reports from the West indicate only a fair retail trade, while jobbing business has been largely confined to small lots, and fall orders are reported backward, though perhaps equal to a year ago. Retail trade in the East is only fair, and wholesale trade is disappointing. Collections report a fair average, and the outlook for trade in reports of only fair to slow payments.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending May 12 were 216, as against 191 last week, 224 in the like week of 1909, 281 in 1908, 184 in 1907 and 161 in 1906. Business failures in Canada for the week number 21, with an aggregate of last last week and 30 in the same week a year ago.—Bradstreet's.

That the men employed in the Hudson Street Works, who have been on strike for a half year and more, have had to work twelve hours a day and seven days a week, and receive 1.332 cents an hour, and that a large percentage of them earned only 12½ cents an hour, is the sum of the report made by the Committee on Labor to the Board of Aldermen on Monday, in favor of a bill to limit to eight hours a day work performed for the city by employes of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

INTIMATE STORY OF FORTY-NINTH INDIANA

Col. Keigwin Puts History of Popular Regiment into Manuscript for Preservation.

IN CAMP AND ON THE MARCH.

Liquid Courage in Face of Advance of Morgan's Raiders Near Jeffersonville.

Survivors of the Forty-ninth Indiana Infantry are going through the history of the regiment, and its services in the War of the Rebellion, which Col. Keigwin has put in manuscript form by colonel James Keigwin, who succeeded John W. Ray as colonel the latter resigning in June, 1862, and Keigwin continuing colonel till the close of the war, in his reminiscent talk Colonel Keigwin has much to say of the part which Jeffersonville played in the great contest, and of early military life in Clark county, and he weaves in a number of amusing incidents, not only bearing directly on regimental experiences, but along other lines. For instance, when the draft was ordered in Clark county, Colonel Keigwin, who was examining surgeon to whom every man wanting exemption from military duty was compelled to report, had the opportunity to see all kinds of excuses in wholesale dry goods, millinery, clothing, shoes, furniture and food products compare favorably with the business of this time last year."

That the men employed in the Hudson Street Works, who have been on strike for a half year and more, have had to work twelve hours a day and seven days a week, and receive 1.332 cents an hour, and that a large percentage of them earned only 12½ cents an hour, is the sum of the report made by the Committee on Labor to the Board of Aldermen on Monday, in favor of a bill to limit to eight hours a day work performed for the city by employes of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

GERMAN'S RULERS AND THEIR AMERICAN GUEST.

The Kaiser and Kaiserin from London Sphere.

Theodore Roosevelt

The meeting of Emperor William and Theodore Roosevelt has been much discussed. The visit of the former President at the new palace was devoid of any spectacular features. The monarch met the court marshal of the King Edward, but the occasion lacked nothing from the view point of hospitality, and the purpose to honor the distinguished American. Mr. Roosevelt, on one side of the Imperial carriage, with the Kaiserin and Princess Victoria Louise, opposite, and the Kaiserin Victoria, Crown Prince Frederick William, Crown Princess Cecelia, Prince Eitel Friedrich, Prince Joachim and Prince Oscar, in the carriage, followed. It was intended by a large number, including many government officials and others prominent in public life.

FIGHTS DEATH FIVE DAYS

WADES THE RIVER TO SAFETY

Takes Nearly a Week to Travel Thirty Miles—Faithful Dog Saves Two Lives.

John B. Elving and his wife, with their manhood baby, together with their six other children, the eldest of whom is 15 years old, made a heartbreaking thirty mile trip through the sparsely settled and flaming forest between Grand Marais, Minn., and upper Brule Lake. It took them five days to cover the distance and they were actually almost burned and frozen to death. Two of the smaller children were saved from drowning in the swift current of Brule river by the family's giant Newfoundland dog. Fleeing homesteaders have left this entire district uninhabited.

When Elving and his family were routed from their log cabin the other morning by advancing forest fires on all sides they had been a busy every with a small stock of provisions. The overwhelming smoke almost suffocated and blinded the frightened. Into, fearing the unknown perils which might await them in the unscorched forest, they stuck stubbornly by the chores of the lake and Brule river.

The first day and night they progressed ten miles, so near to deer, bears and other wild beasts that Elving was forced to drive them to one side to furnish passage for his little family. The crackling of flames in the underbrush and the roar of the wind swept through the treetops overhead rung constantly in the ears of the fugitives. Twice shots were dropped on the hardwheeled woman and her charge. The second time they escaped only five miles. The woman was overcome with fatigue. The night which found Elving's superior chilled them to the marrow and Elving made a fire in a vegetable cellar. In the morning he discovered that the fires were impassable. The next midnight, when the glow ahead seemed to have died out, the fugitives again set forth. They proceeded about five miles, when suddenly, upon rounding a bend in the river, they faced a veritable furnace speedling through the dry and crackling timbers toward them. They retreated a short distance, until fires were discovered behind them. Elving with his hand at cut limbs cut trees on the bank, sought a favorable place in a stream and sortboard limbs and his family neck-deep in water, underneath a water screen or under a brush, which they submerged from time to time until the fire burned out.

The fourth day surrounding fires again forced them to resort to the same sacrifice, but one place Elving holled here between narrow banks, and two of the younger children who ventured too far out were swept in the current. The big family dog, who had so far by swimming the river evaded the flames, helped Elving to rescue them. The next morning the family reached an abandoned homestead, where they found an ox and cart, in which they made the last 15 miles journey to Grand Marais. The dog was cut off by a fire while foraging for food and perished.

GET $2,000 IN CAR HOLD-UP.

Three Bandits in Rich Haul on Seattle Traction Line.

Three highwaymen held up a "pay-as-you-enter" street car on the South Park line of the Seattle (Wash.) Electric Company after 7 o'clock the other morning and escaped with money and other valuables estimated at $2,000. The hold-up occurred at the Spokane avenue trestle on 1st avenue, south. Twenty passengers, all men, were on the car, which the three bandits boarded just after it left the business section. They remained quietly in their seats until the car reached Spokane avenue. There they held up the conductor and signaled the motorman to stop the car. The passengers and crew were lined up in a row, and while two of the men covered them with their revolvers, the third stood to one side and collected each man of his valu

ENDORSED BY STATE GRANGE

Of Importance to All Michigan Taxpayers and to All Interested in Better County Roads.

The Michigan State Grange, at its last session, instructed its executive committee to have special efforts made for the improvement of Michigan county roads. It is now clearly certain that the grangers in this state are nearly all in favor of making better roads at any reasonable expense, and the good roads movement is continually growing in popularity and vigor.

The state grange is also considering with seeming favor in granges all over the state a proposition for the creation of a state highway commission, with the office of state highway engineer; authorizing state aid for the establishment, construction, maintenance and repair of public highways and bridges; creating a fund; and making appropriation therefor; and providing for application by counties for state aid.

The proposed bill provides that the highway commission shall consist of a professor of civil engineering in the University of Michigan, a professor of civil engineering in the Michigan Agricultural and Mechanical College, and one member to be appointed by the governor, to serve without pay except necessary personal traveling and other expenses incurred by authority of the act.

The state highway engineer shall receive a salary not exceeding $4,000 and his actual necessary expenses incurred under the act. He may appoint necessary assistant engineers, clerks, etc. He shall have charge of records of the department; shall cause to be made and kept a general highway plan for the state, shall consult with county and township highway authorities, etc., and have general supervision of construction and repair of highways and bridges.

County highway officials, when over any county shall decide that any main traveled road or roads therein should be constructed or improved shall make written application to the state highway engineer for state aid, and said engineer shall, if he approves and is satisfied that the county will meet its fair portion of the cost, proceed to make said improvement, to cost $2,000 or less, or to let the same by contract at a cost not exceeding $2,000.

There are various other proper provisions necessary for duly carrying out with economy, efficiency and safe-guarding the public credit and the interests of taxpayers, the provisions of the act.

This bill was drawn by Director L. W. Page, of the office of public roads, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, and is the work of wide experience and study in good roads and legislation therefor. Application for copies and other documents may be made to N. P. Hull, Master of Michigan State Grange, Ormondale Mich.

LOCAL OPTION RALLY

Petoskey is to be the rallying center of the northern counties on Memorial Day—afternoon and evening. Prominent business men from Charlevoix, Antrim and Otsego, as well as our county, will give short platform talks on the effect of local option in their towns and cities. They will also discuss the best means to bring about a better enforcement of the state and county laws. It is also hoped a stronger feeling of community interests and co-operative work will result from this concerted movement of the leaders of the four counties.

No more fitting celebration of our great national holiday could be devised than that gathering to discuss live topics in the all absorbing theme of good government.

The committees of the county and village organizations are making active preparations to make the occasion of interest and profit to all who attend.

The W. H. White Co. of Boyne City are generously arranging an excursion from Boyne City for that day.

The Petoskey Federation of Women's Clubs are preparing to furnish entertainment for all visitors.

Beside the business men of the county, speakers of state and national reputation are expected to address the audience.

An earnest invitation is extended by the county and city officers to all who are interested in good government and temperance, to be present and take some of the enjoyable exercises of the occasion.

THE DEVELOPMENT BUREAU

Regular Meeting of the Directors—Roster of Officers Elected.

A meeting of the directors of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, to be held in the city council rooms this afternoon, and the usual good interest in the work in hand is manifested by the representatives present. The session was called to order by President Day and the early part of the afternoon was given up to the reports of the secretary and treasurer and discussing plans and means to make even a better showing in the exposition in Chicago this year than last, which was sufficient to arouse the jealousies of all the western states competing in the show. In connection with this rally many ideas were brought out as to the best way to stimulate the interest of the fruit growers in the preparation of the highest possible quality of fruits of all kinds. It was shown that there will not be the least item omitted which might tend to insure the advertising benefits of the exposition in any of the counties making up the membership of the bureau.

A communication was received from the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau asking that they be allowed to participate in this exhibition with our organization. The work of the new organization is similar to our own and it would be expedient for all to work in harmony, but it is extremely doubtful if we have secured all the space we will require for our own show, to say nothing of granting any to anyone else. However, if the association of counties in the northeastern section of the state can secure space alongside of ours the effect for each would be beneficial.

Antrim, Joseph Dutler, Elk Rapids; Charlevoix, D. S. Payton, Charlevoix; Ford P. Hobbins, Boyne Falls; Emmet, E. C. Rust, Pellston; A. L. Deisel, Harbor Spring; Grand Traverse, L. P. Verkerk and C. P. Hoek; Kalkaska, James Greacen, Kalkaska; J. W. Wolf, South Boardman; Lake, George Blass, Luzerne; D. H. Day, Glen Haven; M. Dame, Northport; Manistee, B. H. Hendel, Manistee; Mason, T. M. Sawyer and F. W. Hawley, Ludington; Newaygo, Scott Barton and Adelbert Branch, White Cloud; Oceana, J. D. S. Hanson, Hart; Benzie, Will Curtis, Reed City; Wexford, Glen A. Brigham, Buckley; S. S. Lloyd, Cadillac. M. & D.—E. H. H. F. A. Mitchell, Manistee; Northern Michigan Transportation Co. H. F. Church, Chicago; I. M. R. R., H. J. Gray, Grand Rapids.

President—D. H. Day, Glen Haven.
First Vice President—L. P. Verkerk.
Second Vice President—Will Curtis, Reed City.
Treasurer—B. H. Hendel, Manistee.
Executive Committee—D. H. Day, L. P. Verkerk, B. H. Hendel, F. A. Mitchell, H. J. Gray, J. Dan Chaddock, Payton, E. C. Rust, L. P. Haight, George Blass.
Auditing Committee—F. A. Mitchell, C. M. Hassett.
Statistics Committee—C. P. Hoek, James Greacen, A. L. Rust.
Printing Committee—John Gibson, F. M. Sawyer, H. F. Church.
Membership Committee—G. M. Dame, C. A. Bingham, J. D. S. Hanson.

The latter part of the day was devoted to further discussion of matters for the promotion of the work of developing the advantages of the territory embraced in the Western Michigan Development Bureau—Traverse City Eagle.

George Ho has been wearing the smile the last few days that indicates that something extraordinary has happened, and that he has succeeded in making others happy as well as himself. When asked to explain, the Journal learns that there is some danger of him losing his former title, "The Minister Man," to take on a new one, "The Man that Marries," and went on to say that some day he married the one-hundredth couple since his ministry began in Boyne City.

Traverse City special: Thrown from the horse which she was riding by colliding with Ad Wolgast's auto, in which one champion, with three companions, George Gaffney, "Dad" Brown and Charles Wilcox, were driving, Kathleen Slater, the 12 year old daughter of J. W. Slater, a prominent local furniture man, was badly injured here this morning. The machine struck the girl's horse, throwing her to the pavement, breaking her hip an inflicting bruises and possible internal injuries. The light weight champion, who was driving, stopped the machine, picked up the girl and carried her to her home. The fighter made an attempt to see Slater in his place of business, expressing his sorrow that the accident had occurred, but Slater's son advised him to keep way, fearing his fathers wrath. The champion left later in the day for a trip north in his machine.

Frankfort Patriot: The fish tug Sylvia Lindjerg and Anderson of this port, is practically a total loss beached about three miles north of Empire. Fire was discovered on board about 10:00 o'clock yesterday morning and the distress signal calling for help was given, and notwithstanding the fact that the boat was in flames, succeeded in rending her onto the beach. Capt. Geo. Waters of the Coast W., who was in the same service, came in answer to the call for help and assisted as far as possible. The Chicos is one of the last fish tugs in these waters, being a steam tug, built for fishing purposes. Her loss will reach $5,000, with some insurance. The boat was 25 gross and 15 net tonnage.

A PATHETIC PARTING.

Last Meeting of William Winter and Richard Mansfield.

The last days of Mansfield were inexpressibly affecting and sorrowful. His condition underwent very many changes, his suffering at times was great, but cheerfully he gulped a little strength. He had for some time been deteriorated on a journey to England. His passage was tempestuous, for May! but he was not able to sail. I saw him on the morning of May 11, 1907, he told them I would see you, Willy," he said, "even if I were dying." We sat together for some time. He did not speak much, nor could I speak, saddened by the sorrowful sight of my friend. I felt he knew that we knew that he was done for, but I knew that I should never see him again. When he did speak it was little more than a murmur. Twice I saw, his mind was busy with the past. Several times he mentioned Jefferson and his philosophy. "Bassett is green my boy" he said. Once he spoke about his library. "I have not lived a bad life." Presently I rose to go and clasped his hand and said goodby. As the door I turned and look at him once more. He was sitting huddled in his chair. His gaunt face shone cloudbaked, his clothes hung loosely about him, his face was pale and his eyes were as expressive, and I want to his eyes as he looked at me that I shall never forget. Presently I went back and kissed his forehead and pressed his hand and so came away. We never met again. Since then I have stood beside its grave. Life seems to be chiefly made up of fireworks like that and memories like those.—"Life and Art of Richard Mansfield," by William Winter.

The Arch.

The consensus of opinion among the architects is to the effect that the arch was invented by the Romans. Some one else said it was invented by the Egyptians, while there are others who claim that it was invented by the Greeks, but there can be no doubt about the fact that the Romans were the first to apply the principle to architecture. The earliest instance of its use is in the sewers of the Cloaca Maximum, or Great sewer, of Rome, built under the direction of the Tarquins, the fifth line of kings, a work which is regarded by the Romans themselves as the most astonishing monument of antiquity. Built entirely without cement, it is still doing duty after a service of almost twenty-five centuries.—New York Sun.

THE DROPS
THE BEST REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM
Lumbago, Sciatica, Gout, Neuralgia, Kidney Trouble and LaGrippe.
A reliable prescription for long, special and stubborn cases that gives quick relief. Its effectiveness in severe cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Gout, Neuralgia and Kidney Trouble and LaGrippe has been amazing to physicians. Its quick action in relieving the severest pain, its tendency to shorten the duration of a painful attack, and its marked beneficial effect upon the kidneys, should recommend it to every sufferer.
Five Seed Graft.
The grangers of Washington state or some of them are growing more conservative than their congressmen in the national capital may long be. Every customer receives five packets free seeds from their congressmen in the national capital any longer. In many instances these seed packets are sent to grange secretaries for distribution to parties who have sent in their names to grangers that they believe those who send those that they are not worthy of receiving the seeds and are sending out free government seeds to doubtful. These seeds are tendered big our already overburdened mails, and then congress refuses to give us a parcel post because the mail service is a losing proposition. It is necessary that the government buy the old seeds from the seed dealers, then it would be better to have them at once than to send them through the mails and have them burned at full cost.

A NEW HAMPSHIRE MAN.
Elected State Master to Succeed H. O. Hadley.
Richard Pattee, the subject of this sketch, was born April 27, 1872, at Alexandria, N. H. After attending the common schools he graduated from the New Hampton seminary in the English department and then went to Minneapolis, Minn., and worked in the cotton-batt department of the University of Minnesota.
Knowledge of shorthand led him into newspaper work, in which employment he traveled through the south and middle west for three years. Called back to New Hampshire, he entered the academy at New Hampton and graduated from the classical course in 1899; took special work in music, then two years in Dartmouth one year; engaged in real estate business in Ashland, N. H., in 1901, and moved to Plymouth in 1905. Joined New Hampton grange the year 1898, was appointed, 1887, was steward, assistant lecturer and master; member of the Lake and Valley Pomona when it was organized; was district master under Master N. J. Rutherford in 1904-5; was chosen lecturer in Grange Pomona in 1906, and served six years; elected master of the state grange in 1909. Mr. Pattee is a member and past master of the Masonic Lodge at Ashland, N. H. and member of the Knights of Pythias lodge at the same place. He was married in 1900 and has one son.
Grange Prize Gardens.
The Dawson (Mass.) grange contributing a new line of work for its own house in the form of a prize garden contest for the school children. The work prizes and gratuities, amounting to $45, have been offered to be competed for by the school children in the nine grades. The plan is based on the work of the Ely grange in Lisbon, which has been conducting such contests for four years. It is the intention to carry the work of a grange, combining an educational purpose, the first of identifying the home. The prizes are to be awarded for the greatest improvement in the grounds of each. Flower seeds are to be sold to the contestants at a cent a packet. Hinds the gardens are to be at home, the children will receive some instruction about them from their teachers, and friendly visitors will supervise their work. The superintendent of schools and interested parties are cordially invited and think this a good way to introduce agricultural education.

COMBINING RURAL FORCES.
Other Granges Can Do What Ypsilanti Is Doing Successfully.
For the past three years Ypsilanti grange of Michigan under the leadership of Lecturer Elmer L. Pybel, has followed a policy of making our program in every sense an open door and directing it to the presentation by an outside speaker of some topic of general interest in the community. People outside the grange communities, but known to have direct interest in the particular subject to be considered, are invited. Sometimes other organizations which are working along our special line are asked to attend or send representatives to participate in the discussions. In this way questions relating to dairying, fruit culture, good roads, the state constitution, temperance, ideas, schools and the tariff have been presented. Last November a model meeting took place when an all day session in conjunction with the Washtenaw County Farmers' institute was held. Members of pioneer families and of farmers' clubs, rural pastors and Sunday school workers, were cordially invited, for a part of the afternoon the program was in consider how rural forces might strengthen one another's efforts.
It proved to be a most valuable meeting. We can but name a few of the subjects discussed to show the range of topic: "School Sanitation," by a member of the state board of health; "The Rural Field and Its Needs," by Lecturer Graham of the Patrons' grange, who said that the field for uplift in country life consisted, first, better farming; second, better or more even distribution of farm products; third, doing away with the centralizing of large fortunes, fourth, organization of farmers.
L. H. Bacel, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., took the same topic for the side of character building. Another speaker on the benefits of using the state traveling libraries, and Professor Kenyon of the agricultural college presented the farm and home reading courses and spoke on the "Relations of Parent and Teacher." Delightful music was interspersed through the program. "It was easy to some ways unique to us," says Jennie Hunt, lecturer of the state grange. "The gringe for forty years has blossomed along these lines without itself, but there was a new conception of a new era women organizations shall meet and confer together as individuals do. Only dimly yet is the significance of this later movement grasped."

IDEAL RURAL SCHOOLS.

What a Massachusetts Professor Thinks About Them.
At the farmers' week meeting at Amherst mass., Professor Hart opened his views on the rural school, which were rather more advanced than those hitherto held by editors so far as they have been publicly expressed.
He remarked that the line of improvement for the rural schools should be in the direction of more buildings, more land and more permanency for the teacher. The building should have at least three rooms—one for assembly and for manual work and for domestic science and home arts. The land should be at least three acres, or more if need be, and should be devoted to vegetable and flower gardens for the instruction of pupils, to experimental plots for nobly horticulture and demonstration work, to recreation fields for games and open air gymnasium work. The school term should be continuous throughout the year, the older children and adults using the facilities during the less busy seasons, the younger children using them during the spring, summer and fall. The teacher should be induced to become a permanent member of the community and be provided with a home in or near the school building. The school should be the co-operation between the home and the school. The school should become a sort of clearing house of the practical knowledge of the prosperity of the community.

The New Jersey Grange.
At the annual session of the New Jersey state grange the farmers were unanimous in their condemnation the county tax boards, and they will memorialize the legislature on this subject. They are also of the opinion the boards of health are clothed with more power over the farming population than the government has over the sanitary regulations. The milk exchanges are especially obnoxious to the grangers, who believe there is an amount of red tape in the matter of inspection altogether out of gear with fair treatment. Among other matters discussed was the taxing of land, and it was agreed that land stock should be taxed at its full value. The grange also favored a parcel post.

The Pennsylvania state grange will meet at Butler, Pa., next December for its annual session. Since the last session of the state grange sixteen new subordinate granges have been organized.

The Query Box.
Dear Sir—When a man slips does he slip up or down?—Vielle. If he yends sideother where he lands. If he finishes on the ground he slips down. But if his momentum carries him to the roof of a second-story building, then he slips up. (No charge.)

Glass Bricks Replace Windows.

"What's a little thing that could hurt you?"

"It be back in a moment," he said, and he went up stairs, returning presently, carrying a red flannel petticoat with keys.

"Why, Zelda, my daughter," he said and waved his hand with a little touch of anxiety.

"Oh, it's nothing!" she moved the keys upon the table and laughed at the thought of many blunts and bruises. "I guess we all tagged well, this time, I guess, on which their sex." "Your mother's very methodical—very polonaise."

Zelda rose from and turned to the fire, as though to hide some slight confusion.

Zelda was turning the keys over, and he noticed that they were all labeled. A sure pang sent into her eyes—a pang of remorse that she had been so gentle and selfish with her mother, and had left her to work alone, or in the dull pastime, and then carried home the keys, and had not been half unkind or great loads school was over. Her mother had suffered from difficult times, which were perhaps, in part, due to her own selfishness.

CHASE S. OSBORN THE MAN.

Something About the Candidate For Governor.

Chase S. Osborn is a man of wonderful activities, of a versatility amazing even to his closest friends. He been an untiring student for years, has a library in his home at Sault Ste. Marie which is without an equal in the state, and life long travels in foreign lands have given him a wealth of information on every conceivable subject.

One night some months ago Mr. Osborn was the guest at a small dinner party in Detroit. At the table were gathered a scientist, editor, all of whom life had been spent in the labor, a lawyer, whose hobby is ancient Greek history; an official who was formerly a newspaper reporter, a man strong in the labor union movement and a business man who is an ardent reformer.

When the coffee and cigars were reached the talk about the table became general, of course, and Mr. Osborn was the center of it all. Without any apparent labor he discussed the mechanical side of the development of the great lakes' freight with the captain, argued a point in ancient history and compared Athens of today with the Athens of two years ago with a lawyer, exchanged tales of newspaper experiences with the former reporter took up issues of the labor movement with the union man and compared trout fishing on the north shore with fishing in this state with the business man.

It was a wonderful revelation to the men about the table and uncovered an Osborn vividly the experienced with all walks and conditions of life which Mr. Osborn will bring to this south ern state in his campaign.

And yet this general discussion revealed but a small fraction of the knowledge possessed by Mr. Osborn. His book on South America, "Andean Land," has already become a text book on the great country to the south of ours and is a standard in the libraries throughout all the country. It was his knowledge of minerals that lead to his discovery of the Moose Mountain iron range in Florida, the richest iron discovery in many years.

Chase Salmon Osborn was born in Huntington county, Ind., on Jan. 22, 1860. Both his father and mother were physicians, and it was their wish that he also embrace medicine as a profession. Mr. Osborn was educated in the public schools of Lafayette, Ind., and Purdue university. He took up the study of medicine, but soon dropped it as uncongenial and on leaving college became a newspaper man, starting as a reporter on the Lafayette Home Journal. He soon sought the larger field of Chicago and from there went to Milwaukee, where he was identified with several of the papers. He was married in 1881 to Miss Lillian G. Jones and two years later went into the wilds of northern Wisconsin to become editor of the Florence Mining Journal. Florence was a "lad" town in those days, and in a campaign for reform which Mr. Osborn carried on his life was several times threatened. In 1887 he took possession of the Sault Ste. Marie News and conducted it for a number of years, finally disposing of the paper to W. Frank Knox, the present publisher. Mr. Osborn retains his interest in the newspaper field by acting as president of the Courier-Herald company of Saginaw.

Throughout his life Mr. Osborn has taken a great interest in politics. He was postmaster at the Soo from 1885 to 1889 and has served as a delegate to countless conventions of the Republican party. He was one of the original Pinchot men in the state, using the influence of his paper in behalf of the famous governor when Mayor Pingree became a candidate for governor, and under Governor Pingree he served both as game warden and as state railroad commissioner.

His record in these two offices gives clear indication of the character of the man. As game warden he prosecuted the Department, enforced the laws without fear or favor, and the records at Lansing show that he made more prosecutions for less money than any man who has ever held the office.

As railroad commissioner he secured the first two rate cases in the state and fought for many reforms in railroad service, including the abolition of grade crossings.

Mr. Osborn is now a regent of the University of Michigan and gives much of his time to the affairs of this great state institution. He was a candidate for governor twelve years ago in the famous "battle of the breeds" between two other candidates which was one of the direct causes of the business war which has which finally led to the passage of a state primary law.

As to what Mr. Osborn stands for in the present campaign in which he seeks the Republican nomination for governor there can be no mistake. He is against machine domination and the ruling of the masses by special interests. He is for a cleaning out in the state house and a united Republican party working for the best interests of the state.

"Osborn, Harmony and a New Deal," was recently adopted by his friends as a slogan, and the reception which he received on his recent visit to Chase S. Osborn is a big step toward a new regime.

His Proof.

SERMON
SHAKESPEARE

(Copr 1909 by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)

Homekeeping youth have ever homely wits.
Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act I., Sc. 1.

The Elizabethan age was an age of action. Before that time Englishmen had lived in a narrow world but then the whole earth became their stage. The voyages of Drake and Raleigh so fanned the imagination of old and young alike, and the little island kingdom began that career of conquest and exploration that was to make her master of the high seas and controller of the destinies of nations—that was to divert her colonies, nations within themselves, to a circle circling the earth; to the islands of the Greeks and Latins; the culture, the art, the music of the Continent, were all appealing to the minds of Englishmen. English ships were sending their sons abroad "to seek preferment out," some to "mediterranean parts," some "to discover islands far away." In Shakespeare's time to say man of attending it

Study is excellent. It broadens the mind and moulds character, but a sojourn spent in foreign lands and schools is his education. It is all very well to read learned descriptions of the Parthenon and the Coliseum, on the antiquities of Rome and of Greece, the art of Florence and Paris. A visit to Greece or Italy or France makes the best learning a reality; the eye sees and realizes what the mind only vaguely managed. No matter how brilliantly Venice may be described on the canvas of Ruskin or on the canvas of Turner it is not until the eye has seen the Bridge of Sighs, the palaces and the palaces of the ancient princes and merchants. The palaces of Raphael the statuary of Michael Angelo have been reproduced in copies and prints and scattered to the ends of the earth. Learned volumes have been published on the art of these intellectual giants. To fully appreciate their power it is necessary to visit the churches and galleries of Europe. Who can comprehend from books the glories of the Western plains with their innumerable herds and their miles and miles of golden grain, the awful sublimity of the Rockies? Travel is necessary for a proper understanding of the external world and the word of art.

It is even more essential to the student of men and manners. The philosopher who said "Know thyself" was wise, but the only true way to do this is to learn about other selves. It may "ennoble" us home they will never gain this knowledge. So profound such was ever uttered than that "Homekeeping youth have ever homely wits." A man whose horizon is the fences of his farm, or the suburbs of the nearby town or city, or even the boundaries of his country, grows narrow in mind, in soul become dwarfed. Travel is the greatest of educators. It stores the mind, it sharpens the wits, it broadens the sympathies. "The proper study of mankind is man," said Alexander Pope. How is a man going to study mankind by his own fireside? To enable him to take an intelligent part in the affairs of his country travel is as essential. The statesmen and diplomats of the nation have been trained as much by travel as in the halls of learning.

Study and travel go hand in hand. Books tell you what to expect in the country visited. Without this knowledge much is missed. There are thousands of travelers rushing over Europe at the present moment who know no more about the scenes they see than the sheep they see not. The glories of the Old World have little meaning to them. Whether or not a man is to benefit by travel depends largely on his intellectual and moral training. Unless his mind has been prepared lordly castles and vast cathedrals are to him nothing but piles of stone. The men and women he meets are merely foreigners, to be despised because they speak an alien tongue and have other manners. Their vices too often are what attract, and instead of benefiting by foreign travel many men return to their country the worse for their sojourn abroad.

But there is vastly more good than harm done by foreign travel. Kipling's greatness is due to the outcry he has some displayed in searching the corners of the earth and learning of all nations. In recent years Japan has leaped into the front rank of the world. Why? In the universities of Europe and America Japanese youths have been studying. In all countries citizens of Japan have been travelling. In the factories and universities they have been learning. Contact with other nations has broken down the barrier that formerly existed between the rest of the world.

The schoolhouse must drop behind the times. The wise traveler, who learns of all men, is the man fitted to achieve greatness. His mind has been broadened by contact with other men and other manners. From a narrow villager he becomes a citizen of the world. His soul grows commensurate and his sympathies widen. Whether you may be thinking in the halls of institutions or communities a stunted spiritual life is to be found.

The Word "Slavs."

An interesting listener is history of the twisted application of the noble name of a people is afforded by the use of the word "slavs." Now, the Slavi, tribes dwelling on the banks of the Dnieper, derived their signification from "Slava," meaning noble or illustrious. In the days of the later Roman empire vast numbers of those Slavs were taken over by the Romans to the condition of captive servants, and in this way the name of the tribes came in time to carry with it the idea of a low state of servitude, the idea of servile (of its origin) meaning and one that has survived to this time.

Harbor Springs Vs. Charlevoix.

Saturday May 21st the Charlevoix High School base ball team took the Harbor Springs base ball team into camp by the score 9 to 1. This is the second game the two schools have had this year the Harbor winning the first one. However first they were complete ly out classed in every department of the game. At 3:30 Charlevoix took the field and the first three Harbor men went out in order. In the second after the was gone Cotanch singled and stole second. He was run down however he were second and third. Baker now up struck out. In the third after two were down Shaw got to first on an error but the next man struck out. In the fifth the visitors got the only run as the result of three hits and an error on Charlevoix's right fielder. They were never dangerous after this inning Charlevoix made two runs in the third on a hit, an error and a steal two more in fourth, two in the fifth and two in the 12th. In the seventh she had the base full but couldn't come home with a hit.

Undoubtedly the star play of the game was pulled off in the sixth when with a man on first and one down Hamlin knocked down a liner with one hand and touched second in time to get the force out.

Charlevoix batted played together in good style and Powers and Krumagals did good battery work. For Harbor Springs Newman, at short played a star game. Saturday the team goes to Petoskey to wipe out the defeat administered by that team earlier in the season.

The game by innings as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	r	h	e
C. H. S.	0	0	2	2	2	0	0	0	8	7	7	3

It was so cold in New York part of the winter of 1779 that residents in the vicinity were compelled to cut down the tall trees that stood at what is now the head of Wall street to make kindling wood.

The Bank telegraphed Grand Rapids and received ample funds yesterday with which to meet all demands.

—The department of agriculture has published an official statement asserting that the W. J. Orr Fish company of Bay Port, Mich., substituted 500 packages of fish which the company shipped to Ohio. The fish were brand ed as "Orr's Choice Family Whitefish," but Dr. John Wilson's chemists declared them to be lake herring. In a suit brought by the government under the pure food law the consignees and shippers of the fish were herring and gave a bond binding them to sell the fish for nothing else than herring.

—James Cameron, a pioneer and leading citizen of Central Lake, died at his home in that village Monday morning, of heart trouble. Mr. Cameron was one of the early pioneers of Antrim county, having, as a member of the firm of Cameron Brothers, succeeded J. H. Gilkson in the lumber business in 1869. Later they moved the plant to Central Lake, but discontinued lumbering several years ago. He was a man of sterling integrity, and his friends were legion throughout Northern Michigan.

—Memorial Day was ushered in cold and rainy, and the weather continued bad most of the day. The G. A. R. excursions at the cemetery were discontinued with the veterans and the little Corps, despite the rain and cold, went there in carriages and deposited their tokens of remembrance on the graves of the departed. About the cemetery proper departed loved ones were remembered by many who take comfort to the living. We cannot remember more disagreeable weather on Memorial Day.

—Giles Warner, capitalist; William R. Bridge, county surveyor of Lake county, Ind.; H. C. Hammett, of Cartonage, Ill., (associated with Boy City); and Judge William Rees, are interested in an orchard plat near Charlevoix. About one thousand acres of orchard land has been purchased, and the best varieties of apple trees will be planted as rapidly as possible. Judge Brown was formerly president of the Oregon Fruit Union, and interested in the growing of fruit in Willamette Valley and Hood River, Oregon, and is supposed his confidence in Northern Michigan as a fruit growing section.

NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN

By June 27 Else Pupils Cannot Take Advantage of New Free High School Tuition Provision.

A Lansing dispatch of May 19th to the Detroit Free Press says:

Under an act passed at the session of 1909 the board of education of any school district which does not maintain a high school is required to vote a tax sufficient to pay the tuition to one of the three nearest high schools of and children residents of the district who have completed the eighth grade, providing that the parents of the children shall give notice in writing to the board of education on or before the fourth Monday in June that they are desirous of having their children attend a certain institution for the ensuing year.

Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction Keeler says that in the event the parents of children fail to give such written notice to the district board he will not be permitted to secure tuition money from the treasurer and it is absolutely essential that the board shall receive notice before the last Monday in June.

The law specifies that no child shall receive more than $4, although the board may appropriate a larger amount if the voters so desire at the annual school meeting of the district. Keeler states that a child is figured in the apportionment of the primary school money during the ages from 5 to 20 years, but many children enter a high school when they reach the age of 15, and as they are still counted in the apportionment of the primary money, he claims that in most cases the money received from this fund will pay the tuition of those who enter a higher institution and the county will lose nothing. The act becomes operative next fall.

Death of Mrs. Jane Widdifield

Mrs. Jane Widdifield, well known here, died at her home in Washington, D. C., early Tuesday morning. Her death was due, primarily, to a fall early last winter, which resulted in quite serious injury.

Deceased was the mother of S. E. Widdifield, who was private secretary to supreme court justice Peckham up to the time of the death of that judge. She was a sister of Mrs. S. Stewart, and an aunt of Harry Widdifield, both of this city. Although her home was with her son in Washington, nearly half the year was spent here, where they owned a pleasant summer home in the south terrace.

Mutually affectionate devotion between mother and son was never more strikingly exemplified than in these two homes. The pride of the mother in the remarkably successful career of her only son was bountifully reciprocated by the filial solicitude of the son for the comfort and happiness of the mother. Worldly honors are fleeting, and when the these are forever broken, Mrs. Widdifield was a woman of most estimable qualities.

The remains are expected here today or to-morrow.

—For three clear evenings last week, following a period of cloudiness, the comet exhibited itself, and then, hid it self in the clouds again as if ashamed of itself; and well it may be, if it was under any moral obligations to justify the astronomers' forecasts, for it has nothing about it to terrify or inspire awe.

—Concerning the mad dog scare which has swept over the province of Ontario during the past year, a doctor just returned from the Kings domain says: "The rabies have caused many deaths throughout the province, and in order to prevent a further spread and a repetition of last summer's catastrophe the authorities have adopted the most strenuous measures. Every dog found running at large is killed, and dogs with this law is from $20 to $200 according to locality. In the village of Ireneda there are only four dogs left in the summer time. A branch of the New York Pasteur institute has been established at Toronto for the treatment of hydrophobia cases. I believe the cities and villages of Michigan should give this subject serious consideration. By taking up the matter at once relative to muzzling dogs the serious results that may develop next July and August will be successfully overcome.

Political Notice

To the Republican Electors of Charlevoix County.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds at the primary election to be held Sept. 6th, 1910.

ROMEO A. EMREY,
Sth, 1910. antsum, Vertetian."

THE LAST HONORS

Obsequies of the Late Major Edward H. Green—Large Attendance and Impressive Ceremonies.

With a clear sky and under the warm rays of an almost summer sun, all that was mortal of the lamented Major Green was laid to rest in Brookside cemetery, Friday morning, in that plat sacredly set apart for the dead of veterans of the civil war.

The body lay in state at the Episcopal church during the earlier morning hours, and was viewed by the people of the city and the surrounding country. At the ten o'clock general services the church was packed, and as many more people waited outside. The services were short but beautiful and impressive. At its close the flower laden casket was borne to the hearse by six of the pioneer neighbors and friends of the departed citizen—A. Buttars, F. J. Mosely, H. I. Iddings, H. S. Harsha, W. H. Miller and O. E. Wilber.

Yeaman Commandery Knights Templar, twenty-five swords, was given the place of honor in the line, followed by fully one hundred Master and loyal Knight Masons, the common council and Baxter Post, G. A. R. This body of veterans, to which the Major was devotedly attached, numbered but nine, and they rode in carriages, as they will henceforth, as one by one they are mustered out.

At the grave the solemn Knight Templar service was read by Eminent Commander French and past Eminent Commander Searl; the Masons departed their emblem of "sprigs of acacia," as the body of the Christian soldier was lowered into the grave.

From ten until the noon hour every business place in Charlevoix was closed.

BOOSTING MICHIGAN

Geo. E. Rowe, Editor of the Fruit Belt, Plans a Fruit Land Exploitation.

George E. Rowe, editor of The Fruit Belt, is planning a campaign to awaken greater interest in fruit growing in Michigan and to spread the fame of Michigan as a fruit-growing state in other parts.

At the Northern Michigan and the Detroit state fairs he will offer $50 cash prizes for the best bushel of apples, pears and peaches, and varieties. A total $50 for each fair; in addition he will put up $50 as special prizes to be distributed among various county and district fairs.

To make Michigan's resources better known, Mr. Rowe is planning to collect an exhibit of 500 boxes of Michigan fruit and display them in a circuit of big eastern fairs. The exhibit will be passed on from one fair to another and this will continue as long as there are any fairs left that can be called. In this way Michigan's advantages will be brought to the attention of practical farmers and fruit growers, the classes it is most desired to reach.—Grand Rapids Herald.

Northern Fruits Free

Prof. L. R. Taft of the Michigan Agricultural College has made a carefully study of the fruit interests of Michigan, and on more than one occasion has expressed himself in high terms of the superior quality of the tree products of this state. On a recent occasion he put himself on record as follows:

"Northern Michigan has hundreds of thousands of acres of land admirably adapted to fruit growing, combining an elevated and slightly rolling surface and suitable soil conditions, for varieties which are necessary for successful fruit culture.

"Fruit grown in Northern Michigan is famous for its high color and fine flavor, which are due to the clear summer weather, freedom from late frosts and long hours of sunshine possessed by that region."

"The northern counties have a decided advantage over those farther south by being able to prolong the season of some of the hardiest early bearing and productive varieties, such as Wealthy and McIntosh Red, which reach their greatest perfection in northern Michigan, but are of little commercial value in the southern part of the state, where they are caused to ripen too early.

BOY CITY

Cheboygan Deeply Interested—Will Send Bunch of Boys

Cheboygan Tribune: Several hundred of our active, energetic school boys have signified their desire to spend three weeks this summer at Boy City, but whether many of them will succeed in gratifying this desire remains to be seen.

Associate Director Hahn was in the city yesterday and in response to his invitation Cheboygan boys filled the Princess theatre to its utmost capacity. Each boy had heard of the wonderful organization which has for its aim the providing of a wholesome and profitable summer outing for boys.

It is not a reformatory nor a charitable institution. It is conducted for live boys who are ambitious, full of fun and capable of enjoying themselves at boys' sports. Mr. Hahn outlined the plan somewhat as follows:

Boy City opens for the reception of boys July 15 and closes September 1. There are directors, instructors and committees in charge of various lines of amusements. Special attention is devoted to athletics. There is a fine swimming pool and all sorts of out door attractions including a circus, country fair, camp fire grounds and the like. The city is governed by the boys themselves, instructions in high class citizenship being a great form of entertainment. The boys hold elections, do campaigning, elect their officers and conduct affairs strictly according to law.

Boy City is located on Pine Lake two miles from Charlevoix. Every line of business is given a chance there. There is a bank, a postoffice, a restaurant and other places of business there. The houses in this unique city consist of tents arranged in avenues under the trees.

Now as to the expense. $1.00 per week is the regular "max" for the privileges of the city. $3.50 per week covers table board and $2.00 per week the rent of a tent. Total expense is $6.50 per week. This may be materially reduced if tents are provided by the citizens themselves and many of the boys also do so.

Prin. Allan D. Grigsby attended the meeting yesterday afternoon and was the hero of the occasion, at least the demonstration caused by his 'speech' was loud, prolonged and very gratifying to one so interested in boys and their welfare as Mr. Grigsby. Supt. Hahn and Mrs Grigsby chaperone a party of Cheboygan boys to Boy City next summer, the outing to be of three weeks duration. Under the direction Mrs Grigsby's assistance he could arrange to cover all expenses for $45 or per boy for the outing, this to include railroad fare, tent accommodations, board and taxes.

Boy City is now the talk of the town—that is of the boy side of the population. Every boy who has heard of the scheme is wildly interested and many a lad is casting about for ways and means of earning those fifteen dollars with which to cover the expense of having so much fun, with so much more to them than can possibly be figured in dollars and cents.

The Tribune hopes to see a goodly delegation of Cheboygan boys enrolled as citizens of Boy City the coming summer, and it is certain that at least one boys will gather there during the summer.

"Billy" Coatta Shot

A telegram from Edgemont, S. D., Sunday conveyed the startling information that Will Coatta, formerly of this place, was shot in the eye at Edgemont, and has been accidentally shot and killed at that place.

Coatta was was a painter by trade, but came for the west several years ago. The remains are to be brought here.

A Woman's Great Idea

is how to make herself attractive. But, without health it is hard for her to be lovely in face, form or temper. A weak, sick woman will be nervous and irritable. CHASE S. OSBORN THE MAN.

Something About the Candidate For Governor.

Chase S. Osborn is a man of wonderful activities, of a versatility amazing even to his closest friends. He been an untiring student for years, has a library in his home at Sault Ste. Marie which is without an equal in the state, and his long travels in foreign lands have given him a wealth of information on every conceivable subject.

One night some months ago Mr. Osborn was the guest of a small dinner party in Detroit. At the table were gathered a stomatical operator, all of whose life had been spent on the lakes; a lawyer, whose hobby is ancient Greek history; an official who was formerly a newspaper reporter, a man strong in the labor union movement and a business man who is an ardent fisherman.

When the coffee and cigars were reached the talk about the table became general, of course, and Mr. Osborn was the center of it all. Without any apparent labor he discussed the mechanical side of the development of the great lakes' freight, with the capable, artistic touch of a Greek history and compared Athens of today with the Athens of long ago with the lawyer, exchanged tales of newspaper experiences with the former reporter, took up phases of the labor movement with the union man and compared trout fishing on the north shores with the same in this state with the business man.

It was a wonderful revelation to the men about the table and impressed on them vividly the experience with all walks and conditions of life which Mr. Osborn will bring to the executive chair in Michigan.

And yet the general discussion represented but a small fraction of the knowledge possessed by Mr. Osborn. His book on South America, "Andean Land," has already become a text book on the great country to the south of ours and is a standard in the libraries throughout the country. It was the knowledge of minerals that lead to his discovery of the Mamozekel Mountain iron range in Canada, the richest iron discovery in many years.

Chase Salmon Osborn was born in Huntington county, Ind., on Jan. 22, 1860, both his father and mother were physicians, and it was their wish that he also embrace medicine as a profession. Mr. Osborn was educated in the public schools of Lafayette, Ind., and Purdue university. He took up the study of medicine, but soon dropped it as unessential and on leaving college became a newspaper man, starting as a reporter on the Lafayette Home Journal. He soon sought the larger field of Chicago and from there went to Milwaukee, where he was identified with several of the papers. He was married in 1881 to Miss Lillian G. Jones and two years later went into the state of Southern Wisconsin to become editor of the Florence Mining Journal. Florence was a "bad" town in those days, and in a campaign for reform which Mr. Osborn carried on his life was several times threatened. In 1887 he took possession of the Sault Ste. Marie News and conducted it for a number of years, finally disposing of the paper to W. Frank Kerr, the present publisher. Mr. Osborn retains his interest in the newspaper field by acting as president of the Courier-Herald company of Saginaw.

Throughout his life Mr. Osborn has taken a great interest in politics. He was postmaster at the Soo from 1885 to 1889 and has served at a delegate to countless conventions of the Republican party. He was one of the original Pingree men in the state, using the influence of his paper in behalf of the famous governor when Mayor Pingree became a candidate for governor, and under Governor Pingree he served both as game warden and as state railroad commissioner.

His record in these two offices gives clear indication of the character of the man. As game warden he reorganized the department, enforced the laws without fear or favor, and the records at Lansing show that he made more prosecutions for less money than any man who has ever held the office.

As railroad commissioner he secured the first two cent fares in the state and fought for many reforms in railroad service, notably the abolition of grade crossings.

Mr. Osborn is now a regent of the University of Michigan and gives much of his time to the affairs of this great state institution. He was a candidate for governor twelve years ago in the famous "battle of the ballots" between two other candidates which ended in the direct causes of the insistent cry for reform which finally led to the passage of a state primary law.

As to what Mr. Osborn stands for in the present campaign: which he seeks the Republican nomination for governor there can be no mistake. He is against machine domination and the ruling of the machine by special interests. He is for a cleaning out in the state house and a direct Republican party working for the best interests of the state.

"Osborn, Harmony and a New Deal," was early adopted by his friends as a slogan, and the record by which his candidacy has been accorded by the people of the state indicates that Michigan is tired of the disorder of things and is crying for Chase S. Osborn as a big step toward a new regime.

His Proof.

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

(Copyright, 1909, by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)

Homes-loving youth have ever blest us.
With Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act I., Sc. 1.

The Elizabethan age was an age of action. Before that time Englishmen had lived in a narrow world, but then the whole earth became their stage. The voyages of Drake and Raleigh let loose the imagination of old and young alike, and the little island kingdom began that career of conquest and colonization that was to make her mistress of the high seas, and controller of the destinies of nations—that was to plant her colonies, nations within an hemisphere, as it were, girdling the earth. The learning of the Greeks and Latins; the culture, the art, the music of the Continent, were all appealing to the minds of Englishmen. English archers were sending their sons abroad "in seek preferment out," sons to "remains universitied," sons "to discover islands far away." In Shakespeare's time to any man of standing it "Would be great impeachment (reproach) to his age,

To have known no traveling in his youth."

Study is excellent. It broadens the mind and moulds character, but a man requires travel to give finish and polish to his education. It is all very well to read learned descriptions of the Parthenon and the Coliseum, on the antiquities of Rome and of Greece, on the art of Florence and Paris. A visit to Greece or Italy or France makes the book learning a reality, the eye sees and retains what the mind only vaguely grasped. No matter how brilliantly Venice may be described on the pages of history, it is on the canals of Venice it is not properly known until the eye has rested on the Bridge of Sighs, the gondolas and the palaces of the ancient princes and merchants. The pictures of Raphael, the statuary of Michael Angelo have been reproduced in copies and prints and scattered to the ends of the earth. Learned volumes have been published on the art of these intellectual giants. To fully appreciate their power it is necessary to visit the churches and galleries of Europe. Who can comprehend from books the glories of the Western plains with their innumerable herds and their miles and miles of golden grain, or the awful sublimity of the Rockies? Travel is necessary for a proper understanding of the external world and the world of art.

It is even more essential to the student of men and manners. The philosopher who said "Know thyself" was wise, but the only true way to do this is to learn about other selves. If man "atomgazing" at home may will never gain this knowledge. No greater truth was ever uttered than that "Home-bredded youth have ever homely wits." A man whose horizon is the fences of his farm, or the outlines of his native town or city, or even the borders of his country, grows narrow in mind, his soul becomes dwarfed. Travel is the greatest of educators. It moves the mind, it sharpens the wits, it broadens the sympathies. "The proper study of mankind is man," said Alexander Pope. How is a man going to study mankind by his own fireside? To combe him to take an intelligent part in the affairs of his country travel is an essential. The statesmen and diplomats of the nations have been trained in early by travel as in the halls of learning.

Study and travel go hand in hand. Books tell you what to expect in the countries visited. Without this knowledge much is missed. There are thousands of travelers rushing over Europe at the present moment who have not inside adequate preparation. They have seen and they are sorry. The glories of the Old World have little meaning to them. Whether or not a man is to benefit by travel depends largely on his intellectual and moral training. Unless he who has been prepared, bodly castles and vast cathedrals are to him nothing but piles of stone. The men and women he meets are merely foreigners, to be despised because they speak an alien tongue and have other manners. There vices too often are what attract, and instead of benefiting by foreign travel many men return to their country the worse for their sojourn abroad.

But there is vastly more good than harm done by foreign travel. Our land's greatness is due to the energy, the sons have displayed in searching the corners of the earth and learning of all nations. In recent years Japan has leaped into the front rank of the powers. Why? In the universities of Europe and America Japanese youths have been studying. In all countries officers of Japan have been travelling in the factories and shipyards they have been learning. Contact with other nations has broken down the barrier that insulated Japan from the rest of the world.

The stay-at-home must depn behind in the race. The wise traveler, who learns of all men, is best fitted to achieve greatness. His mind has been broadened by contact with other men and other manners. From a narrow villager he becomes a citizen of the world. His soul grows cosmopolitan and his sympathies widen. Whenever men shut themselves up in institutions or communities a stunted spiritual life is the result.

The Word "Slave"

An interesting instance in history of the wrecked experiment of the attempt of a people to afford by the use of the word "slave." Now, the Slavic tribes dwelling on the banks of the Danube, dwelt in the experiment of a people "marked noble or illustrious." In the days of the later Roman empire vast numbers of these Slavs were taken over by the Romans in the conditions of captive servitude, and in this way the name of the tribes came in time to carry with it the idea of a low state of servitude, the exact antithesis of its original meaning and one that has surprised to the time.

Harbor Springs Vs. Charlevoix.

Saturday May 21st the Charlevoix High School base ball team took the Harbor Springs base ball team into camp by the score 8 to 1. This is the second game the two schools have had this year the Harbor winning the first one. However first they were complete. ly out classed in every department of the game. At 3:30 Charlevoix took be field and the first three Harbor men went out in order. In the second after one was gone Cotanch singled and stole second. He was run down however to second and third. Baker next up struck out. In the third after two were down Shaw got to first on an error but the next man struck out. In the fifth the visitors got the only run as the result of three hits and an error on Charlevoix's right fielder. They were never dangerous after this inning.

Charlevoix made two runs in the third on a hit, an error and a steal, two more in fourth, two in the fifth, and two in the sixth. In the seventh she had the base full but couldn't come home with a hit.

Undoubtedly the star play of the game was pulled off in the sixth when with a man on first and one down Hamlin knocked down a liner with one hand and touched second in time to get the force outs.

Charlevoix lined played together in good style and Powers and Kruisgain old good battery work. For Harbor Springs Newman, at short put up a star game. Saturday the team goes to Petoskey to wipe out the defeat administered by that team earlier in the season.

The score by innings as follows:

CHAPTER IV.

The law offices of Knight, Kittredge & Carr were in the Stevens building, one of an old building that stood at the apex of a triangle. The firm had been tenants of the same rooms for many years. Knight had his name on the door at the entrance, but its functions could be read only by those who remembered it from young dave Knight and Kittredge, who was prominent in State politics during and immediately following the Civil War. They were dead now, but Carr, who had left politics for his partners, survived, and had had changed nothing in the offices.

In the old days it had been the custom of the members of the firm of Knight, Kittredge & Carr to assemble every morning at 9 o'clock in the library on a brief discussion of the news of the day, or for a review of the week that had gone before. Those evenings were for them a fertile source of pleasure. Kittredge and Knight had known men and measures as well as the law, and had lived their knew Tilden and the Greek and Latin poets as he knew the way home.

These morning conferences were still continued in Morris Longstreet's day, although Knight and Kittredge had been gone a decade and had left a taste from them behind. It had occurred to the boy a week that he might invite Carr to come to his office and hold a permanent round-robin, for it might be even a bit of social profit that was discussed. Mr. Carr was a man of liberal habits, and when he came in for the half-hour for a talk with his young partner he could see that it was no difference that the president of a great railroad was waiting in the outer office while the Latin poets were discussed in the library by the two dignified Canonians walted while Longstreet and Horace.

Kate Dameron was waiting for him this morning, for he had left the dictatory, and on the first of every month Kate Dameron went to the office to discuss his personal affairs. He was of an unusual type, and it made it a point to combine as many questions as possible in a single consultation. His relations with the office were of long standing and went back to a day when Knight, Kittredge & Carr were a row from and Zora Dameron was a young merchant whom people respected and whose business in life were bright.

While Kate Dameron waited for Michael Carr, Rodney Merriam was walking slowly from his home in Vermont Square down High street to Jefferson, singing his solo, and gravely returning the salutations of friends and acquaintances. He came presently to the offices of Knight, Kittredge & Carr. He stopped in the outer office long enough to send Kate Dameron into the inner room, where Michael Carr was waiting for him. The door into the library was closed but he could hear Carr's voice and he knew that the lawyer was holding one of those monologues with which he was accustomed that Morris Lachlan had often described. He looked about with interest and then crossed the hall. The door of Carr's private office was closed, but he turned the knob of the one marked with Michael Carr's name and in.

Kate Dameron was still leaning on of the window when the door was flung open, the speaker of the house came, and having been gazing out into the street over the sight did not accommodate itself at once to the dim light of the office.

"Ah, Mr. Carr—" he began.

"Good-morning, Rodney," said Rodney Merriam, blandly. Dameron knew the voice before he recognized his brother-in-law, and after a second's hesitation his advanced with a great air of cordiality.

"Why, Rodney, what brings you into the haunts of the law? I thought you were a man who never quit the office. I'm waiting for Mr. Carr. I have a standing appointment with him the same day every month—excepting Sundays, of course."

"So I have understood. I wanted to see Mr. Carr myself, and I said I would see you."

Dameron glanced at his brother-in-law anxiously. He had believed Merriam's assertion that he was a gentleman, and he was not agreeably disappointed in the man, but he was mistaken. He looked at the little clock on Carr's desk, and was pleased to find that the lawyer would undoubtedly appear in five minutes.

"I should be glad, at any other time, Rodney, and Mr. Carr is very partial to her about his appointments."

"I have heard so, Zora. What I have to say to you will not interfere with your appointment with Mr. Carr. As near as I can remember, it has been two years since I entered a conversation with you."

"Two years or the old times go—I am willing to let them go, Rodney."

"And as that last conversation, if you may recall, I believe I told you that you were in imminent danger of your life, and you were violent, very unjust, but let it go, Rodney. I remember no unkind words."

"It would be a pleasant recollection, sure to be, if I have you think for a moment that I have changed my mind. I wish to see Mr. Carr about Miss Zelda. She has chosen to go to live with you."

"Very book, very noble of her. I'm sure I appreciate it."

"I hope you do. She doesn't understand what a responsibility she takes, and I don't intend to tell her. And you may be quite sure that no word of Julia will never tell her how you treated her mother—how you made life a curse to her. I don't want you to think that because I have left Zelda alone these years I have forgotten or forgiven you. I wouldn't trust you to do anything that demanded the lowest order of honor or manhood."

"There was no sign of anger or even resentment in Horace's face, but a pleasant smile died away in a sickly grin, but he said nothing.

"With this little preface I think you will understand that what I have to say to you can be not to ask favors but to give notice. In view of the future—

"But, Rodney, Rodney—that matter needs no discussion. I shall hope to make my daughter happy in her father's house—I am her natural protector—

"You were indeed; but a few instructions from you will be of great assistance, Zora. To begin with, I want you to understand that what I have heard you have mistreated that girl or in any way made her uncomfortable I shall personally you in front of the postoffice. The second time I shall confide you in your own house, and the third offence I shall inform your fashionable you or taking you out and throwing you into the river. I haven't decided which. I expect you to provide generously for her out of the money her mother left her. If you haven't squandered it there ought to be a goodly sum by this time."

"I may also has accepted a certain trader abroad. Julia always spent money wastefully."

"You only hypocrite, talking about expensive tastes! I suppose you have let everybody you know imagine that it has been your money that has kept Zee abroad. It's like you, and you're certainly a consistent beast. As I was saying, I mean that you shall treat her well, not scrimping in your own things but mine. I want you to leave up and down in your house as a white man. You've got to keep enough servants in the old style of years to wait on them. If Tom must be immensely rich by this time. You haven't spent your money for twenty years, and you've undoubtedly quadrupled well by the building of what Margaret left Zee. Her mother was the Margaret, to make you trustee, of her child's property, after your death. Zee has been good to you; my dolls were brightened with new jewery, the old carpets were taken up, the floors stained, to save the trouble of putting down hardwood, and rugs bought.

"Rare Dameron's greatest shock was the transfer of his daughter to his house; but every one else in Marietta, for Zelda asserted his home, had seen it would undoubtedly be of service to her father. Old Mr. Morgan from the grave let place herself in communication with his sister and said, whatever Zee's outwardly refused but secretly leaned Zelda did not disturb the black wonder in her kitchen, though she employed a house-maid to supplement her service. Zee was not particular about her, and some of the veteran Petty's made a point of calling on her, and sitting in the high-backed fashion of her blood. She could not read, so they read the books which Zelda brought down of an evening to her. She should be her own "book reader," but Zelda, who dimly remembered that her mother had spent full in other years, was not a good reader. Zee's ignorance was a constantly in culinary practice. Or, she set out distance to help from one of the recipe books while that amiable and mind in ingredients and cooking after the necessary interval of fear and hope, they opened the oven door and peered in anxiously upon triumph or disaster.

A horse was duly purchased at Longfutton, on an excursion day, and managed by Mrs. Carr. They named the little Hildebrandin Nathiggen, which Zelda changed to Zoe, at Zelda's suggestion. It was better, it said, to be indicated by many more of the remoter letters of the alphabet into nonsyllables. THE POPULAR PULPIT

CALLED TO BE WITNESS.

By Rev. John T. Emerson, D. D.

"And ye shall be witnesses unto me." Acts 1. 8.

The word "witness" is one of the great words of the Bible. It is found at least a hundred times in the Old and New Testaments with reference to testimony to God, and the thought that lies beneath the word is simply "telling out what we know," for which any child is competent, and for which the greatest man is no more than competent. To know something about God and tell what we know—that is the witness in the Biblical sense.

There is the relation of the witness to God Himself. "Ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord." We shall be witnesses unto Me." God depends upon human witnesses. The witness for Christ is dependent upon His fellowmen for witnessing of Him to a dying world. If we do not notify the world of the Lord by He or you, how is he going to notify? The greatest witnesses for God are great work of witnessing is the magnificent and all-compassionate work of Christians individually and collectively. As long as the church rests upon the rock-foundation of Peter's confession, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God"—the witnessing work of the church for Christ is the world's hope. A rock her to be, hurled toward the scene of trouble from the school-house door of her home to approach the ring of society's disorders, and, with the sharp-pointed instruments alone, unholy rage, to pacify the disorder before they, too, become victims of the disorder. Zelda unconsciously drew in her breath sharply with the pain of the thought. The young woman stopped between the antagonists with the old mahogany from the parlor door, and gave the signal for the fray to begin. Her hands, which she held up in a gesture of appeal, were bare, and the sleeves of her dress were rolled to her elbows. The young woman stopped between the antagonists with the old mahogany from the parlor door, and gave the signal for the fray to begin. Her hands, which she held up in a gesture of appeal, were bare, and the sleeves of her dress were rolled to her elbows.

"Rodney always had his little jokes," said Dameron, in a tone of a dry laugh that showed his teeth in his very prominent gums.

Merriam wished both gentlemen a good-morning, and bowed to Zelda in the door. It was, of course, a perfectly

Memories of the War

How Grant Rewarded a Brave Boy.

The public will never lose its keen appetite for the old-time war stories good ones, based on fact. I have such a story—a Grant story. It is about his adjutant, Colonel Duaine, who will be the last to retire for age, on Aug. 12, 1904, of all the men who served in the Civil War and later became regular army officers. Before he was 21 years old he was a musician in the Twenty-second Michigan. At the battle of Chickamauga he threw away his horn and picked up a wounded man's musket and was in the two days' battle, doing full duty as a private soldier. He had a narrow escape from capture. The commander of a confederate regiment demanded the child's surrender when the McCook regiment was flanked. The child replied with a shot that knocked a rebel out and gave the lieutenant colonel of the confederate regiment promotion to the rank of colonel. The boy's act of courage the lieutenant colonel made a lance sergeant, and he was sent to the Grand of Ide Mc-Pherson, in which the battles, under General Grant, were fought out. November, 1863.

The old commander heard of the plucky musket while at Chattanooga a short time before he went to Washington to accept the second commission in the regular army from President Lincoln, and he promoted the boy to Grant never forget the child-soldier of Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge.

The boy's people were poor. They could not send him to school before were left the farm and go to work for his pay while he was in the army. Then he went to Chicago to work at anything he could find to do to help his family.

Clarke at the outbreak of the Civil War was a boy of 16 years, living the work with a number of Irish peddlers. The majority of these peddlers were Republicans, and Lincoln, Anderson and other nearby Indiana cities were wagons and packs they traveled throughout the south selling merchandise of all kinds.

The day war was declared 12 of the Irish peddlers were in Jackson, Miss., when Clarke was high river, and Clarke and his companions were so enthusiastic as to be willing, only for a different cause. They hastily planned to return to Indiana to enlist and go to the front. But before they could leave they were taken into custody, were placed in jail. The Southern ranks and were compelled to fight against their friends in the northern army.

For two years they marched, fought and bled for the Confederates, ever watchful for a chance to escape. So they slept in the ranks, ate in the ranks, were in the ranks, and fought in the ranks.

Then the little fellow handed his father a copy of that morning's Sentinel, in which was an article urging a prompt filling of Wisconsin's quota in compliance with Mr. Lincoln's last call.

"You wrote that, papa, and now you are trying to prevent enlistments."

"But I didn't ask them to rob trundle-beds, my child."

"Well, I'm ready to go, papa. The capitals is waiting to enlist me."

"Wisdom of the mouth! Give my compliments!"

"I can write most like you, papa. The capitals wouldn't know the difference."

Written consent was given, and that day the child was in uniform. The train bearing his regiment stopped a few minutes at Kenosha, where the Shotz boy was living with his mother, a neighbor when his people lived there, through experiments and demonstration, the waste in the manufacture and use of coal, is an event of importance in the woodworking industries and the engineers of the country. According to a Washington correspondent of the Chicago News, the laboratory, a colossal building which houses the University of Wisconsin and the United States Department of Agriculture, has been turned over to the experts of the lumber-manufacturing and wood-using industries generally.

The new building at the university, has been named in the Hon. Joseph Carter, in honor of the late, who also will furnish light, heat and power, while the United States Department of Agriculture will investigate the equipment and apparatus and will maintain a testing plant for the benefit of the experts to carry on the work. The laboratory will be prepared to make tests to ascertain the strength and other properties of wood, to investigate the processes of treating timber to prevent decay and dry-rot and other causes, to study the seasoning of wood and other preliminary processes, to examine the fiber of various woods for paper and other purposes, and to determine the influence of the microscopic structure of wood on its mechanical properties.

RECREATION OF ROCKEFELLER.

Invites His Neighbors and Friends to Take Boat Rides.

The numerous friends and neighbors of John D. Rockefeller in the little city of Tarrytown, N. Y., are frequently treated to carriage and auto rides by the noted multimillionaire. It is one of his favorite recreations to in this way give pleasure to those about him, and he has thereby greatly popularized himself among the residents of his home town. Not a pleasant day goes by without the world's richest man inviting some of them, men, women and children, to ride with him, and it is safe to say that his invitations are seldom declined, for his vehicles are the best to be had, and the drivers are skilled and careful drivers.

Before starting for a ride, Mr. Rockefeller always does a personal favor, inquiring if to be a great protection against rain, and he provides his guests on the same. After the ride he refuses to take back the garment, and comes away with a pleasant smile on his face.

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very much nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and showed melancholy symptoms. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl." Mrs. Jos. Cole, Pitchville, Ohio.

Irasburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with Kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change." Mrs. Ira Basham, Irasburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their letters or that they are not real letters of women who have suffered without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. If you want the best advice for yourself who will not try this famous medicine, made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

A Trustful Woman.

"What excuse did he make when he came back?"

"Said he had been sitting up with a sick friend."

"Haw! haw! That's rich."

"Yes, and that's more than I actually convinced his wife that his friend was a chronic invalid."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

As time rolls on, the still small voice of conscience is apt to become stiller and stiller.

The Week in Congress

By a vote of 49 to 23 the Senate Wednesday amended and accepted the Philippine tariff bill, the railroad bill which places the defense of public before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the hands of the Attorney General, but permits the commission and shippers to intervene and even in certain cases the suit in case the Attorney General withdraws. The period during which rates of railroad companies may be suspended by the commission was extended from 60 to 120 days on motion of Mr. Aldrich. The debate on the bill continued throughout the day and was marked by some sharp inquiries between Senators Tillman and Hughes and also between Senators Bayner and Rhine. An early adjournment was taken to afford the Democrats an opportunity to confer over certain propositions made to them by the regular Republicans. The House spent the day debating a bill to extend to the Territory of Hawaii the laws of the United States relating to the extension of the Chinese exclusion act. The bill was passed by a vote of 167 to 1, Mr. Gillett, Republican, of Massachusetts, being the lone negative. Mr. Cummins occupied the floor during the entire session. The Democratic Representatives in caucus failed to reach an agreement. Caucus work for passage of the House bill while sundry civil appropriating bill theoretically was under consideration, there was a strenuous debate on forestry, resulting in sending back for further consideration the amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill, giving the forest service 25 per cent of the 25 per cent of the receipts of national forests. The remainder of the conference report was agreed to.

Whether there shall be authorized by the present Congress one or any one battleship was the subject of a long discussion in the Senate Friday while the naval appropriation bill was under consideration. The principal participants were Senators Chc. Hale, Gallinger and Hunton. It was brought out that the appropriation for the present fiscal year probably would not equal the expenditures and that there would be an important deficit. The battleship subsidy, a lively disputation between Senators Gorman and Tillman and Payne of New York, both Republicans, over Canadian tariff relations, and an argument of some of his Republican colleagues by Mr. Fish of New York, occupied Monday's session of the House. Messrs. McKinley of California and Dalzell of Pennsylvania, advocated the proposed $250,000 appropriation for the salary of the secretary of the interior's assessment of tariff information.

In the Senate Saturday eulogies were delivered on the lives of the late Representatives Cooper of Wisconsin and DeArmond of Missouri. No other business was transacted. Party caucuses were held the afternoon of the House while the proposed appropriation of $250,000 in the sundry civil bill to enable President Taft's Tariff board to collect information for him was pending theoretically.

By the action of the Senate Monday the construction of two new battle ships for the navy was assured. Senator Burton's amendment to the naval appropriation bill to the authorization of one ship of the Dreadnought type instead of two, as authorized by the House, was passed by 42 to 39. The bill then was passed. It carries appropriations aggregating $13,000,000. In the House the proposed appropriation of $250,000 for a commission to the President, was stricken from the bill on a point of order made by Mr. Fitzgerald, New York and decided by Representative Mann of Illinois, who was in the chair. In order to accomplish practically the same purpose in a different way, Chairman Tawney of the appropriations committee offered an amendment appropriating the $250,000 to enable the President to carry out reference to the tariff board. In behalf of the House it was stated that the amendment within the House rules. Mr. Fitzgerald, however, made a point of order against the new provision, and this was pending when the House adjourned.

A Natural Question.

Henry James, the noted novelist, does not care for Roosevelt on the question of large families. Small wonder, when we recall the Taft Tariff indicate, to Mr. James' mind, intolerable and unnecessary while large families indicate the reverse.

Large families are an embarrassing thing to have around, but the best American visit, "I once knew a man named Thompson who had fourteen children (Thompson agreed one spring holiday) to take his children to the seashore for the week end.

They set off, reached the station, got their tickets and were about to board the train, when Thompson was roughly collared by a policeman.

"Me? Nothing. Why?" stammered poor Thompson.

The policeman waved his truncheon toward the Thompson family.

Why so Alike?

One afternoon, when the Duke of Edinburgh and his artistic friends were having finished a duet, were sitting down to a bowsly "dish of tea" presided by Mrs. Ranger, the composer's mother, it suddenly occurred to her to start the subject of musical names and titles, which puzzled the good lady considerably.

"Sir," she said, "your family name is Guelph."

"My poor mother," began Arthur.

"But it is, isn't it?" she persisted.

"Certainly," replied the Duke, much amused. "What's the matter with it, Mrs. Sullivan?"

"Oh, nothing," returned the excellent old lady musingly. "Only I can't understand why you don't spell it correctly by your proper name."

Arthur waited to explain to her, but the duke would not allow him to.

"There's nothing to be ashamed of in the name of Guelph, Mrs. Sullivan," he said gravely.

"That's exactly what I say," persisted Arthur's mother; "nothing what you are for as I know, and, that being so, why you should not call yourself by it I can't understand."—T. C. Harbaugh's "Heroes, and Remainscences."

CHINESE SAILORS.

They Never Learn to Tie a Knot Properly, Says a Skipper.

"I don't know why it is," said the captain of the trying steamer, "but you can't teach any of them Chinese sailors there to tie a real knot.

"These isn't much need aboard a steamer for the rope knowledge that used to be so much the part of a sailor's training, but we do need splices and knots now and again just the same.

"These Chinese there, who were shipped on as A. B.'s, can do anything needed in the way of splices that would make an old tar green with envy, and they'll do up dunnages better than most of the men I've shipped.

"But you can't get one of 'em to tie a right knot. Teach 'em again and again, and they remember the lesson for half an hour. Next time there's a straight everyday knot to be tied the Chinese fo'c'sle hand makes up the same old gnarl.

"Prove your shipmates to be a knot tailor a lubber. The kind of a knot is made by passing the ends around each other in the reverse direction, making the ends stand on at right angles. The ends should be wound around each other in the same direction. When they come out of the knot they should be alongside the line on either side of the knot. Such a knot won't slip. But a Chinaman can't learn it for keeps—not he.

"The Lascar and Malay and Kanaka learn the right knot easily enough. In a storm that's one of the things we have to guard against if we have Chinese sailors."—New York Sun.

EYE DEFECTS.

Some Things That Are Said to Affect the Sense of Vision.

Many eye defects, of course, are due to the bad habits of their possessors. Tobacco, for instance, is generally held to impair the vision, usually inducing the color sense so that gold not silver becomes indistinguishable. According to some medical authorities, again, the connection between eye and tooth trouble is more than an old wives' fable. In his book dealing with the subject Hitchcock relates the story of a boy who woke up one morning to find himself blind. On examination his teeth were discovered to be crowded together, and a few of them were removed, with the result that by evening he could distinguish between light and darkness. More teeth were removed, and in eleven days his sight was fully restored. Other cases which tend to show the connection between eye and tooth trouble have also been noted. Very frequently occupation has much to do with one or other eye defect. Thus nystagmus is sometimes known as the miners' disease.

Nystagmus is an involuntary oscillation of the eyeball to and fro or round in its orbit. In contradistinction to glaucoma, it is a young defect, having been noticed in infants, but sometimes it attacks miners after forty. Miners are inclined to attribute the failing to the foul air, but it is more likely to be caused by the continual upward glance so often necessitated by their occupation.—Buffalo Express.

What the Light Revealed.

A story is told of a simple and devout Methodist minister who was not sufficiently eloquent or businesslike to be approved by the presiding elder. Through the influence of the elder he took charge of a station in a small and widely scattered settlement where there was much hard work, and the results were necessarily meager. One day he was remonstrating mildly on the narrow sense of his opportunities to a friend, who said gravely that he ought to pray for light that he might see the hand of the Lord in his appointment.

"I have, brother," he answered, "again and again. But so far," he added, with a whimsical smile, "I've had only light enough to see the interfering hand of Elder Brown."—Youth's Companion.

Eyeglasses.

"Did you ever notice," queried an epicure, "that nearly every person who wears shadow eyeglasses when polishing the bowls with a brother-chief holds the glasses by the nose piece, thus putting all the strain of the rubbing upon the screws which affix the glass to the metal? Of course this tends to loosen the glass and wear out the thread upon the tiny screw. This in turn causes the lenses to wobble, resulting in great discomfort to the wearer. It's strange how little intelligence intelligent people display in simple matters, but that it brings us laughing."—New York Globe.

Mercury's Accident.

"What's the matter with your office boy?"

"He hurt himself while running when I sent him on an errand the other day."

"Come off! You don't mean it 22?"

"I do. He never did the errand, but he found out who a horse had fallen down in the street."—Cleveland Leader.

A Rare Bird Indeed.

"I think I shan't care to like that friend of yours."

"You were favorably impressed by him, at first?"

"Yes, indeed. He watched me playing billiards for an hour yesterday without once suggesting how a shot could to be made."—Detroit Free Press.

His Illustration.

"Pepo, what is faith?"

"Well, my boy, they say your baby brother sleeps, but I've never seen him do it. Yet, if I believe he does—that's faith."—Life.

Joyful.

"I should like some rather joyful looking," said the stingy young man.

"Yes, sir. How about a check?" said the brisk bookseller, thinking of what always brought most joy to himself.—Buffalo Express.

His Closeness.

Visitor—I saw your husband in the opera nowadays today. In fact, he was so close that I could have touched him.

Hostess—That's strange. At home he is so close that nobody can screw him.—Puck.

What Is Genius?

Genius is the power of making the right use of what all men have in common.—Chamfort.

Cause for Thankfulness.

The butler of a Scottish laird, who had been in the family for many years, resigned his place, complaining that his lordship's wife was always scolding him. "If that's all you have to complain of," said the master, "you have little cause for leaving." "I'm not going to put up with it any longer," was the answer. "Go then," said the third, sighing, "and be thankful all the days of your life that you are not married to her."

Another Hope Gone.

I was teaching a class of little girls, and one of them had the toothache. Naturally for a time the conversation turned to teeth. The little sufferer thought perhaps it was a wisdom tooth, but I explained that she would not have one till she was grown. "Well, does every one have wisdom teeth?" "Yes; why?" "I thought maybe if you didn't go to school very much they wouldn't grow!"—The Delineator.

Toast to Happiness.

Here's to happiness, the foundation of life, the builder of things; it never fails to dispel the blues; for it's the antidote to vapors of melancholia; it's the sun's rays piercing the cloud of darkness, the message of love of life, health and contentment; in its absence nothing can thrive; it's the sentimate, the symbol of a clear conscience.

Positive Proof.

Jack, three and one-half years old, had been put to bed by his mother, who was entertaining company. He suddenly burst into the room, crying: "Mamma, there's a big mouse in my room." "Oh, no! I don't think so," said his mother. "I'm sure of it!" said Jack. "I heard him wagging his tail!"—Delineator.

Celebrating His Death.

U. B. Corbett of Cradwell hall, Mollington, Cheshire, left directions in his will that he should be cremated, and added: "I should wish a £3 cup to be given to the Cheshire field to be competed for on the day of my cremation and on the six following anniversaries."—Westminster Gazette.

Little Head—Big Wit.

William's mother sent him to the butcher's for some mutton steak. William forgot the word "mutton," but he knew that the meat he wanted came from the sheep. He told the butcher, "I want to get two pounds of sheep steak. I've forgot the other word for it." And the butcher did not make a mistake when he gave him mutton.—The Delineator.

A Roland for an Oliver.

Hotel Manager—Madam, you cannot register here if you insist on bringing your pet with you. Dogs are not permitted in this hotel. Star Actress—How odd! I understood that this was Dogtown.

In every detail of its construction, the famous SMITH & BARNES PIANO embodies that degree of excellence which marks the really high-grade instrument. It is a Piano of QUALITY and RELIABILITY—this is why we selected it for the big

These Pianos are shown in Three Styles of Cases and each Style Comes in Three Woods—Mahogany, Walnut and Quartered Oak.

In this splendid Smith & Barnes Piano you get all you bargain for, and a good deal more. You save money—big money—nearly one hundred dollars, in becoming a member of this Club. The Piano itself is right. It's a thoroughly good dependable Piano. A person who buys a Piano as good for $350 gets the worth of his money, it matters not from whom he buys it. We know this to be a fact from our own experience of over twenty years with the Smith & Barnes Piano, during which time we have sold these instruments in nearly every City and Town in Michigan. Many Smith & Barnes Pianos have been sold by us along the St. Clair River, Lake Huron, and Mackinac Island. This is known to be a most trying climate on Pianos, on account of the extreme dampness, but the Smith & Barnes has given excellent satisfaction. In every place where a genuinely good, reliable Piano is desired, the Smith & Barnes more than meets every expectation.

We take pride in this big Piano Club. To us it is an important transaction in many ways, and in no less degree is it of importance to intending Piano purchasers. It will save thousands of dollars to the 100 persons of Charlevoix, Petoskey who go to form this big Club—money they can use to pay for musical instruction, or whatever use they may see fit to make of it.

As this big Piano Club is intended to stand as an enduring advertisement to our Home, we can assure you that the Piano itself represents the extreme limit of value for the price and the liberal conditions under which it is offered. A double Guarantee for ten years (the manufacturer's and our own) goes with each of these Pianos and absolutely protects the Club member.

THE SMITH & BARNES PIANO IN DETAIL

The Pianos are largest size, 4 feet 9 inches high, and have a very heavy metal plate.

The cases are made of fine selected mahogany, walnut and quartered oak. The inside is of bird's eye maple.

The keys are genuine ivory.

The strings are of best imported German wire.

The action is of the best French repeating type—very carefully regulated by as competent workmen as there are in the Piano trade.

Our knowledge of the instrument is based on an experience running back over twenty years not on faith or hearsay—and it is from this experience we are willing to give the unreserved, unconditional guarantee that we do, a stronger than which has never been given on any Piano, it matters not what its merits.

The Price $257.50 Pay Only $5 CASH

Your Opportunity Don't Miss it!

We present the biggest value ever offered—a brand new Piano for only $257.5)—actual saving of $92.50—and on easy terms were never made, and not likely to be on an instrument of this high quality and value

$5 sends the Piano to your home; you pay only $6 a month on the balance. Surely you should no longer deny yourself and your family the advantages and enjoyment a piano brings to the home Join the Club Monday.

Join the Club Now---You Gain Nothing by Waiting

In fact, every day you put off joining means that you are missing for just that long, all the wealth of enjoyment a good Piano always provides And there's really no reason why you should miss this—we've made a proposition by which the ownership of a Piano becomes a matter dependent almost wholly upon the desire for its possession. Probably never again will an offer be made which in exceptional advantages will equal this great Club. Do you desire an artistic, sweet-toned Piano in your home? Never will you have a better opportunity to make this desire a reality.

If you cannot arrange to call, send us remittance, of $5. You thus become a member of the Club; sharing in all its advantages and privileges. In your letter state what style of Piano you wish (plain or fancy); and which wood you prefer (Mahogany, Walnut or Oak.) We will pick out a Piano to Correspond, placing it in your home without a cent of expense to you. The privilege of 12 months' Free Trial eliminates any possible chance of dissatisfaction.

COURTSHIP IN PORTUGAL

The Way the Young People Begin Their Married Life.

The most important event in the life of a Portuguese young man is undoubtedly in importance one the early steps of membership for a Portuguese girl, also is the course of romance, and ability to the consequence. Love and marriage in the Portuguese have are the things in which Cupid is stage all the time. Courtship in Portugal is the sweet a pretty child with velvet he would like to have, or painted like fairies be. Chaperons are not in possible electricities. Its follows her and man was the hopper years I ever saw. Now, that's what I call making the most of things."—Chicago Daily Public Dealer.

Not a Laughing Matter.

It was a narrow path, and Mr. Badger found his approve some Heeling more frightened every moment, he proceeded to swing along. He felt disinclined to laugh, but he felt indeed embarrassed when the poets would all "crowd noddy" at him. Yes, he felt a little worried, and it was impossible to tote. As a last resort he switched his grey rear from above.

"What on earth am I to do?" gasped Badger desperately on his four feets lodge as he grieved a tuft of seaweed with one hand.

"Do, gov'nor?" some took a voice. "Do anything you like, but for goodness sake don't fall for your weekly 'll lamm up all the same as cows in eggs!"—Landon Answers.

A group of men were discussing human nature and the difficulty of looking always on the bright and glittering side of things when the sinny, dark brown side is uppermost and seems doubled to remain uppermost.

"It's a great thing to cultivate a disposition to make the most of things in this life," remarked a man who used to drive trotting horses for a living. "The most startling illustration I ever had of that was in a big horse race a county fair down the state about ten years ago. The man driving a bloody side of me let his horse swerve on the back stretch, and my sulky was upset. That consist of grass of spring and a colored driver right behind me got unfinished and his sulky broke to pieces. With 1 big blade for a minute and then, as I didn't seem to be much hurt, I started to get up.

"Why?" I asked him, some puzzled.

"Cause," he answered, 'yo' ah lay right wid yo' head in a mudhole dey'll sear' roun' lyuh and hum us look pass' the grad' stan' by a cells bluge."

"Sure enough, they did, and when we drove up that home stretch in the open hack they sent for us that colored man was the happiest person I ever saw. Now, that's what I call making the most of things."—Chicago Daily Public Dealer.

HALLEY'S SKY TRAMP SHIES AT THE EARTH

Astronomers Are Dumbfounded When Transit Is Not Made on Schedule Time.

UPSETS THEIR CALCULATIONS.

Scientists at a Loss for Explanation and Believe the Tail May Have Become Curved.

The earth did not pass through the tail of Halley's comet at the time scheduled by the astronomers. Instead, the heavenly wanderer sailed and turned its candal aqueduct away from our globe. From observatories all over the world come dispatches to the effect that the tail of the comet, which was scheduled to sweep with the comet over the path of the earth and to envelop us in its gaseous matter, had a curved as to delay the time of contact.

The fact that the earth did not pass through the tail of the comet at the time calculated by the scientists is one of the greatest blows modern astronomical science ever has received. Astronomers everywhere accepted the computations of independent calculators, who estimated that the earth would be in the center of the comet's tail between 8.37 and 9.11 o'clock Wednesday night, and the failure of the phenomenon to occur has completely upset the model of 1910 ideas regarding the comet.

Prof. Edwin B. Frost of the Yerkes observatory, Prof. E. E. Barnard and Prof. S. A. Mitchell of Columbia University, who had expected the tail of the comet's tail in the eastern sky, declared that they could not explain the reason for the evaporation of the comet's tail in the east although they offered possible hypotheses. At the Transvaal observatory, in South Africa, L. T. J. Innes, chief director, gave out the statement that he believed the earth would not pass through the tail of the comet at all.

In spite of the fact that scientists had stated that there was absolutely no danger to the earth's inhabitants in the nearness of the comet, many poorly informed persons came to the belief that the end of the world was about to occur.

An aged Chicago woman, in fear of the comet, killed herself with gas, and others in the house were nearly asphyxiated.

Christ Chelcos, a Greek, gave away all of his money at East Chicago and one and North State street, Chicago, and exhorted adults and children to prepare for the end of the world.

Domestics in South Bend, Ind., said they feared the comet would injure destruction to the earth.

An Ohio man was in some worrying over the comet.

Farmers near Neenah, Wis., removed lightning rods from barns and houses for fear they would attract dangerous substances from the comet.

Residents of Minnesota Point, Superior, made boxes for use in a tidal wave from Lake Superior would come a dollar.

Fear was evident among the negroes in the "black belt" of Chicago, among the outlaws of the Italian settlements and on the lower west side, where many attended church services.

Fakirs in Atlanta, Ga., made large profits selling "comfort bags" to negroes to protect them from the comet.

Negroes in many Southern cities held allnight prayer services.

ROLLINS PLEADS GUILTY.

Former Governor Pays $2,000 Fine for Smuggling.

Former Governor Frank West Rollins of New Hampshire, who was sentenced to a year and a day in prison for lying to smuggle wearing apparel belonging to himself and wife, and to pay a fine of $2,000, was indicted in New York by the federal grand jury and pleaded guilty to the charge. Rollins declared that the distinguished position occupied by the Rollins family made the crime all the more reprehensible and directed the amount of the fine of $2,000. The fine was paid.

THE COMET.

MANY KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

Seven Boilers Blow Up Wrecking the Sheet and Tin Plate Works.

Quick death came to thirteen men, serious injury to thirty more employes of the plant and damage to the building amounting to many thousands of dollars are the results of the explosion of a battery of seven boilers at the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company plant in Canton, Ohio. The cause of the explosion is at present unknown. The foreman and engineer, who were in the boilerroom, are dead. No one knows about the men who survived the accident can give an explanation. The workmen said that they heard three distinct explosions in quick succession. The force of the explosion was terrific. The big plant is in such a state of ruin as to be practically a total loss. Identification of the men was difficult because many of them were so mutilated. Even the men who had lunched with numerous Christian mottoes they were nearly an hour in reaching the Capitol Building. Practically every country in the world and every State in the Union was represented in the parade.

As Convention Hall was not large enough to accommodate the crowd, another meeting was held in Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church. Simultaneously two meetings for women were in progress. Mrs. Dr. F. B. Meyer, president of the association, led the meeting in Mount Vernon Church, while Mrs. Wm. Jennings Bryan, principal speaker, presided at the meeting in Convention Hall. Mrs. Bryan, Mrs. Taft, Colonel Roosevelt, King George of England, President Diaz of Mexico and William Jennings Bryan were made the members of the World's Sunday School Association in the saturday session and scenes of great enthusiasm. For each of these so honored $1,000 had to be subscribed and in the case of Colonel Roosevelt, the chairman of the convention, Mr. Wanamaker, made two subscriptions to $1. The attendance of persons at the parade was estimated at until 125,000 had been pledged for mission work.

CHRISTIANS IN BIG PARADE AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

10,000 Men's Bible Class Members, Singing Hymns, March to Sunday School Mass Meeting.

An army of more than 10,000 men, members of men's Bible classes from all parts of the world marched down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington Thursday and around the Capitol of the United States on their way to a monster mass meeting in Convention Hall. The parade was the final act in a session of the World's Sunday School Association. Four abreast, on each side of the Capitol world filled with thousands of women delegates to the convention and other Sunday school workers.

To the tune of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and other hymns the parade marched, their banners inscribed with numerous Christian mottoes. They were nearly an hour in passing the Capitol Building. Practically every country in the world and every State in the Union was represented in the parade.

As Convention Hall was not large enough to accommodate the crowd, another meeting was held in Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church. Simultaneously two meetings for women were in progress. GLAD HAND DUB HIM.

Twice-fourth Child Entitles Joseph Somers to Title as a Father.

Joseph Somers, 57 years old and a resident of Dedham, Mass., is the proud father of thirty-four children.

The first was born forty years ago. The eighteenth, twelve years and twelve years ago, the thirty-third was born two years ago.

A baby boy, the latest addition to one of the most remarkable families in New Eng'y. The mother died from exposure and exhaustion.

Mr. Somers, who is employed in a rope factory within a few hundred yards of his home on Hillside avenue, East Dedham, was born in Canada. As a young boy he came to New Bedford and started working there as a factory hand and met and in love with Miss Jean Dandrie. At the time Mr. Sears was 17 years old.

The first three births in the Sears family resulted each time in twins. The first and second twins, to Mr. Sears, weighed together just three and one-half pounds. The twins born at 21 the young husband found himself the proud father of six children after only three years of married life.

Thereafter the young Scarsons appeared at a surprisingly rapid rate. At 34 years of age, at the time of the first Mrs. Sears' death, the father was the parent of eighteen children. Thirteen of them, however, had died in infancy.

Mr. Sears then found himself wifeless and with five small children, left on his care, and he set out about finding another wife. Five months after the death of his first wife he was again married and settled in a new home. Of the second family nine children have died. Four of the daughters and several of the sons are married and have families of their own. Six of the children, however, live at the little home in East Dedham, and it was here one week ago that the thirty-fourth child was born.

"I am a man who has always been used to large families," says the father of the twenty-four Dedham boeds, "and I always liked children. If I had been compelled to live alone in a large people do, with only one or two children, I can be honest in saying I should believe that if a person likes children he should be without them." Mr. Somers is a big, powerful standing man he. He has read of food should not prevent a man from being "family."

OUR STRANGE LANGUAGE.

Proved by Various Interpretations of the Verb "To Strike."

The verb to strike" is likely to provoke more or less of a laugh among the students who are to acquire the English language. The Philadelphia Ledger says: It may have any one of seven meanings.

"To strike" means to hit, beat, assault. It is this meaning of the term that is brought to mind by the spectacle of a blackened eye. Often it may be avoided by moving on when the policeman asks you.

"To strike" means a mere attempt to hit, as when a batter, according to the rules of the game, "misses the air," therefore a miss. This suggests a difficulty, for in some cases there are others in the language.

"To strike" means to stop a job because of dissatisfaction with conditions. This sort of strike is never a "miss" in the language of the men.

"To strike," when qualified by the words "off," "out" is to discover, to prospecting, a deposit of precious metal, or an accomplishment. In this case the term has been adapted to express the achievement of sudden wealth by any field. When "to strike" is nothing, however, is different.

Again, "to strike" is to make a gesture to touch another, to send a friendly greeting. Here the strike is in the effort and not in the result. Chance may be in the "striking."

A few lines might be devoted to "pare" "pear" and "pair," identical in sound, but in nothing else except spelling. The English language is rich in "pairs," "pare" is a verb, meaning to denote of tegumental covering, but "pear" is a noun, the name of a fruit. You may pare an apple, which is to pick in; but you may not pare an elephant, although it is possible to skin it if you have the implements. "Pair" is a geological product that grows on a tree. If the tree had but two pears it would be a pair. It is a marital couple sometimes constitute a pair, and two sets are a foursome. In short, is made up of two of a kind.

By remembering these simple facts the student will be enabled to avoid confusion.

WHEN JENNY LIND SANG.

Early Triumphs of a Foreign Song Bird in America.

Nothing in Richard Hoffman's autical recollections in Scribner's is quite charming like his description of Jenny Lind.

"She would trip on and off," he says, "as if in an ecstasy of delight at the opportunity of singing, sweet and exulting to her audience and giving every one present a fluttering sense of happiness in the mere contemplation of the success of the evening. She had three or four dresses, and they were all beautiful compass and power of her voice was so much expressed either the tone at every concert.

"A Swedish echo song in which she imitated the echo in her voice by a sort of rentrilouism that was quite marvelous. Her shake was the finest and most remarkable distinctness, reaching a marvelous point in a trill, but with a carrying power that made it distinctly audible at the most extreme range of the opera house or Tripler hall, where the later concerts were given.

"Her voice, in the middle, situated at Broadway and Bond street, and just where it should be to be most effective in the large auditorium of Castle Garden. It was a great voice, of the finest quality of silk or alloy and from this was made a voice of ninety-nine pounds of honey. This is said to be the world's record for a ton of her song.

"That the fortune of the United States are not producing what their ancestors expected, of a lack of practical education among the people, and of the high cost of living problem offered by Secretary of Commerce and Labor James Wilson, in a recent address at the farmers' union rally in St. Louis.

"ARBITRATE OR FIGHT."

Slogan of Shippers Who Oppose Raising of Freight Rates.

Shippers from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic seaboard, representing an annual tonnage rated at more than a billion dollars, met in conference at the Congress Hotel in Chicago, and voted a challenge to the railroads of the country to prove that there exists no necessity for increasing revenues by increasing freight rates—challenge that if this question be not arbitrated by a board of arbitration.

The meeting evinced the conviction that railroads will be unable to satisfy their position, and that the time has come for a concerted stand by the class rates and in the commodity rates in Eastern territory, increases in which was called by the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, participated in by an organization with a guaranteed fund of more than $100,000 to pay for the fight to be waged against what was termed the injustice and greed of the railroads. It was the sentiment of the meeting that the shippers decided to do.

Since the railroads arbitration through the interstate commerce commission, the question of whether or not they are entitled to increase in freight rates in order to increase their revenues.

The arbitration must be coupled with the agreement that pending it the present rates shall prevail, no increase being held in abeyance.

Should the railroad measures fail, the shippers are pledged to take immediate action either through the interstate commerce commission or the federal courts.

Should the commission be appealed to, that body will be asked to seek the courts who put into effect to be unreasonable and unjust.

Should the courts be appealed to, they will be asked to issue an injunction restraining the railroads from putting the proposed increase in effect pending the trial, which will give the opportunity to examine into the grounds upon their reasonableness.

Organize a permanent body to settle the question if a fight should become necessary.

Create a conference committee of fifteen members whose duty it shall be to take charge of the campaign and plan the arbitration plan before the railroads.

Tax every member of every organization present in order to aid in raising a fund to begin and carry on the battle, the initial fund being about $50,000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

Minneapolis produces 60,000,000 bushels of corn a year; the yield per acre exceeding that of Iowa.

Iron smelt plant at Morristown, N. J., last year sold $25,000 worth of iron ore, of which amount sold to the hotels and restaurants of New York alone was more than $10,000 worth.

Omaha's total trade for the fiscal year ending March 31, reached the record figure of $1,000,000,000, an increase of $117,556,278 in one year, as compared with the previous year.

Miss K. Candler, of Janesville, Wis., has produced a record of 12,000 pounds of honey last season. This big crop came from 1,000 hives of bees and Miss Candler did with her own hands all the work connected.

A test recently was made with a little gasoline engine at the farm of Lee Mouldon of Smithville, N. Y., in seven hours it pumped 1,000 barrels of milk a day and from this was made 1,000 pounds of butter and 700 cheese. This is said to be the world's record for a ton of her milk.

That the farms of the United States are not producing what their ancestors expected, of a lack of practical education among the people, and of the high cost of living problem offered by Secretary of Commerce and Labor James Wilson, in a recent address at the farmers' union rally in St. Louis.

BODY OF EDWARD VII. BORNE TO THE GRAVE

NINE KINGS RIDE IN THE LINE

The body of King Edward VII. was carried through the streets of London Friday in the presence of many hundred thousand subjects and with the Kings of nine European nations, several future rulers, representatives of all the royal families of the world and a former President of the United States following the casket from Westminster Hall to Paddington station. The cortege moved through solid double lines of redcoated soldiers standing with rifles reversed and the regimental colors dipped to the ground. At the railway station the casket was placed in a funeral car adorned the Swedish singer a welcome in America. This house, which has long close the Archbishop of Canterbury in St. George's Chapel, it was entombed in the Albert Memorial Chapel adjoining.

No such processional spectacle had been witnessed in London since Queen Victoria's jubilee. The parade included many of the greatest men of the kingdom, with representatives of all arms of the service and detachments from the most famous regiments of the empire and representative groups of foreign armies and navies. Behind the casket upon which rested the imperial symbols followed King Edward's charger, while his favorite terrier was led by a liveried attendant, just before the imperial ensign. King George, Emperor William and other members of royalty were the uniforms of British generals. No personage in the parade attracted greater interest than did Theodore Roosevelt, the special envoy American, whose civilian clothes contrasted curiously with the gilded state coach with the white-winged and silver-sided ingot finskins, within which he rode. The booming of minute guns and the tolling of bells accompanied the movement of the streets, while the bands in turn played "The Dead March from Saul" and Chopin's "Funeral March."

The morning was clear, and a hot sun beat upon the great mass of humanity that lined the route of the procession. It is doubtful that so many people were ever before seen in London. At the Stall, in James street and at Hyde Park Corner the throngs were overwhelmed the procession. The police reported that the crowds were so dense that it was impossible to keep the streets free of people, and hundreds were injured.

Hundreds of persons were taken to hospitals, and many were carried into shops and houses. Many persons were injured in the crush of the crowd, and many were carried into shops and houses. Many persons were injured in the crush of the crowd, and many were carried into shops and houses.

RATS TWO FEET LONG IN JERSEY

School Children at Summit Avoid Pests While Drive Them Away.

Rats—two million or so, of which infest the city garbage dumps, threaten to overrun the residence section of Summit, N. J., and the board of health has appealed to experts in New York City to provide a means for their extermination. Children on their way to school have been making long detours because of their fear of rodents. One of the rats seen recently by city employes is reported to be fully two feet long and many of the others are nearly as large. The rats have grown so bold that they need to get their living at the dumps, and the scarcity of wandering dogs has left the dog warden without a job.

OUTPUT OF BIBLES IS ENORMOUS.

The ninety-fourth annual report of the American Bible Society shows that during the last year the total issue of publications at home and abroad was 1,820,831, of which 1,187,247 were from the Bible house in New York and 1,204,584 from the society's agencies abroad, being printed on mission and other presses in Turkey, Syria, Spain, China and Japan. These issues consist of 227,416 Bibles, 545,747 New Testaments and 1,053,422 pamphlets. The total output of Bibles by the society for ninety-four years reaches 57,296,152 volumes.

Latest on Cost of Living.

A committee appointed by the Massachusetts Legislature to investigate high prices has made a 700-page report, containing extensive schedules of prices of various commodities over a period of years. It believes the primary cause of price advance to be the increase in gold supply and thinks it certain that prices have fallen and risen without relation to change in the volume of gold. It concludes that under free trade shows that the tariff has not been the active factor in the recent upward movement of prices in this country. Nor does it attribute the rise to the growth of the trusts, as it finds prices have advanced in industries where trusts have not developed on the American scale. Finally, it is unable to place the price increase to organized labor because only in a few cases do workers are organized, and because increases have taken place at a slower pace than the rise in the price in commodities. It finds, however, that the combination does enable a group of producers to take advantage of conditions to maintain a high price level and "to present the public from selling in the gains through improvements and economies."

Are Sex Records Valid?

In an unsolicited article for the May Atlantic, it is asserted that the records of the world's athletes have been deliberately faked by their command, and that they have been rendered unfit for service by remaining on duty for from thirty to forty hours on a stretch. In accounting for faked speed, the article says that in a letter from the regular steamer have 100 miles to go, while the record made it made it apply to the longer route. The article says that the letter was returned to Lloyd Agent Sommer of the Cunard Line and inquiry made of the captain. It was false, saying that the rules of the line required all engines to refuse the record. Sommer said such a change is course would be detected by other steamers.

ROOSEVELT ON ARMAMENTS.

Something should be done, as Theodore Roosevelt says, to check the growth of armaments, but can anything be done? The former President speaks an new word when he pronounces the naval equipments of the powers as a burden and as a black shadow over the future. He voices the wish of all the world and then reflies the vital difficulties of accomplishment:

"No one power could or should act by itself; for it is eminently undesirable that the standpoint of the peace of righteousness, that a power which really does believe in peace should place itself at the mercy of some rival which may at bottom have no such belief and no intention of acting on it."

Some of the most brilliant speeches of our countrymen have been made upon the subject of universal peace, and some of the most brainless have been made in advocacy of tying the navy up to the wharves and letting the warships fall to rust and rust. "It is eminently preferable that a power which really does believe in peace should place itself at the mercy of some rival which may at bottom have no such belief and no intention of acting on it."

In that sentence lies the whole problem. Our armament is a burden. We desire peace with every nation and forever. But until there shall come to be an end with "no such belief and no intention of acting upon it" we must, in self-preservation, continue to use dollars for warships and millions for rifles.

Lower Prices.

The usual declines in the cost of commodities have come with the close of the winter season were as marked a manner of the end of April as they are in times of high production and low prices, says the Toledo Blade, in spite of talk of winter blight and the presentation of statistics to show that a month's failure of all fruits last year's crops as compared with those of the former five years of plenty.

Wheat, corn and oats showed decided losses. Price is sympathy with wheat, now lower. Sugar and coffee experienced declines and the falling off in the price of hogs was sufficient to cause a good deal of uneasiness among the farmers of the land. The Sun complains in jerk. But while pork is quoted more cheaply and the grains are bringing less, there was no markdown down of the price of beef. The Government reports showing an alarming decrease in the number of cattle. The Sun says that cattle raising may, like sheep-raising, become only a minor industry of the country, probably without making the price of beef somewhere around the present record of mistakes.

The seasonal movements of prices have come in the relief of the house wife, though there is still no prospect of lasting relief.

Democrats and the Tariff.

The assertion made more frequently that it will fail to a Democratic Congress to revise the Payne-Aldrich tariff, is based upon an utter misunderstanding of the true condition of the business upon the tariff. Should the country elect a majority of 1 to a Congress this year there will still remain.

The influence of Democratic Lions will be found in the Senate that many bills had been forced to relume operations in the mills and mines of Democratic Congressmen.

The Democratic Senators of New York, who are the investigation was to be made, was started by the report that the price of cotton broke some what lower.

A reduction in the size of the paper money of the United States will be made if Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh accepts recommendations that will be made to him in a few weeks by a committee of treasury officials appointed to investigate this and other proposed reforms. The object of the proposed change is to supply the Treasury with a type of currency more convenient for handling and to save the government the cost of the paper and engraving. The new sized bills note to be about one-third and about one-fourth as large as the notes now in circulation. The present size of the bills is a size that has been the standard for generations.

Millions of dollars are involved in a bill for the relief of the Pawnbrokers Sioux and the Santee Sioux. The measure involved proposes to return to the Indians the proceeds that were discontinued because of their participation in the massacre of 1862. The Indian beneficiaries are scattered over the states of Minnesota, Nebraska and the Dakotas.

According to statistics prepared by the Agricultural Department, there has been a phenomenal increase in the value of farm products since 1889. The increase in dollars from that time to the end of last year is $4,000,000,000, $2,500,000,000. The total value of farm products in the United States farms in 1909 was $7,460,000,000, while the latest figures are $9,760,000,000.

The sixth year of American construction of the Panama canal has ended. The canal record presents a gratifying review of what has been accomplished. Altogether 43,000,000 cubic yards of earth and rock have been moved. That leaves as to be taken out of the waterways in the canal 29,252,952 cubic yards of material, which is about 57 per cent of the dig out 38,527,617 yards of solid earth and rock.

A bill providing for the opening to agricultural settlement of Indian Reservations of the surface of lands which are known to be valuable as coal lands was passed by the house. The measure seeks to repeal about 20,000,000 acres as coal lands, to be worked on the surface for the purpose of agriculture.

One of the giant trees in the Muir woods, California, has been dedicated and named in honor of Gifford Pinchot by the members of the Secret club of San Francisco.

Political Comment.

The President's Position.

The whirl of politics at Washington is suggestive of a chase for the President to emerge finally from the storm as the real and only leader of an affirmative party. The President certainly went into office with the expectation that he would carry things forward easily. He was elected by an overwhelming majority and his character portended a philosophic leadership that would incite no unnecessary storms.

The tariff bill, which formed the first legislation of his term, broke up the mutual admiration society. The country received it sullenly, and when the President went out and defended it he critics turned on him almost as fiercely as they had upon the men who made it. The star of Taft descended with incredible swiftness from the zenith to the bottom. There it paused in its disastrous flight, and now some Republicans seem to be drawing it to the sky again.

It was the Regulars who stood by Taft on the tariff, and the accusation was that Taft in turn stood by them. The developments tend to show that the President was playing his own hand. He was not committed to Regulars or Insurgents. He was committed only to one Republican platform, and by sticking to that he has slowly but surely bettered his position.

On the second round, which took place over the railroad bill, the President found that the Insurgents were ready to leave. They helped him pass the bill in the House.

The third, then, of importance to come before the Congress in the process of a Republican Congress, there the President seems at last to have reached a question which serves the purpose of a unanimous call for the attack against the tariff. Perhaps which serves the purpose of a unanimous call for the attack against the tariff. Perhaps which serves the purpose of a unanimous call for the attack against the tariff. Perhaps

SHAKESPEARE

(Post. 1200 by Brother Gardener (W. Lib.)
Ignorance is the curse of God.
Henry VI., Part II. Act IV., Sc. 7.

Ignorance is the curse of God! There are no limitations to this expression. It is not one of the curses, it is the curse; the evil from which all other evils spring. At first sight this notion seem somewhat extreme, but a little reflection will show that Shakespeare was right. A slight look into history will prove this. The nations plunged in ignorance have been the most brutal and barbarous. Where literacy prevailed sin and disease found accelerated breeding grounds.

During the long period from the fifth to the fifteenth century Europe was in helpless in Stygian darkness; the Bible, learning there was, was hidden in cloisters and monasteries. The Dark Ages it is the name fittingly given to that period of ignorance. Cruelty was a common practice and superstition prevailed. It was not until the literature of the Greeks and the Romans, the explorations of the daring navigators of Spain and France and England had made the world, ancient and modern, known to mankind, that the darkness was, in a measure, dispelled.

What does the Renaissance mean? A new birth! A birth to light and life. Man in the fifteenth century was born again. Sciences and art and literature worked together to dissel the darkness that brooded over the earth. Shakespeare has no doubt about the nature of ignorance. There was "no antithesis but 'ignorance'", ignorance was "gross and miserable". It was "the common curse of mankind." He was enormously in advance of his age. Writing at the end of the sixteenth century and early in the seventeenth he had apparently completely broken away from the superstitions of his time. With a seer's insight he saw into the heart of things and every great question spoke as profoundly as does the most advanced thinker in the twentieth century. It would be impossible to mention any question of vital importance to the individual and the state on which he has not uttered words of wisdom. He was a veritable lightbearer, a dispeller of darkness, showing kings and peasants, the rich and the poor, their duty.

Where ignorance is there is the curse of God. Illiterate Turkey is unspeakable Turkey; ignorant Africa is darkest Africa. Nations that remain illiterate drop behind in the race. The less the mind is fed with healthy food the whole being becomes degenerate. A man may live frugally and grow strong, but if he starve his mind he becomes a stunted, a butterfly, a brute. Such beings are mere cumberers of the ground. They are either cast into outer darkness, or become mere knavers of wood and drawers of water for those who have been careful to cultivate their minds and have dressed of the hearing and wisdom of the age.

The Anglo-Saxon has attained the highest degree of civilization. England and her colonies have been in the van in the battle against "gross and miserable ignorance." The Uncle of Sinton stands at the highest point of civilization. It is true that in England and Europe there are many minds who are progressest in philosophy, science and art, but in the United States every man has equal opportunity. Learning is general; ignorance there is, but it is the exception. Superstition exists, but it is in the outlying corners where ignorance is still making a stand. What has prevented us from being illustrated in the United States and Canada than in any other countries. The numerous and superstitious inhabitants of Europe come to America. They are nothing if not material world; they find a new spiritual world in Pole, the Armenian, the Turk, the Russian, the Italian, is not long in discarding his old idols. Oppression has kept him in crass ignorance. Freedom, a sense of equality with other men, lifts him to a higher plane. The shackles of ignorance drop from his arms, the light of knowledge beams from his eyes. In the second generation it is hard to distinguish the American of European extraction from those of native-born parents. Education is a great leveller.

It is only of recent years that knowledge has been able successfully to storm the forts of ignorance. It was not until the astronomer's glass explored the heavens, the geologist's hammer wrested earth's secrets from her, that the world and the universe were truly known. Both had been objects of dark superstition. The scientist turned his attention to the close study of plants and animals. Physical know ledge led to a higher spiritual knowledge. A God of fear became a God of love. The powers of the world were strickled and harnessed and knowledge turned the desolate places of earth to flowering gardens.

There is still much to be done. Ignorance is at work among nations building battleships and raising tariff walls. Intemperance is at work everywhere. Strikes and lockouts, tyrannous exquisites and destructive mobs are equally the outcome of ignorance. Hatred the time when arbitration between nations and men will be the rule, when the ignorance that makes for love will give way to a knowledge and wisdom that makes for gain!

Dead Shot at Livers.

"I hear, doctor, that my friend Brown, whom you have been treating so long for liver trouble, has died of stomach trouble," said one of the physician's patients. "Don't you believe all you hear," replied the doctor. "When I treat a man for liver trouble, he dies of liver trouble."—Everybody's.

FACTS ABOUT WEXFORD

Misrepresentation of Conditions—Falsehoods Used to Bolster Wets

There has been more than a little jockeying in saloon circles in Michigan and among those interested in the advancement of the liquor traffic over the defeat of local option in Wexford county at the April election. It is probable, however, that the Wexford County incident will not be heard of to an extent by the friends of the saloon when the facts relating to the election in that county are all known.

It was declared by the friends of local option in Wexford county that the results of that system were successful and satisfactory in Cadillac and throughout the county. And this declaration was true.

Scores of business men who were opposed to the law when it was enacted found the results helpful to all legitimate business. Employers who had been indifferent to its adoption became the most active friends in the effort to keep the saloons out of the county.

Eighty more votes were cast for local option in the city of Cadillac at the end of its two years experience in that city than when the law was first voted on, and the vote in favor of local option was greater in the county as a whole than when it was first submitted.

The very fact that local option had been successful in Wexford county and that its all moral and material directions it had accomplished more than its strongest friends expected caused the saloon interest of the state to plan and work for the defeat of local option there through any means and without regard to cost.

Four hundred more votes were cast in the city of Cadillac in the recent election than were cast two years ago, when it had been proclaimed throughout the state by saloon interest that Cadillac had decreased in population since the adoption of local option; that business were almost empty dwellings there and that workingmen had been forced to leave the city because of decreasing demands for labor. These statements where all false, but attention is here called to them because of the fact that the saloon interest now seek to have it believed that four hundred new voters have been added to the city within two years. Nearly all of the unexpected increase in votes were cast in two wards of the City. It is known to be true that many of them were not legal residents of Cadillac; they had been brought there for the purpose of voting for the return of the saloons. They had not lived in that city, they knew nothing as to the results of local option there and they cared nothing as to such results.

Wexford county was returned to the saloon column through hundreds of votes provided by a very large expenditure of money, and not because of any change in sentiment on the part of the people of that county as to the desirability of saloons.

When it became known that the saloons were coming back there was almost a mourning that comes with death in a number of Cadillac homes. The occupants of these homes well known from bitter past experience by whom the saloons will be supported and they know of the privation and misery the saloon demands will involve for them.

More arrests for drunkenness were made in Cadillac within four days after the return of the saloons that had been made in three months under local option. It will cost the people of the city of Cadillac $100,000 to support saloons that came back, and for this enormous expenditure not one element of value has been added to the city; nothing that will in any way help wage earners or their families, or that will give to the city any permanent means of advancing or upbuilding. The saloons will be a dead weight on the city and they will bring disgrace to many men therein who during the past two years had returned to lives of sobriety and useful men.

Also this is the incident over which the saloon circles of Michigan are jubilating. It would appear almost ghoulish to celebrate a disaster by blood or fire, or to express gladness over an unexpected harvest, failure through which famine and affliction were sure to come.

Charles Owens, one of the oldest citizens of Northport died at his home just west of the village, May 18th, 1910, at 6:30 p m after an illness of a few months. Mr. Owens was born in Mannheim, Baden, Germany, Feb. 2, 1829 and lived there until 1851, when he was married to Miss Sophia Beck, and brought his bride to this country the same year. They lived for awhile at Buffalo and from there went to Manitou Islands where they resided until 1860 when they came to Northport and spent the remainder of his life here.

Rev. John Jacobs, a well known Indian preacher and interpreter was buried yesterday morning in the cemetery at Omena. Mr. Jacobs was a noted preacher among his own people and the ministry of the Indian Conquest mission association where he will be greatly missed. He was 57 years old at the time of his death, having been sick about two months. The funeral was held from his home southwest of the village, being conducted by the Rev. A. T. Ferguson of Traverse City, Presiding Elder of the M. E church of which Mr. Jacobs has been a life long and faithful member.

Northport, Leelanau County, Western Michigan, is soon to be a great cherry producing center. About seventy five acres on the outskirts of the village were set this spring as sites for cherry orchards. One fruit grower (A. M. Leslie) set out a single orchard that has a frontage of one-half mile. In five years Northport will be one of the busiest points in all of Western Michigan, at least during the cherry harvest, and the Northport cherries will be in demand in all parts of the world. This latter will be the case, because the climatic conditions of the northern part of Leelanau counties are such as to produce fruits of exceptional quality.

SHE KNEW THE GAME.

A Nice Old Chicago Lady Who Was a Baseball "Fan."

I remember being on a Chicago street car, says Ellis Parker Butler in Success Magazine, sitting beside a nice old lady in mourning a year or so ago. She was nervous and kept glancing at me and then glancing away again. It made me uncomfortable. I thought she took me for a pickpocket or some other bad man. Finally she could contain herself no longer. She leaned over. "Excuse me," she said, "but have you heard yet how the Cubs' game came out?"

I bidn't, and her face fell, but in a moment she saw a possible opportunity for consolation.

"Well," she asked, "can you tell me who they are putting in the box to-day?"

She was that for a gray haired grandma!

In Chicago they all talk baseball from the cradle to the grave. Up to 6 o'clock in the afternoon during the baseball season no one talks about anything but the game of the day before. From 5 o'clock on the only subject is the game that is being played. The school child who cannot add two apples plus three apples and make it five apples with any certainty of correctness can favor one's standing of the Chicago blues with one hand and a peach that will make a neck only when it is held straight up and down.

Wouldn't Interfere.

"It's raining hard, my dear," remarked a man to his wife.

"Well, let it rain!" responded the lady snappishly.

"Certainly, my dear. That's really just what I intended to do."

—That there is no advertising so effective as newspaper advertising is the opinion expressed here today by A. W. Green president of the National Biscuit company. "Newspaper advertising is now found the best, taken all around," said Mr. Green. "Billboard advertising is good, but it requires too much time and attention. The boards have to be watched to see that they are in good condition and the advertisements constantly have to be renewed. We have very little trouble with the newspapers.

—The Howell Stock Co. has been organized here, and rehearsals have been held the past week on Clyde Fitch's great play "The Bachelor," to be presented at the Charlevoix Theater Thursday evening of this week. Mr. Russell, who is the star of the company, is a finished and scholarly actor. He has had leading parts in some of the best companies on the road, and will be remembered by Charlevoix people as the reporter in "The Man On the Box," played here some time ago. Mr. Russell has taken of the first order and a very pleasing stage presence. The leading lady of the company is Miss Grace Bryan, a neice of "the great commoner." Another member of the cast that will please Charlevoix people is Miss Xita Mayne, of this city, who is a graduate of the Chicago School of Expression, and a late member of the William Owen Shaksperean company. Other members of the company have been carefully selected, and a reputation of high class plays will be staged, alternating week stands between Charlevoix and Petoskey. First appearance Charlevoix Theatre Thursday night this week.

Booth Company Enlarging

Last week the Booth Fisheries Co. began work on an important enlargement of its Charlevoix plant an establishment that is already one of our most important industries.

The addition will consist of a mammoth refrigerator or freezer. It will constitute an extension of the packing house on the east side. It will be 25x80 feet on the ground, and will have a capacity to freeze fifty tons of fish at one time.

F. M. Glassford has charge of the work.

WORK TO BEGIN

Standard Portland Cement Co. Engineer Here—Energetic Work On the Plant to Begin at Once.

Mr. Ellis Sojer, chief engineer for the Standard Portland Cement Co. arrived in the city Monday night, and an assistant is expected this week, when active work will begin in laying out the grounds for the factory at the point, west of the city.

Besides preparing the ground for the factory site the work involves preliminary work on the dock and breakwater, and the branch track to connect with the Pere Marquette R. R.

We are glad to be able to say that the company is on a sound financial basis, and there is every reasonable probability that the work of construction will proceed as soon as the grounds are ready.

We here repeat what we have often before said, that this is one of the best and most promising manufacturing propositions in Michigan, and with the almost inexhaustible raw material closely at hand, and the excellent transportation facilities afforded, cannot fail to be successful.

Dr. "Jack" Nicholls Dead.

Deceased was born in Trempeleau, Wis., 36 years ago. He came to Charlevoix with his parents when but two years old. His preliminary studies were made in Charlevoix, and, when reaching the age for choosing a profession, he was sent to a Chicago medical college, from which he graduated with honor.

The "wander lust" seems to have early seized the young man, and soon after graduation he went to England, and entered a London hospital as a house surgeon. After completing an extended clinical course there, he went to Germany, where he spent a year in study in a large merchant steamship trading between Hamburg and the west coast of Africa. After a few years in his service he returned to his native land, where he was married. With his wife he spent one summer in Charlevoix a few years ago. Soon after returning to England his wife died.

About a year ago he went to New Zealand, where he married an English lady. Dr. Nicholls was the youngest son of Hon John Nicholls and wife, of this city. He was little known by Charlevoix people, having spent most of his life abroad.

CHARLEVOIX, May 29, 1910.

How oft are we led to realize the truth of the couplet of the Scottish bard.

I had been planning for several days to once more have the pleasure of clasping hands with what few of the boys of Baxter Post who remain, as they gathered around the cenotaph to honor the memory of their comrades who have crossed the dead line.

I had my old coat of blue brought out and the buttons brightened, to correspond with my hope, but in the morning I found that the laws which hold the planets in their orbits and directs the elements had directed such a storm of wind and cold as to render it unsafe for me to venture out. So I was prevented from hearing the impressive ritual services and the inspiring music; the reading of Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg address by Mr. Dyson the eloquent and patriotic address by Rev. H. A. Putnam; and last, but by far not the least, to see the happy faces and hear the sweet voices of the school children.

All these pleasures were storm blasted, and I was left at home with my thoughts, which brought with the change in the membership of Baxter Post from over one hundred and fifty to something less than twenty. This change is not solely due to the ravages of the great destroyer, but in part to the removal of members to other parts, discharges and deliquences. But over seventy sleep in Baxter and Brookside cemeteries, and their graves were to-day decorated by the noble women of the Relief Corps, assisted by the members of the Post, regardless of the inclemency of the weather.

What do we know of the bravery of those who have crossed over? One, when the sergeant was shot down picked up the flag, thrust the staff into the ground, and, standing beside it, shouted, "Come on me boys" One to the same battle, wrapping his hand to ram home a cartridge, received a ball through his hand. Another received a minnie ball through his arm, and another received one of the lead in his leg for years. Still another with a bullet wound in his thigh and another through his foot, laid on the field until he could crawl to a campfire to bring in his wounds—twenty-four hours of agony before he was gathered up by the rebels and taken to Libby prison. Not Libby he was first taken to that worse than hell—Andersonville.

And many others, I presume, bore cruel marks to their graves which were too modest to mention the fact. And what of the living? One who suffered not only from a severe wound but from the effects of the gangrene; one who now suffers pain from internal injuries beyond the skill of the surgeons; several who suffer from the effects of diseases contracted while lying in the trenches in front of Petersburg; one who, in making his escape from his captors, laid in the woods and waitered the bloodhounds that were sent out to trace him—keeping shady in the day and trusting negro guides in the night.

We have a private who was selected from a battalion to guard the danger point where enemy was expected to raid the B. & O. R. R. and Rawlings. We have the drummer boy of Bull's Bluff, who thought it his duty to be among the first to cross the river. Many more acts of bravery could be credited to these boys who are still with us, but I refrain, and leave the public to judge whether or not any or all of them, either dead or living, are worthy of respectful consideration or gratitude for the part they took in the war for the preservation of the Union.

Respectfully yours,

VET.

FIELD DAY EVENTS

The big field meet Saturday June 4, was a great success. The bigest, and best untired crowd ever seen on the north side grounds turned out to help and encourage the boys in their best efforts. The Charlevoix band were out and added greatly to the entertainment of the crowd and encouragement of the boys.

While the strong Traverse City Track team carried off the championship banner, the local boys deserve much of the honors, winning a goodly number of points and saving the big red relay banner to grace the walls of the local high school.

Five schools participated, dividing the points as follows: Traverse City 62, Charlevoix 20, Petoskey 20, Harbor Springs 12, and East Jordan 8, with Charlevoix first in the relay race, Traverse City second and Harbor Springs third.

Hennen of Traverse won the gold medal for the greatest number of points, winning 17, Cleveland of Traverse winning 15, Durgan of Charlevoix and Newman of Harbor Spring winning 11 each.

The point winners of Charlevoix were Durgan with 11, Mayne 9, Krulik 9, and Lyngklip 11. The following is a tabulated list of the results.

Dash—Sweet, East Jordan, First; Hennen, Traverse City, Second; Cleveland, Traverse City, Third; 10; 10 1-5.

Broad Jump—Newman, Harbor Springs, First; Sweet, Second; Durgan, Third; Hennen, Traverse City, Fourth; 18 feet.

100 Yd. Dash—Simpson, Traverse City, First; Hunt, Traverse City, Second; Mayne, Charlevoix, Third; 10.5.

By
MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Pardon me!" Zelda brought her fairer to the point—"but I've lost my way. Can you tell me——"

The girl stepped to the curb and described the easiest way across town. She was small and trim of figure and had very blue eyes.

"Thank you," said Zelda, and Zan started forward.

"You are being humorous," the teacher said, boastfully.

"Yes," Zelda turned toward her in surprise.

"It's been a long time since I saw you—as many as a dozen years."

"I'm sorry I don't remember you."

"I wish I could remember. I'm sorry. I'm in a hurry, too."

"It was when you were a little sister—you remember, Zan, how we used to see our mother look me to see your mother, and we always thought it was a game, the yard, while our mothers talked, and when we got home we used to tease you some very grown?"

The little girl was looking into the dark eyes. "There was a moment of breathless suspense. Then Zelda said, just out her hand.

"You are very certain, either—is it—Merriam? Please don't tell me that isn't right."

"Yes, that is just right."

"I'm going to take you home. I'm you're ready? I am. Cousin Cotton. I'm badly lost and don't remember the way. Just had to ask a policeman. It's so exciting meeting a long-lost cousin!"

Merriam was standing on his instant, in which she surveyed her sister from crumbs, dusty, the quiet cottage home when the bustle of the school house door—we've been waiting. There was no excuse for refusing, Zelda had gathered up the reins, and waited.

"Dearest" Zan isn't dangerous—and neither am I."

"Thank you. I'll have to come now to school to see about that."

"The boys thought it a safe distance, and as Zelda drove off they gathered in corner, several of them scribbled off their notes and grinned, and a little Merriam called good-night to them.

As Zelda followed the route indicated by her cousin, she was busy trying to find a line around of family history that proved otherwise. She did not at all remember her mother's brother, Thomas Merriam. She had never heard her mention a cousin named Merriam, and she, surmised, now that she thought of it, that there had been some of those books in the family cupboards that had always revealed her good edges. It was growing late, and she put Zan to her best paces, and presently they came out upon a broad road thoroughfare.

"That's better," said Zelda. "I'm sure I should never have found the way out alone. I don't believe I was ever down there before. Please let me drive you home. I haven't the least idea where you live, so if I'm going wrong——"

"It's Harrison street." She described the route. "You're taking a lot of trouble about me."

"No. It's the other way around. I'd never have seen the court-house clock again if it hadn't been for you and them—" they approached a cross street, and Zelda checked the flight of fate and lent forward to see whether the coast was clear—"and the 2-year-old ground the rein and the animal sped forward again—"I've been feeling awfully hard for—friend, Cousin Olive, and want your—"

"You are kind—but you don't understand—a lot of things." Zan was hesitant. "You and I can't be friends. There are reasons."

"I don't care for any reasons," said Zelda.

"But they're all my reasons—they're other people's reasons. They're certain there's shades are up and a light is set in the window."

"I don't care what other people say about anything"—said Zelda, brought Zan to a stand at the door of Olive's door.

"I'm sorry, you to stop——" began Olive.

"I'm going to stop," said Zelda—"to see you quite on your threshold. Zan sends salutations, Olive, and wants to take my chance."

Harriman was a street in mainstone. A poet wrote a song about it that made it very sweet for the sake of its Marions. The houses there are stately mansions, detached cottages, and in one of these, which was saved from business by its summer by a double line of hollyhocks, and which had at its back great lawn, Olive Gross a charming old-fashioned garden, lived with her brother and her mother.

Olive came open the door and Zelda stepped into a sitting-room—the house had no hall—with a coal fire burned cozily in a grate. The room was the beach of the house—the front parlor was shut, and in which the surrogate for active round table, covered with rugs made a full red and crowed. A student lamp with a green shade stood on a table in the center of the room. There were magazines and books on the table, and chairs in the corners held other books. An elderly woman looked up from the paper she had been reading as the door opened. A cane lay on the floor beside her and told the story of the lines of pain in her face.

"Mother, this is Zelda Dameron. She has brought me home," said Olive.

"She did not want me to ask her, I made her let me," said Zelda, crossing the room to shake Mrs. Merriman's hand.

The woman laid her eyes—they were blue like Olive's—upon the girl with a grave questioning look.

"You are Margaret's daughter—you are Tom's niece—Zelda Dameron," she said.

"Yes, and I right know about you at all until I found Olive to-day. And I didn't—I mean I don't know much about where lived in a house like this. Why, it's a home. I'm going—but tell me—that's very dark again.

"Tom was something of a wanderer and wistful in Zelda's tone as she spoke, stood for one moment the fireplace, and the sampling, something, too, in the glance of eyes she gave the little room. "I'm broke down the antagonism in Mrs. Merriman's eyes. She put out her hand again.

"Yes; I hope you will come. We shall be glad to see you."

Olive followed Zelda to the steps, and saw the runabout turn in the narrow street and wheel away. She was sure that Zelda's secret figure passed like a flash under the steeple light at the corner and disappeared into the dark beyond.

"What miracle is this?" asked Mrs. Merriman of Olive. "Nothing short of a miracle would prevent her from coming to see me."

"I met her down at the school-house. She had lost her way and asked of me how to find Jefferson street. I called her by name—she seemed to remember me, and then she insisted on bringing me home. She seemed rather glad to see me, and was very sweet and wanted a friend."

Olive sat down on a stool at her mother's feet. She was afraid to show too much interest in this new-found cousin. Her mother was clearly puzzled and troubled. The moment was difficult; but she felt that it was important to demonstrate her independence with Zelda Dameron now.

"She is very like her mother. It gave me a shock to see her. Margaret had been my brother's idol, and I know she thought would have seemed criminal if it in Margaret. Every one always said, when she was a little girl, that she was odd. But it was just like Margaret to do what her father hadn't any of that; he wasn't like the rest of the Merrimans. He tried to be on good terms with Elnathan Dameron, though Elnathan never quite forgiven him, and the rest of them dropped us for continuancing him. But Zelda—what do you think of her?"

"She didn't give me time to think. She charmed me! I never saw anyone—I like her in the world. She was such an air of mystery—that doesn't sound right, but you don't know what to call it. She's adorable."

CHAPTER VI.

Rodney Merriman and Morris Letch-walked up Hill street in the Tippecanoe Club, which was a big house in a big lot with grounds that had been built by the Merrimans who had made the town their home. Merriman usually used these late every afternoon to look over the newspapers, and to talk to the men who dropped in on their way home. He habitually left the Hill Tippecanoe, a much larger and gayer club than one in the heart of the town, and in the circular photo about the wall-mirror mounted at the heart of the city; but he never went there, for it was now only full of politics. Many young men fresh from college lately went to the Tippecanoe, and Merriman liked to talk to them. The club was a common ground to the Hill people, though they often went there together. A number of men were sitting about the fireplace in the lounging-room, for the weather was chilly, furnished the only light. A chorus of good-evenings greeted the two men in unmistakable cordiality, and the best chair in the circle was pushed toward Rodney Merriman.

"Mr. Merriman, Captain Pollock; and Mr. Leighton."

A young man rose and shook hands with the newcomers. Merriman did not remember the name of the other; he had reached the age at which it seems hard to fix in the memory such new handiness. It was, he said, good of them to come to see him, and he wished he could see more of them, and he hoped they would come—as he said it he looked about the circle—and see him more. The youngsters at the Tippecanoe were for the greater part college graduates, just starting out in life, and he was interested in some of their youth through the ties of the club.

"Captain Pollock has been telling us about the Philippines," said one of the group. "We've been trying to find out whether he is an imperialist or how about it, but he won't tell."

"That shows his good judgment," said Merriman.

"It shows that I want to keep my job," declared Pollock, cheerfully.

"And I'll be cashiered now for saying I don't get back to the Arsenal. Major Cassidy expects me to drive Miss Baker, who had brought Pollock to the club, down himself one of his cabs and the others room.

"I'll see that you and your way back to the reservation," said Baker.

"Don't worry about that. I'm glad to have met you, Mr. Merriman, and I'm very sorry I can't stay to see the end of the ball. Merriman looked at the speaker with interest. He was a stern young fellow, with friendly blue eyes, brown hair, and a military mustache. His carriage was that of one accustomed to command. He gave a degree in the usual academic way, Merriman knew, and unlike most graduates that is much more unusual. The presence of Captain Pollock had been the shortest man in the club, and Merriman had liked his solidarity. The young man with whom he had spoke an instant before was one that had been gathered up by the club in the last few months and seemed taken a fancy to him. They all had the air of together except Merriman and Leighton, who went to the newspaper room. But Merriman stayed a moment to pass upon without reading it, and when he got up to go presently, he stopped at the club register which lay upon one of the tables in the hall, and put his eye-glasses and scanned the page. The ink was fresh on the last signature.

"Pretty fellow, I'll be bound," Rodney Merriman then walked toward his own house, thinking the matter over. The next morning he called for his horse early. He was very fond of his horse, and he had ridden nearly every day when it was fair. His route was usually out High street toward the country; but to-day he turned down town through the monument and the Circle then struck east on the asphalt of Jefferson street, where a handsome gentleman of 65, riding a bay mare that was remembered with pride at Lexington, was not even every day. Rodney Merriman was thinking deeply this morning, and the sinuosities of his horse's heels on the hard pavement did not annoy him as it usually did.

Arsenal is a word that suggests Hill. It didn't use to be. Arsenal had been maintained through many peaceful years at Washington, and the town by growth leaped over the government state walls and extended the limit lines beyond it, was really a pretty place. It had the freshness of the city and several massive stonework, very of it, but, inoffensive to the old native forest trees were alone with natural color, and laborers were cutting and carrying away dead leaves.

Merriman brought his horse to a walk as he neared the open gates. A private came out of the little guard-house and returned Merriman's salute. The man stood attentively after the military figure on the thoroughbred, though he had often seen rider and horse before, and he knew that Mr. Merriman was a friend of Major Cassidy's, the commandant. The soldier continued to stare after Rodney, Merriman, curious to see whether the visitor would bring his horse to his feet as he neared the line that flapped limb overhead. He was not disappointed. Rodney Merriman never failed to salute the colors, and he was not thinking of it hard; and he was latent upon an idea this morning.

The man who answered the bell was not sure whether Major Courtlee was at home; he hoped Major Courtlee was and; but the commandant appeared at the door and invited the caller cordially.

Major Courtlee was a little stout, but his gray civilian clothes made the best of a figure that was not what it had been. He was bald, and looked much better in a hat than without it. "You'll pardon me for breaking in on your parking. I meant came to regret it a little. I hadn't seen in how long—the local news any more until it's stale. I've just heard that the Arsenal has been sold and I want to say that it's an outrage to tear this place to pieces."

"It is too bad; but I don't see what you are going to do about it. I've already got my walking papers. The incident is closed as far as I am concerned."

"I'm going to an estate, just a clearance for the Arsenal is not to do as I please. We've got land to sell gentlemen of the redmans. Your reputation has been an inspiration to the community."

"No honor." The town has always been so good to me and mine that we've had no chance for praise.

"But the Sheridan War passed over and never touched you. I don't believe the powers at Washington know you are alive."

"Oh, yes, they are. They wired me they saw no harm in my staying in office in the storehouse, until I know every thing about that old army line by heart. If would send those old guns to that war, the new with Spain would have been a near equal basis."

"Yes, I know. I would," said Merriman, who was thinking of something else, and who was thinking it very hard. He never quite settled that little question about Sheridan and I'm confident I'm more wrong about the Fitz-John Porter case.

"Well, posterity will settle those questions without us. And would you like a walking over to the office with me?"

"Thank you, I must be going. This was an unpardonable hour for a call; I'm rather over the—thinks of the regular commander's department, who has been sent out to take charge of the new post at Sheridan. I'm very busy, you know, indeed."

"Is he very glad, some other time," said Merriman. "Which way does Mr. Pollock live?"

"He's a Southern fire. Father was killed at Chickamauga. Rather sad. The war is over and the hatchet buried."

"Indeed, did you say?" Tennessee finally! I seem to remember the name. Yes, I know Mr. Pollock. I hope so him up in the register."

HAUNT OF THE PTARMIGAN.

Of all our mountain birds the ptarmigan alone remains on the mountain tops in winter as well as in summer, and when all other bird life has been compelled by the severity of "the weather to descend to more sheltered haunts the hardy ptarmigan seems almost to revel in the arctic conditions and scorns to leave his wintry mountain fastness. Seton Gordon says in the Field.

For this reason he is of special interest to the ornithologist, and a day in his company is always worth the hardships of an arduous climb, for the ptarmigan rarely descends even during the bitterest snowstorms below the level of 2,500 feet. As the winter, accordingly, is a monotonous time for him, set out at daybreak for a favorite haunt of the ptarmigan, a hard frost held the whole countryside firmly in its grip and the snow, partly thawed by a mild sunshine, was on the previous day, was frozen as hard as iron.

On the lower ground the snowfall was not continuous, but on the sheltered sides of the hill were deep wreaths, and to our west the snow lay deep and unbroken. Passing a small lochan bedding in a birch wood we found it thickly covered with a beautiful sheet of smoothest ice, suggesting to our minds the national game of curling, for many local rinks must have been marked out on the lochan's surface. Soon we passed a mountain tarn, where ample evidence came to the fact that a kestrel had the spot for roosting, the red the bittle-bog yielded a good mangy grouse, some already pulled, but the majority in scales and pecks.

Loch Davan, far beneath us, was partially ice bound, but large waves were rolling across the exposed surface of the water, showing that a strong wind was blowing on the low grounds. We put up many mountain hares, which seemed to rival the snow in their snow-white fur, but shortly after leaving the 2,000-foot level the grouse flushed were now few and far between and at length we entered the domain of the snow-white ptarmigan.

We first became aware of the close proximity of these birds by a deep guttural croaking proceeding from some rocky ground on our left, and careful stalking enabled us to get within a few yards of the bird and to obtain a snapshot of him. He was crouching low on the ground and harmonized with his surroundings in a truly remarkable manner.

When he took wing the great beauty of his plumage was very obvious, a few black feathers in his tail only set off the spotless white of his wings and breast. We obtained a pretty photograph of a cock ptarmigan in a marks leading through the wet snow to a small pool of water, and soon afterwards we found that the "fresh" of the previous night had been felt even at this altitude of close on 2,500 feet, for there was practically no snow on the mountain plateau and numerous little pools of water showed how the snow had melted.

Civil War Stories

How They Met.

At the panorama of the Battle of Shiloh in this city a small, shrivelled-up man made himself conspicuous by going around the place very cheerfully. He did not appear to be more than five feet high. He was dressed all in black, and his attenuated form and gray whiskers gave him a peculiarly grotesque appearance. He seemed to be greatly interested in the panorama, and as he moved from one point of view to another he groaned and wept copiously. A tall, raw-boned man approached him, he wore gray clothes and a slouch hat, and he had the general appearance of a disguised gray from home on a furlough.

"Hookem you were at Shiloh, eh, stranger?" asked the tall, raw-boned man.

"Yes," replied the small, shrivelled up man; "and I shall never forget it. It was the hottest battle of the war."

"I was there," said the tall, raw-boned man, and my regiment was drawn up right over yonder where you saw that clump of trees."

"Yes, I remember it well," said the small, shrivelled-up man, for it was a Federal soldier, and he spoke very seldom in all that battle was just among that clump of trees."

"Properties was the Yankee general, I reckon, leastways I would," said Merriman, who was thinking of something else, and who was thinking it very hard. "We never quite settled that little question about Shiloh and I'm confident I'm more wrong about the Fitz-John Porter case.

How We Did During the War.

At the outbreak of the war we had a small regiment of regular troops, a little lame, and, indeed, dry goods of all kinds, in sufficient quantities to last a year, and we had fairly plentiful during the whole time; but neither, as we had anticipated, the struggle would last only a few months, or a year at most, and with this in mind we shortly instituted in her mind, she gave with a lavish hand, dispensing many articles that we afterwards needed for ourselves. She had a lot of lovely silk, and velvet, and satin, and brocade, and the damnas window curtains were taken down, and were made into coverlets. All our heavy wanted dresses were converted into overalls. The lines sheets, little cloths, towels, and napkins, we all named in the war, and in our minds the national game of curling, for many local rinks must have been marked out on the lochan's surface. Soon we passed a mountain tarn, where ample evidence came to the fact that a kestrel had the spot for roosting. The red the bittle-bog yielded a good mangy grouse, some already pulled, but the majority in scales and pecks.

LOCAL OPTION RALLY

The Petoskey Gathering Earnest and Fruitful—Large Attendance.

Petoskey News: Former Governor Hanly has come and gone; yet the stamp of his personality shall not soon be forgotten by those fortunate enough to hear him.

Following a most excellent program of memorial exercises under direction of Lombard Post and the Woman's Relief Corps the local option rally of the afternoon and evening was carried out.

The Boyne City special brought in about one hundred and fifty people, and in spite of storm and cold Harbor Springs, Alanson, Charlevoix and East Jordan sent good delegations.

The afternoon session was a plain form meeting presided over by Mr. E. E. Gilbert. The Ariel male quartet of Harbor Springs opened the session. Judge A. L. Desoe spoke of the benefits he as probate judge had seen in this county since it went dry. Judge Harris and Mr. S. C. Smith, of Boyne City, followed, reporting many good results of the dry situation in Boyne City. Mr. Smith said the people were now drinking buttermilk there. Mr. Lamoreport, of East Jordan, Dr. Wilkinson and Mr. E. S. Stacks, of Charlevoix, gave their evidence to the improved conditions in their communities, and Mr. Bauer, of Traverse City, and Mr. Pliny Marsh, of Detroit, representing the State Anti-Saloon League, gave many good pointers and suggestions regarding methods of law enforcement.

One point made by these gentlemen was that while our opponents cry that the law is not enforced and that non-enforcement breeds contempt for law and hence that we should return to the license system, yet past experience has shown that every regulative law against the saloon has been and would continue to be disregarded and would as surely breed contempt.

Governor Hanly's speech in the evening was a masterpiece and held the big audience as few speakers of recent times come have done.

Defends the Country Populisher.

Congressman William E. Tou Velle of the Fourth District of Ohio, in a recent speech in the House condemning the free printing of stamped envelopes by the government, said in part.

The country editors of the nation perform in the aggregate more gratuitous public service, and, when their power is concentrated, exert more benefient and patriotic influence than all other classes of Journalism. Yet the country newspapers, these recorders of local history, receive but a fraction of the compensation they richly earn. They submit patiently to varied forms of competition. They printers compete for all the profitable jobs of the local business men—men whom the editors unwillingly serve; yet the free distribution of their farmer subscribers the cheap city daily at nominal postage rates.

They are surrounded by many disheartening conditions, which are endured without murmur or complaint, but when the government others and furnishes free printing on stamped envelopes, which unnecessarily deprives them of a legitimate source of revenue and when the government by this practice derives no benefit, either financially or otherwise, they most respectfully but emphatically object.

Valuations Vs. Tax Commission

The tax assessments are unjust, but that the supervisors in many counties and districts lack the required backbone to boost their assessments, by coming to a pass where the tax commission promises to make a readjustment of aldis' and some supervisors are beckoning with open arms for this aid.

No doubt that it will be a stupendous task, but to give a small idea of the unjustness under the present assessment in some localities, at least, the tax commission gave out the following figures, which are valuations placed for 1909; Lansing, $13,746,425; Flint, $11,418,260; Battle Creek, $11,212,800; Jackson, $16,046,465; Kalamazoo, $20,652,490.

Only recently by the owners of the Hen Auto plant in this city placed a valuation of $7,000,000 on their plant alone, which alone represents over one half the assessed valuation of the capital city.

Help in getting the valuation adjusted will be given by the commission after the board of review has completed it this way a step toward getting the supervisors to do what it right will probably result.

BUTTER MAY BE $1 00

Increase of Price Because of Battle of Brokers and Packers.

A dispatch from Detroit says: "Butter is going to be higher, there is no doubt about that, but I do not think the market will touch the $1 mark," said D. O. Wiley, a wholesale commission merchant. "The Detroit market will be keenly affected by the fluctuations in the Chicago circles. Butter went into storage at a high mark this year and this is bound to have effect."

Dispatches from Chicago say that a coterie of Chicago commission merchants have decided to push the price of butter to 40 cents a pound before the last of June, and if this does not force packers to break then contracts the price will be boosted to 50 cents within the coming five weeks and be steadily advanced from then on.

The trouble started over the failure of the packers to place the usual number of spring orders with the brokers. In previous years it was the custom for Chicago packers to place their orders through local brokers. The spring packers sent representatives to treat directly with the creameries, and they succeeded in placing contracts for from one to two cars of butter to be delivered before the last of June. The price agreed upon was to be one half cents less than the Elgin quotation at the creamery.

Because of this action brokers have become aroused over the loss of commissions and have secured the support of the Elgin men to make the packers pay the high prices for their butter.

The County Sunday School Convention.

Boyne Journal.—The Sunday school convention for Charlevoix County closed this noon with a fair representation of the county which was made by the number of delegates who attended. W. H. Robertson, the retiring president, handled its deliberations with ease and grace. The secretary, Mrs Heston, made a very complete report. A paper was read by Mrs. W. H. White. An interesting account was given by E. S. Stacks of Charlevoix and Mrs. S. J. Smith was prevailed upon to speak on what a woman saw at the National convention at Washington. Mississippi Weaver, whom everybody knows and loves, gave an account of his work and stirred up considerable enthusiasm.

Mrs. Stacks was elected president for next year and Miss McCartney of Charlevoix was elected secretary. Hortons Bay extended an invitation for the convention for the next meeting in that place, promising a good attendance and entertainment for all. Mr. Stacks, Mrs. Robertson, Miss McCartney and Miss Porter were elected delegates to attend the State Convention in Grand Rapids in November.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Boyne City people of all the churches for their hospitality and manner which was beautifully rendered by a chorus choir under the direction of E. A. Hodgegger last evening.

Jails Must Be Improved

A new rule has been adopted by the state board of corrections and charities relative to county jails under which all new buildings must provide for classification of prisoners. More stringent approval of plans has been adopted which was brought about by the annual inspection conducted by Secretary Moriarty which developed some deplorable conditions in some sections of the state.

It seems that all jails are lacking in certain facilities in that they lack in ability to separate hobos, drunks, convicted men and men awaiting trial from each other. Under the new rule the new jails must provide quarters for men awaiting trial separate from those of the other classes.

The first plan submitted was from Montcalm county and showed two blocks of cells facing on a commodious aisle way and the board has requested that the plans be changed to conform to the new rule adopted.

A Woman's Great Idea

is how to make herself attractive. But, without health, it is hard for her to lovely in face, form or temper. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wrecked complexion. But Electric Bitters at once gives a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion, good health. Try them. 50c. at F. G. Hines & Co.

A JOKE ON ANSON.

It Reacted on the Players the Captain Was Training.

In an article on baseball training camps Hugh S. Fullerton, in the American Magazine, recounts the following joke played on "Cap" Anson, the leader of the famous old White Stockings, during a training season some years ago:

"Anson was one of the most tireless runners in the world, and training under him was a nightmare to his players. Anso would drive his men for three hours in practice, then lead them in long runs, placing himself at the head of the procession and setting a steady, jogging pace. If he felt well the morning training was a Marathon route. I have seen players resort to all kinds of tricks to avoid those killing runs.

"One afternoon in New Orleans years ago Anson ordered ten laps around the field after practice, which on the old grounds was nearly ten miles. The afternoon was hot, one of those wilting southern spring days that sap the life out of men fresh from the rigors of a northern winter. The players felt tuite fine, grumbling and scoffing. Rock of left field a high board fence separated the ball grounds from one of the old cemeteries, and near the foul line a board was off the fence. The first time the panting athletes passed the hole in the fence Dahlen gave a quick glance to see if Anson was looking and dived head first through the gap into the cemetery. The others continued on around the lot, but on the second round Lange, Ryan, Kittridge and Decker dived after Dahlen and joined him in the cemetery. The third time—by the time divided due to four followers, with Anson still leading. The fourth found only Anson and poor Bill Schriver, who had the hard luck to be directly behind his captain, plodding on, and on the next trip Schriver made the leap for life.

"Majestically alone, Anson toiled on, while the outsiders writhed with delight. Perhaps their behavior aroused suspicion or the absence of following footsteps attracted "Cap's" attention. He stopped, looked at the vacant field, a grin grin overspread his red face, and he resumed the jogging. Straight to that fence he plodded, and, sticking his head through the hole, he beheld his team leaning against the above ground tombs, smoking and laughing. Just for that he marshaled them into line again and, sitting in the stand, watched them grimly until every man had completed ten rounds."

A Skylark For the Shabby Class.

I have heard of a professor of English in one of our universities who evidently felt that his department was labouring under disadvantages. Finding that his scientific colleagues were getting appropriations of astonishing liberality for illustrative apparatus, he put in his annual report a request for $2,000 for an aviary. When the president asked him to explain he said that it was impossible for him to teach poetry properly unless he had an aviary connected with his class room. "Then," he said, "when the class is reading Shelley's 'Skylark' I reach my long handed net into the cage, catch a lark and hold it up to them. And when we are studying 'The Blithe of the Ancient Mariner' my assistant will be stationed in the gallery with a crossbow to shoot a real, live albatross on the platform, thus giving the students opportunities for observation that doubtless Coleridge himself never had."—Independent.

The Orang Outang.

It is a most interesting sight to watch an orang outang make its way through the jungle. It walks slowly along the larger branches in a semi-erect attitude, this being apparently caused by the length of its arms and the shortness of its legs. It invariably selects those branches which intermingle with those of a neighboring tree, on approaching which it stretches out its long arms and, grasping the bough opposite, seems first to shake them as if to test their strength and then deliberately swings itself across to the next branch, which it walks along as before. It does not jump or spring, as monkeys usually do, and never appears to hurry itself unless some real danger is present. Yet in spite of its apparently slow movements it gets along far quicker than a person running through the forest beneath.

ART CRITICISM.

A Story a Painter Told About the Artist Constable.

A well known New York painter told at a luncheon a story about art criticism.

"All art criticism is tolerable," he said, "except that which is insincere. The great Constable at a varnishing day at the Royal academy paused before a picture and said:

"'Very good, especially the sky. The sky is sincere.'

"Then he passed on to it and said: "'As picture is very bad. Go look at it. The sky is like putty.'

"So it went and looked and then exclaimed as if to himself:

"'Why, I like the sky!'

"'Well,' cried A, the painter of the picture, 'why shouldn't you like my sky?'

"'But Constable said it was like putty.' It astonished confoundedly.

"'So A in a furious rage strode up to Constable and shouted:

"'Constable, you're a humbug. I never asked for your opinion about my picture, yet you came to me and praised it. You said that especially you liked my sky. Then at once you go off and tell some one else that my sky is like putty.'

"Constable listened, with a smile. He was not at all confused.

"'My dear fellow, you don't understand,' he said; 'I like putty.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Thrilling.

Sir John Benn recently related a story of a boy who was asked what he would like to be.

The boy said, "A lighthouse keeper."

The schoolmaster asked, "Why?"

The boy replied, "It would be so nice to sit up at the top of the lighthouse and see all the wrecks going to pieces below."—Dundee Advertiser.

BLOTTING PAPER.

Its Discovery Was the Result of a Workman's Carelessness.

Blotting paper was discovered purely by accident. Some ordinary paper was being made one day at a mill in Hertzshire when a careless workman forgot to put in the sizing material. It may be imagined what angry scenes would take place in that mill, as the whole of the paper made was regarded as being quite useless. The proprietor of the mill desired to write a note shortly afterward, and he took a piece of waste paper, thinking it was good enough for the purpose. To his fitcome surprise the ink spread all over the paper. All of a sudden there flashed on his mind the thought that this paper would do instead of sand for drying ink, and he at once ordered that his waste be put aside for sale.

The reason the paper is of use in drying ink is that really it is a mass of hairlike tubes which suck up liquid by capillary attraction. If a very fine glass tube is put into water the liquid will rise in it owing to capillary attraction. The art of manufacturing blotting paper has been carried to such a degree that the paper is made of absorbent qualities.

The original blotting paper was of a pink color, due to the fact that red rags were used, rags which could not be used for making the ordinary paper, as the color could not be removed. Here was a material for using the apparently useless matter, and so for a long time pink was the predominant color.—London M. A. P.

A Fresh Start.

A girl came in and sat in front of them at the table, she and her mamma. "What a lovely profile!" said he. "Beautiful! delicate little aquiline nose, small mouth, deep, pretty eyes that's the beautiful—beautiful."

"Beautiful," said she, "but not just so much so as the nose she is with isn't so. Is he handsomer than you ever saw? Look at his color, his mustache, his lovely beard! Why, I'm many size are bald or beginning to be bald. I do love to see a fine head of hair on a man!"

"You know," he whispered, "it always makes me feel bad when a people beginning to be bald, and you talk so."

"But Constable said it was like putty," it exclaimed confoundedly.

"So A in a furious rage strode up to Constable and shouted:

"'Constable, you're a humbug. I never asked for your opinion about my picture, yet you came to me and praised it. You said that especially you liked my sky. Then at once you go off and tell some one else that my sky is like putty.'

"Constable listened, with a smile. He was not at all confused.

"'My dear fellow, you don't understand,' he said; 'I like putty.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Thrilling.

Sir John Benn recently related a story of a boy who was asked what he would like to be.

The boy said, "A lighthouse keeper."

The schoolmaster asked, "Why?"

The boy replied, "It would be so nice to sit up at the top of the lighthouse and see all the wrecks going to pieces below."—Dundee Advertiser.

FARMER LEGISLATORS

Are Farmers Qualified to Serve In Legislative Bodies?

A Thoughtful Article on a Very Timely Subject, to Which the Writer Maintains That the Farmer Is Eminently Well Qualified to Serve His Fellows in Lawmaking.

[Special Correspondence.]

First—In the average farmer speak and not as in big talent. I have discovered in this that we know most about the business in which we are faithfully engaged. If this is true the farmer knows most about the farm. He is, as a rule, a man of sound common sense, honest and has a perfect right to claim of the term of his own vocation. He is necessitated to look into matters very closely, as the income of his family depends on sound judgment in the management of his affairs. These traits make him eminently well fitted to serve his fellows in the making of such laws as would best conserve the interests of the agricultural class.

The farmer of today is often as well educated and is as able a leader at his professional brother. While his hours of labor are often longer than those men who are professionals, physicians and men of more professions in the cities and towns, yet his work is no longer, but, in addition, have the farmer the time for the pursuit of trust as well as a wide round of social functions not enjoyed by those which take time. He reads, thinks, weighs the projects. His farmer leaders in many instances after the day's duties are done to consult with the family and take time to inform himself upon all the events of the day as set forth in the news and in the articles of the magazines and periodical literature.

Second—If it is desirable to have farmer legislators and capable men can be found who are fitted for the call?

Because, as a rule, the farmer has been as have attending to his own affairs that he has not taken time to become a part of the machine that has served little for the intrigues which make men popular and politicians. Right when to win in contests and every delegation, he can be depended upon to do the right thing for his party when the party gives up good men, he may not be a leader in the fight with and will not be popular. The politician knows which way to throw plums to keep the gang in line so his name is welcomed with the party with. The farmer vote has always been regarded as sure. Politicians of all parties have taken for granted the votes of farmers. Farmers have not been regarded as sane. Politicians of other vocations have made the assertion of one that the Hickman was the only one of the class that could pick up a fence post, make a hitch in a tight place and get the right thing for his party when the party gives up good men, he may not be a leader in the fight with and will not be popular. The politician knows which way to throw plums to keep the gang in line so his name is welcomed with the party with. The farmer vote has always been regarded as sure

BIG LAKE SHIP SUNK; SCORE MAY BE LOST

Frank H. Goodyear of Cleveland Run Down by James B. Wood on Huron in Fog.

SURVIVING CRAFT SAVES SIX

Returns to Port Huron with Huge Hole in Bow Plates as Evidence of the Disaster.

The steel steamer Frank H. Goodyear of the Mitchell Transit Company, in a fog, collided with the steamer James B. Wood, another steel boat, belonging to the Gilchrist Transportation Company. Five were saved. The collision occurred about 4 o'clock on a recent morning in a heavy fog which overhung the lake.

When the steamers came together the crew of the Goodyear, which is reported to have been struck amidships, had time only to seize life preservers, they say, a few could jump overboard before the boat began to fill with water. The collision had just ended the second call for breakfast on the Goodyear when the crash came and many were in the mess-room. All rushed on deck and then the boat began to sink. Several jumped into the water and managed to get out of reach of the hole, which was thirty feet.

Suddenly the Goodyear parted in the center and with a sound which could be heard above the whistling of the wind, sank out of sight, carrying with it all except five on board. The bow of the Wood was seen to, but she rested on her bulkhead, and, though some water flowed into the hold, was kept afloat with the pumps. Captain Gibson of the Wood ordered the lifeboats lowered and with the crew instructions to make every possible effort to save any of the sailors of the sinking steamer.

In a short time the yawlboat was launched, alongside the Wood and Chris Hemenger, Steward Frank Bassett, Mrs. Emma Bassett, Frank Mullins and George Grant were taken aboard, all exhausted from their exertions to save themselves during the time they were in the water. Many of the Goodyear's crew were killed by falling hatches before they had a chance to jump into the water. All hat on deck perservers when their vessel sank. The cook's boiler was dashed from his stove by falling hatches and the inland was on fire.

Both the Wood and the Goodyear are large steel vessels. The Wood is 525 feet long and the Goodyear was 436 feet long. For more than seven hours the Wood remained at anchor near the scene of the collision, the captain hoping that he would be able to tow others of the crew of the Goodyear. When the fog rose nothing was in sight, and he then decided to return to Port Huron, where the extent of the damage to the Wood could be seen. The steamer's bow was stove in, and a huge hole in the plates was the evidence of the disaster.

DR. KOCH IS DEAD

German Professor Who Developed Preventive Medicine Passes Away.

Professor Robert Koch, the eminent German bacteriologist, died in Baden Baden the after afternoon. He had been in failing health for a year or more, following the expedition to which he subjected himself while engaged in Asiatic research in malarial districts in German East Africa and elsewhere. He was in his sixty-seventh year.

A graduate of the University of Berlin, Dr. Koch began his bacteriological investigations about thirty years ago, when he was district surgeon at Wolstein. He first achieved public notice through his discovery of a method for cultivating microscopic germs by means of which he isolated the tubercle bacillus and produced tuberculosis by its inoculation in animals. His reward for this signal achievement as prize consisted of the employment of the full confidence of the Kaiser.

He gained world fame by his discovery of antitoxin for the prevention and cure of diphtheria and by his research for the cause and cure of sleeping sickness, which afflicted the tribes of Central Africa. He also was the discoverer of a cutaline gas which proved effective in killing ships of rodents. Koch never claimed that his germ cure for tuberculosis was infallible. He did claim, however, that it was a preventive and a practical cure in a good majority of cases.

JULIA WARD HOWE 91.

Julia Ward Howe was 91 years old on her birthday. There was no public observance of the event; the breakfast to her which the New England Women's clubs have given every year for forty-two years having been served days before. As has been her custom of late years, Mrs. Howe spent the day in her home on Beacon street, Boston, with her family, surrounded by her children, grandchildren, and the little great-grandchildren, who had having greetings and caresses. The grand jury that he never wrote a letter to J. W. Knox, a salesman for the Delta Tools Company, at Detroit, Mr. Burke, it is claimed, had in his possession a letter written by Hibbler to Knox, shortly before the contract was 24.

RECEIVES ROOSEVELT.

Alexandra Expresses Appreciation of American Sympathy.

Queen Mother Alexandra received Mr. Roosevelt at Buckingham palace, London, the other day. The two had a long talk, in which her majesty took occasion to tell the former President how much she appreciated the sympathy expressed for her in America at the time of her bereavement. Subsequently the queen mother received Lord Strathcona, high commissioner of Canada, whom she asked to convey to the people of that dominion an expression of her gratitude for their love and sympathy.

BOY PUTS BATTER OUT; DIES.

Hit in Abdomen by Ball, Lad Hurls Sphere and Falls Dead.

The baseball instinct was so strong in Harry Thorsen, a 14-year-old boy, that although he was knocked down and painfully badly injured when struck in the abdomen by a batted ball during a "rough" game, he managed to throw the ball to first in time to catch the runner. That assist was the last that he will be credited to him. As the umpire cried "One!" Becker collapsed and he was dead when a physician reached his side.

SURRENDERS TO OFFICIALS

Fugitive Gives Self Up After Sensational Jail Attempt.

"Boy, have you no heart? Come back to Chicago, and when your time is up, if you still love this little girl, we will be happy yet," was the plea that had Max H. Hunzeustein in prison in Los Angeles, Cal. He is wanted in Chicago for the embezzlement of $7,000 from Lillian Bell, of Libby, by whom he was employed as a collector. The young man is under indictment for the theft of the girl who penned the plea.

WOMAN GOES ON TRIAL.

Evidence Against Her to Collected by Dead Man's Sister.

Charged with the murder of her husband, William Ende, a St. Louis postal clerk, Mrs. Loren E. Doxey was arraigned in the St. Louis before Judge McQuillin. Mr. Loren B. Doxey, the defendant's first husband, is indicted on the same charge. The case is another of Missouri's alleged husband and wife tragedies, in which the accused kinder while still the wife of Mr. Doxey. Mr. Doxey was in Nebraska during Ender's illness, but the state alleges he sent poison to Mrs. Doxey, with directions as to how it should be administered. Miss Kate Ender, sister of the dead postal clerk, will be the chief witness for the State, having worked on the case unaided and caused the arrest of the Doxeys. The State claims the motive of the alleged poisoning was to obtain the insurance carried by Ender and to avoid complications from Mrs. Doxey's big amous marriage. A curious feature of the case is that while Mrs. Doxey has been in jail, pending trial, she has been completely cured of the drug habit.

MANUEL'S DEATH PLOTTED.

Portugal's King and Alfonso Said to Be Marked by "Clubs."

Secret warnings have been sent to government officials at Lisbon that an attempt upon the life of King Manuel is likely to be made upon his return from London. The Spanish police are tracing details of the anarchist plot, based on news received at Madrid and King Manuel of Portugal charged for death, but members of their governments as well. Several service officials of either governments are cooperating in the work of ferreting out the conspiracy. Only England's position as a political refuge prevented attempts on Alfonso and Manuel in London during the cheapies over the late King Edward.

Instructing him how to operate the trigger, he dried aun after being carried by his mother to hospital. Allen has been in jail, pending trial, she has been completely cured of the drug habit.

RECEIVER FOR TRACTION CO.

More by Creditors Puts Chicago Railways Co. in New Hands.

Following the entry of a judgment of $1,245,000 against the Chicago Railways Company by Judge Parlin Q Hall in the Superior Court, the big traction corporation was thrown into the hands of receivers by Judge Peter S. Grosscup in the United States District Court. The receivership was asked by the Westinghouse Electric Company on a claim for $68,514. Henry H. Hair, chairman of the board of directors of the Chicago Railways Company, and John M. Roach, president of the corporation, were named as receivers by Judge Grosscup. The suit for a receivership was understood to be friendly, and the proceedings were taken as a protective measure to safeguard the interests of the creditors, the stock and bondholders and the city. The total funded debt of the Chicago Railways Company amounts to $70,810,034.50.

UTES GET $3,408,611 VERDICT.

Court Allows That Sum as Compensation for Indian Lands Seized.

The United States Court of Claims has handed down its decision in the the Indian case, entering judgment for the Indian claimants for $3,408,611.46 as just compensation for lands confiscated by the United States government. The tribes condemnated in the suit were the White River Utes, the Uintah Utes, the Southern Utes, and the Uncompahgre Utes.

By an act of Congress jurisdiction of the Ute Indian reservation was vested in the Court of Claims in 1909 because land had been taken by mineral entries without just compensation, and large forest lands were taken and small the holdings of the Utes declined in a very short space of time. The amount is to compensate for this, and in addition to the money a tract of the government lands in Colorado, containing nearly 15,000,000 acres, will be set aside for the Utes as a reservation.

BANISHMENT FOR HEBREWS.

Russia Ousts Jews by the Thousands from City of Kiev.

One thousand and two Jewish families have now received official notification that they must leave Kiev. Russia, in accordance with the determination of the Russian government to drive back into the pale all Jews who are unable to establish their legal right to remain outside its confines. An additional 192 families living in the suburbs outside the city proper are subject to deportation before June 14 unless in the meantime they produce proofs of their right of residence in their present homes.

It is quite impossible to secure statistics showing the number of them already expelled. Even the Jewish relief committee is unable to state the exact figure, but the committee estimates that between 200 and 300 Jewish families have quitted the city.

In addition to the deportation ordered, the Jews of Kiev have been subjected to minor annoyances, such as the payment of passports had cost them the year, and interference with their residence at the summer resorts outside of Kiev, where all those who are prosperous generally are driving the heats and rents, the law forbidding Jews to settle in the villages as on farms, in order to prevent the exploiting of simple peasantry.

The rent workshops for the Jews are expected to come on June 14, when the time limit for their deportation expires. All who still remain in Kiev on various pretexts will be expelled on that date. Jews living in the suburbs committee is collecting funds for this contingency, it is found that some will lose deportation by force rather than leave the city voluntarily. The committee has collected several thousand dollars, and buses are entertained that transportation will be secured from the considerable colony of Jews in Kiev.

KELLNER GIRL'S BODY FOUND.

Prisoner's Husband Is Missing Janitor of Apartment Is Held.

The body of Alma Kellner, who disappeared Dec. 8, was found the other day in the cellar of the Louisville Hospital School, five blocks from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred F. Kellner, in Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Lena Wendling, wife of Joseph Wendling, a janitor of the Church of St. John's Roman Catholic Church, and who disappeared Jan. 14, has been arrested, charged with being an accomplice in the murder. Mrs. Wendling was housemaid for Father George Schulhman, the pastor. Wendling, who is 24 years old, is said to be said to his destination, his wife asserted. The child's body was found that was incased in carpet, sewed together longitudinal, and the child had evidently been slain and then thrown through a trapdoor. Almost every bone was broken and the skull was fractured. It was evident that quicklime had been used and that attempts had been made to burn the body. Alma Kellner was 8 years old, and left her home the morning of her disappearance, to go to school. It was thought she had been kidnaped, and a ransom demand for money had been frequent. The carpet wrapped around the body, it is alleged, belonged to Wendling, and the police have found some of his clothing in the house.

The identification is thought to be complete. The janitor's wife and Richard B. Sweet, a plumber, who was pumping water from the cellar,

LORIMER DEFENDS HIMSELF.

Illinois Senator Makes Speech Denying Bribery in Legislature.

William Lorimer defended himself yesterday in the United States Senate for an investigation of the charges that his election was secured through the buying of votes in the Illinois General Assembly of which he was a member 12 years ago. By way of preface to this request he made a long and elaborate speech, and in vehement language declared before his colleagues that the charges against him were made by a "political conspiracy." Immediately after the reading of his formal plea Lorimer hurriedly put his affairs in order and caught a late afternoon train for Chicago.

The main points in the Senator's defense are as follows:

Echoes of Minority Leader Lee O'Neill's charge were under indictment for bribery.

Senator Lorimer, Governor Deneen, Attorney General Bundy, Charles A. Walker, Mr. Deneen's brother, and Lorimer's brother-in-law, Mr. Bell, are the outline of his newspaper "feud."

Declaration that Governor Deneen first suggested that Lorimer become a candidate for the Senate, and that he supported the latter's candidacy.

Assertion that Governor Deneen broke his promise to Lorimer and sought to "knife" the latter's friends, Senator Hopkins, Representative and Michael S. Funk.

Declaration that Governor Deneen possessed a "blacklist" of Republican legislators, intended to get control of the next Legislature.

Mr. Lorimer's request for an investigation was referred under the Senate rules on the committee on contingent expenses.

Raps American Reciprocity.

The National Chamber of Commerce has come out strongly against reciprocity with the United States. A resolution urges that reciprocity would endanger the British preference and Canadian industries.

President Tuttle of the Boston and Maine railroad has intimated that after on that line would be advanced on June 1 to those employes entitled to the current reductions of 1907. The increase is said to be equal to the reductions in wages paid to employes. It will not affect the season ticket rates.

Records now published show that the number of accidents under the Employers' liability and workmen's compensation act for the year ended last December, as compared with the preceding year, increased 31 per cent. This is due to the fact that the new system requires that the car shall not be started till all passengers are aboard. At the same time the receipts of the Chicago system have increased 15 per cent, and, allowing one-third of this for increased traffic, there still remains to the company a gain amounting to $1,000 a day.

Several more railroads have joined the procession of those which had granted better wage scales to employes, and the largest of the independent steel companies of Pittsburg have followed the example of the Steel corporation, as receivers by Judge Grosscup. The suit for a receivership was understood to be friendly, and the proceedings were taken as a protective measure to safeguard the interests of the creditors, the stock and bondholders and the city. The total funded debt of the Chicago Railways Company amounts to $70,810,034.50.

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co's weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"The aggregate payments through the banks for six days show a sharp decrease for the first time this year in comparison with the corresponding period of last year and the record of trading defaults continues unfavorable. Various contributing causes account for these adverse features in the business situation, but all are of a temporary nature, the basic conditions being sound in both commerce and finance.

"The increase in failures mainly applies to concerns affected by inadequate capital to meet the high cost of operation, and the bad weather, which limit spring sales, is responsible for the collapse in minor retail lines. The season is still unfavorable, however, and the general demand here and all the interior does not rise equal to expectation, but a few warm days will bring an adequate dissolution of stocks.

"Wholesale dealings for future delivery continue unusually with this time last year in dry goods, footwear, clothing suits and cloaks, and men's furnishings, the attendance of visiting buyers being good, although the usual uncertainty as to crop conditions causes some conservatism in commitments.

"Bank clearings, $257,819,466, are 15.6 per cent larger than at the corresponding week in 1909, and compare with those in 1907.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district numbered twenty-seven, as against 18 last week, and twenty-six in 1909 and twenty-three in 1908. Liabilities, over $5,000 each, numbered five, as against eight last week, eight in 1909 and eight in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Quiet still rules in trade and many lines of industry, while speculation, in the main, marks time, as a waiting stage, pending clearer views of the ultimate crop and price outcome. Relatively the most activity in the jobbing trade is centered in meeting current requirements, but business still lacks form. Retail trade continues quiet, at the best in staples and specialties, and is still classed as below expectations. Unseasonably cool weather is economically assigned as the cause for the backward trade, but there are other influences at work, and uncertainty as to prices holds back future commitments.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending May 12 were 200, as against 225 last week, 265 in the like week of 1909, 263 in 1908, and 142 in 1907 and 177 in 1906. Business failures in Canada for the week terminating on Thursday were 22, against 19 the week before, nineteen last week and twenty-two in the like week of last year.—Bradstreet's.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

RELIGION IS LIFE.

By Henry F. Cope.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help."—Psalms cxxi, 1.

It is not so strange that many should say they have no need for religion in their lives. Too many feel that religion is a sign of weakness than of strength, a yielding to superstitious fear or to popular custom or a sacrifice of the independent judgment in favor of a scheme which has been devised by the few for the deception of the many.

There is a good deal that goes under the name of religion that one ought to be ashamed of and to disown: there are types of piety that are but confessions of poverty of intellect, and there are forms of faith that are only evidences of cowardly and superstitious fear. Wherever religion means anything else than a man's manhood, darkening his life, then one does not acknowledge allegiance to it.

But there are so many limitations, so many portentous of religion simply because the thing itself is so essential to the life of man. So far from the religious life being one of lesser living, it is being good, although the sacrifice of powers, the denying of reason, the sacrifice of the will, the truth is that no life can be in any sense complete without its spirit and power.

If there is one thing of which a man might well be ashamed, it is the loss of the spirit and ideals of religion in his life. Those characteristics which mark the trained, developed, ordered, and balanced life are attributes of religion. There is no fullness of life, no mastery of the spirit, no consummate life apart from religion.

No man can be a gentleman by the process of memorizing books of etiquette any more than he can be a gentleman of health by reading books on medicine and hygiene. The life of courtesy and the life of vigor and health have their hidden sources. Every life that realizes fullness and beauty has its hidden sources in the religious spirit. This is the power and secret of the perfect life.

The world is full of half developed lives; men and women who are competent in spots; as strong in some things as you please, but weak in others, brilliant as to some of their ways and walking in darkness as to others; the man of strong practical vision, the philosopher loses practical sense, the scientist becomes a mechanical specialist, and all for the want of an aim that would preserve a balance and harmony in the life.

A man can so give his hand to business in his life, that business nothing but a hand; another can give his mind to the pursuit of knowledge, that he becomes only a brain carried around on stilts, with no other business than a stomach and no more. But religion gives to all this the spirit and aim which makes for a balance, that the function, subduing all to a purpose great enough to call all into service and to bring them to harmonious fulfillment.

Religion means living for the sake of life itself; it means finding a sufficient motive for life, it means the giving of view and the spirit in life that seeks things in the universe, helps one to find true values and to know the things that are worth living for, to set the time of life and its possibilities of life in right relations.

Who is religious? Who is living without this spirit? He who lives the right life known that he is living in harmony and tune with the eternal laws of the universe; he who lives for the good of others, and has learned to forget himself in all his goodness; the life and love of others is the heart of all he is; he who is certain that he is doing what God has made him to do, and has his wills of love.

The life of faith is living in loyalty to "the life" that is the higher values. This is the faith we need to preach, the faith that conquers the universe, faith in goodness, truth, honor and love and in a world saturated but and enamored, falsehood and cowardice. He only has the truth who dares to live by it, and he has, who lives in the freedom of his light.

THE MISTAKE OF THOMAS.

By Rev. J. B. Miller, D. D.

But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.—John xx: 24.

Thomas was not with the apostles when Jesus came to them in the evening of the resurrection. By his absence he missed seeing Jesus. He lost heart and was heavy with grief of joy. We have no record of what happened that week, but we know that they were wondrously glad. But think of Thomas all the week. He had missed seeing the risen Jesus. His sorrow was uncomforted.

There is a story of a colored man in the south who walked several miles to the church, and was late to attend. One week he was noticed to be with the congregation every morning through slush and rain. "Why do you go so far to church every morning?" the minister asked. "I should think you would stay at home when the weather is so bad." The old man took off his hat in the hall, and said with great reverence: "You see, we are praying in our church for a blessing on our souls, and dare stay away, even for one night, for that night to the night the blessing would come, and I would not get there I should miss it."

Thomas was not with them when Jesus came, and he missed the blessing. We can not tell what divine blessings may come to the worshipers in our church any Sunday. You may be in sorrow. The word that day may be a message of comfort. Those who hear it thank God and go away with a song; but you, sitting in your home, nursing your grief, get the message and go into another week unhelped, to walk all the way through gloom and shadow.

Many people yield to discouragement, and discouragement hurts their lives. Discouragement is a sort of mental and spiritual malaria. It poisons the blood. Much of certain forms of sickness is only discouragement darkening the sky, putting out the stars, quenching all joy and hope. It was discouragement which kept Thomas away from the meeting that night, and the mistake almost wrecked his spiritual life. If Jesus had not been so patient with him, giving him a second chance, a week later, Thomas would never have got back into the apostolic family. But if he had been present at the meeting, he would have seen Jesus when the doubt did, and his discouragement would have changed both faith and joy.

Let us miss no opportunity to be where Christ may be, to stand where he may pass by, to go where he may come. The mistake of Thomas was that he allowed discouragement, that he was not with the apostles that Christ was in their assemblies of seeing the Lord and of having his doubts and griefs swept away by the light of faith and hope. Many of us continually miss our opportunities of gladness and beauty. We miss our sorrows and turn not our faces toward the comfort of God. We may in our little dark rooms with the shutters closed, and do not out into the blessed sunlight. We live in the sorrow and fogs of the valley when we might be dwelling on the mountains of God. We neglect our opportunities of receiving divine revelations, and there we cannot believe. Let us open our hearts to the beauty and grace of God, and, however we may be the man. Then we need have no more doubts and fears, but shall all the beauty and the joy of Christ.

CHRIST, THE SEEKER.

By Rev. W. Robertson Nicol, D. D., LL. D.

"Christ is seeking us He sought in the flesh, and is seeking us now. We wanderer with unwarded love, with tenderness, with the wounds upon him through the long reach that comes to an end only when he finds. He is seeking us in our sins, and he is seeking as the shepherd seeks for his lost sheep, with eyes like the eyes of eagles, and the ears attent to catch the faintest sound. He is on our paths and years and years, that he may find at last. Many a time I go to sleep, and he is still at my door. Not in the most eloquent preacher, not the profoundest scholar or thinker, not the conspicuous leader of men, not the gifted, patient, resolute, prayerful seeker of souls, the best minister of Christ, is his seeker.

Most of us learn very soon the bitterness of disappointment, and we impute that retard our work. We are quickly made aware how little we dare step out of our ruts, or how little we can accomplish by mere power and energy. We are soon made to feel we are relegated, of the stubborn reality of life, to a place where we can do the gloom of such discoveries the temptation is to become listless, dark and cynical, and to lose all energies for all that. If we are we shall miss opportunities of doing good and of being blessed and helped ourselves. We need to be reminded of our ignorance, of the stubborn reality, lest we become listless, dark and cynical

FOUGHT OFF DEATH.

The Results Dr. Shrady Gravely Won For General Grant.

"You can see the conditions—General Grant is dying now", says Dr. Douglas when he broken home. The Rev. Dr. Newman had knelt by the bedside and, finding one of the many convulsive faints, began to pray.

"You see the preacher is busy, and the doctors ought to be busy, too," Dr. Shrady whispered grimly to his senior colleague.

"It would be a torment without doubt," signed the senior.

So there stood the medical code warding off incur from the dying man. The general must expire, perhaps because the initiative belonged to a man without any at the moment. Douglas must consent. Shrady must not be shocked. He turned again to the patient, leaned above him a moment and looked his pulse. He resisted the gray gentle in nervous fretfulness, instantly he turned again, stiffness resolve in his face, and the tool set to work where his colleague was. "I say, Douglas, something must be done. If this man dies here now, what can we say to the medical world? Every doctor on earth will want to know what and when were the last shots we fired. Shall we tell them that for ten minutes at the last, half an hour so far as I know, we stood idly and stared at a dying man?"

The old doctor stirred wearily and raised a hopeless and three-fore helpless face to the younger one also; there was in its lines a touch of wonder.

"Douglas, it would damn us both eternally, and it ought to. Perhaps you can afford it, but I can't, either as a physician or a human being. Something ought to be done, Douglas. It won't do, I tell you."

"Yes, but what would you do—do?" glowering pitylaugh at the family group and the slowly gasping man on the bed.

"Something, anything—a hypodermic of strychnine, perhaps."

"Oh, if you wish to try it—you."

It had been enough. The code was satisfied. Shrady was filling the little silver syringe with the drug taken from Dr. Douglas' medicine case. Something was being done. Members of the family turned to watch. The motions of its doing somehow inspired them, and the elder doctor, looking on, drew near. The left arm of the dying man was bared, the slender hollow needle found its way, and the potent brandy mingled with the blood.

The Rev. Dr. Newman had risen from his praying. Shrady was half kneeling to his place. Both by different means sought the same end. Keenly the younger doctor leaned to the patient. All his other senses had lent their powers to those of sight and hearing. The tiny instrument glowed between thumb and finger of his still extended hand.

There was a slight catch in the general's breath, followed by a half sigh. Swiftly a new look came into the face of each physician; swiftly the younger recalled the little syringe and hurried to the other side of the couch. Then through the sight arm spread the potent fluid, and again they waited the result—very soon a long, full, tortoring sigh; then a longer, stronger inspiration; then measured breathing and finally consciousness.

When General Grant lay dying that April morning the work on his memoirs, which netted his family one-half million dollars, was little more than half finished. The lived seventeen weeks afterward, finished his task and was ready to go—I heard Mark Twain Saturday Evening Post.

HIS DEATH SCENE.

A Stage Performance That Took Place Under Difficulties.

In an article on the theatrical in the Wide World Magazine U. H. Eaton describes a performance which took place under certain difficulties.

There had been an ice cream sociable just prior to our arrival in the hall, and no one had cleaned the stage. Mee had a new pair of broadcloth trousers and my scarlet tunic, also new. When a chief was fired he was to fall and before dying confess that he had killed old Fitzgerald.

The juvenile down front was not to speak till Mee had fallen and confessed. This he did well while Mee staggered about the stage looking for a clean place on which to fall. Mixed in with his lines he was unclear in marks to us in the wings some voice, while we were convulsed with laughter at his antics.

"I cannot die—oh, why didn't you have a grass mat?—I must not die—I shall ruin my breeches—I can't die—oh, this stage is dirtier than ice cream—I—must—not—die."

"Go ahead," retorted Mee, "and bring me a stool. I must—not—die. Well, if I must here goes—I'll rush to your tunic, Pence, and my breeches—oh, my!" (He went down on one knee, then on one elbow and finally lay full length. "The chief is dead—I confess—I—murdered—Old Fitzger"—A realistic shiver and all was over, including the rotting of our clothes, as applauded. The natives said it was the best and most lifelike death scene that had ever been played in that town."

Kept the King at Home

"For the past year we have kept the King of all laxatives—Dr. King's New Life Pills—in our home and they have proved a blessing to all our family," writes Paul Malhuka, of Buffalo, N. Y. Easy, but sure remedy for all Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. Only 25c at F. G. Hines & Co.

Traverse City Record: The Helmrich sawmill at High Island is now completed and is running in line shape, John Tager of Solon, who built it, returning to the city yesterday with J. B. Smedley. The mill is one of the best of its kind, having a capacity of 30,000 feet a day and reflects much credit upon Mr. Tager's ability. The mill is now working on the hardwood cut, birch, maple and oak, and will run continuously, lumbering being done on wheels in the summer. When running full time, about 30 men will be employed.

Traverse City Eagle: O. E. White, a member of the faculty of M. A. C., inspected the orchards and conducted an orchard demonstration on the farm of William Heinforth of Elmwood township Friday afternoon which was witnessed by twelve interested fruit growers. Mr. Heinforth has just had one thousand cherry trees set out, and Mr. White showed those present how the trees should be pruned and cared for to get the best results. After the cherry orchard was looked over the party next inspected the Heinforth apple orchard which is over forty five years old, and all of the trees were found in first class shape.

Petoskey News: A. E. Hass, of Walloon Lake, was in Petoskey Wednesday with plans showing what the G. R. & I. proposed to do there before the season opens at Walloon for the summer and work has been actively started. Mr. Hass has decided to the railroad company a large tract of land south of its present right of way in exchange for the old right of way, and in the center of this, a beautiful station, modeled after the plan of the station at Bay View, will be built, covering an area of 42x60 feet, and the new tracks will be built about it, at a distance of about two hundred feet south of the old right of way.

Traverse City Record: Miss Helen Stout, who has been spending a year in the Philippines, returned on the interurban last night, and will take up her work as librarian at the city library. Miss Stout left Manila six weeks ago, and spent four weeks on board the transport which brought her across the Pacific ocean. She had a delightful journey, and stated that she was sorry when the trip was ended. Accompanying her were her uncle and aunt, Colonel Strong and wife. Colonel Strong is stationed at Ft William McKinley, Manila. The party embarked April 11, on the transport Logan, touching at Nagasaki, and Honolulu. Miss Stout has many interesting things to say of her year spent in the Philippines, but is very glad to return to her American home. In June the Stout family will hold a family reunion in this city, her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. C. T. Stout, to come up from Key West, Fla. Her brother Peter, has accepted a position in the forestry department in the Philippines and will leave for the orient in August.

Teachers' Examination.

The regular examination for June will be held in the High School building in the City of Charlevoix on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 16-17-18, beginning at 8:30 standard time.

The questions in reading will be taken from "Reading in the Public Schools". This is one of the regular Reading Circle books and can be gotten of Row, Peterson & Co., Chicago or of A. J. Wright of Lansing.

Certificates of all grades will be issued from this examination.

Paper will be furnished for applicants.

Applicants who expect to have their papers forwarded to other commissioners will write with pen. Others may use pen or pencil.

Marvelous Discoveries

mark the wonderful progress of the age. Air flights on heavy machines, engrams without wires, terrible war inventions to kill men, and that wonder of wonders, Dr. King's New Life Pills, to save life when threatened by coughs, colds, lagrippe, asthma, croup, bronchitis, bronchitis, hay fever and whooping cough or lung trouble. For all bronchial affections it has no equal. It relieves instantly, and in the average case. James M. Hines of Asheville, N. C., R. R. No 4 writes it cured him of an obstinate cough after all other remedies failed. 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

Made the Guests Smile

A story is being told about a certain European sovereign who paid a visit to England two or three years ago. He attended a bridge party one afternoon, and, as darkness began to fall, his hostess said to him: "Sir, if you'll allow me I'll call for lights. I can't distinguish the king from the knave."

W. R. C. Report

On the 5th of May a thimble party was held at the home of Agnes M Jarvis, result a good time, a pile of carpet rags saved and money enough for Mother's day and Flag day.

On Saturday before Mother's day each old soldier was presented with a white carnation to wear Sunday, in memory of his mother and in honor of the American mothers.

May 12th, our regular meeting our committee who were appointed to confer with the business men reported an amount of money contributed by them to fully cover our expenses for flowers etc for which we wish to thank them.

On account of the rain the program for the 30th was omitted and only the G. A. R. and W. R. C. and a few others, headed by the band proceeded to the cemetery the boys in blue with the true chivalry, excused the ladies and did the honors themselves. After the work at cemetery all returned to the Odd Fellow's hall to enjoy the good dinner prepared by the committee and the band concert afterwards.

The absent boys were not forgotten, for a word of cheer with a basket of good things and a tiny flag was sent to each by their comrades.

Beaver Island News.

Mr and Mrs. John Floyd spent a few days at Charlevoix this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadfield and daughter returned from a visit to Manistee.

Rev. Father Norber was called to Petoskey Monday, returning Wednesday.

Mrs. Cornelius Gallagher is quite ill, and fears are entertained for her recovery.

J. C. Gallagher, of the Escanaba firm of merchants, is visiting relatives here this week.

Mrs. Margaret Allard and son Leo are visiting at the home of W. J. Gallagher.

David McCormick who has had a severe attack of pneumonia is improving somewhat.

Mrs. O. D. Gallagher, of Manitowoc, is visiting her brothers Wm and Robert Gibson for the summer.

Mrs Capt. Con. McCauley and son Frank, of Manitowoc, are visiting friends on the island for a few weeks.

Sister Aquinata, Superiores of the Domincan order at Grand Rapids visited the island for a few days last week.

Mrs. James Sheridan and sister, Mrs. Nellie Roddy, of Milwaukee arrived on Saturday last to be with her by the serious illness of their mother, Mrs. Mary Norton.

On Monday morning, of this week, a very pretty wedding took place, when Miss Stanie Gallagher and Mr. Neil Gallagher were united in marriage with Nuptial High Mass at 9 o'clock by Rev. Father Norber. The bride is the eldest daughter of Capt John C. Gallagher, and one of the island's most popular young ladies. The groom is a son of the late Dominick Gallagher, a prominent young mariner, who at present holds the position as mate of the steamer Manistee. The couple were attended by Mr. Emmet and Miss Elizabeth Gallagher, brother and sister of the bride. After the services the bridal party were driven to the residence of the bride's parents where a wedding breakfast was served, following which a reception was given in the evening from 5 to 8 o'clock, the popularity of the young couple was evidenced by the large throng that visited the church to witness the service.

—Prof. Mary Campbell and wife, arrived on Tuesday. Mr. Wood had purchased the boat with the intention of using it in connection with a summer resort at Bayne City. The craft was insured for nearly its full value and the policy was transferred to the new owner but an hour or two before the party started on its voyage.

—A Pontiac special says: During May the first month after the return of the open saloon, there were 108 arrests for drunkenness, of which 101 were from the city of Pontiac and seven from the county. There were but 14 arrests during the month just preceding the re-opening of the saloons. Out of the 108 arrests few, according to Justice North, are the old "soaks" who appeared regularly before him during the reign of the saloon two years ago. They compose an entirely new class, mostly "floaters," who have come at Pontiac to secure work, yet they were here during April in almost as great numbers as in May, and only 14 were arrested.

—We are constrained to believe that this semi annual house cleaning mania is largely a matter of habit, and should be included in the provisions of Mr. Hi-ess-field's much worn bequest. An injunction on the masculine portion of the human race it can only be compared to hydrophobia. Meals are served during the mid-day, furniture stacked up on the porch, women with towels wrapped about their heads—if these things are not conducive of insanity or parents then our reasoning powers have been clothed. To go home at night to sleep, eye, perchance to dream; there is the rub; when you are tempted, as Hamlet was, to end it all with a bare bodkin,—these are the things that the microbe brings to us, and still we go on and suffer without a protest, appeased only by the comforting words of the janitor and a consciousness of one's own personal rectitude. Only time will eliminate the evil, and we should be having them run at large.—Dowagiac Democrat.

—Regular Communication Charlevoix Lodge No. 293 F. & A. M., Tuesday evening June 21st; work on third degree. St. John's regular Thursday evening following; work on second degree. On Sunday, June 19th, the Lodge will attend divine service at the Episcopal church.

—Day City Times—Three Boyne City men, T. J. Wood, Geo. B. Thompson and Garrett Cole, and Chas. Sanback and Frank Fournier, of this city, had a narrow escape from death either by fire or drowning yesterday afternoon when the cruising launch Swan burned to the water's edge near the mouth of the river. The Swan was a very complete cruising launch, 37 feet long, and valued at about $2,500. Mr. Wood had purchased the boat with the intention of using it in connection with a summer resort at Boyne City. The craft was insured for nearly its full value and the policy was transferred to the new owner but an hour or two before the party started on its voyage.

Death of William H. Terry.

The sad intelligence reached here Friday of the death, in New York City, June 6th, of William H. Terry, formerly for several years the steward at the Inn, this city.

Mr. Terry came to the Inn as steward with his cousin, manager E. T. Osborn, and for eight years had charge of the cuisine of the big summer hotel. He was a natural born hotel man, his father having been for many years a prominent hotel manager. It is said that the steward in the heart, soul and brains of a great hotel. This was especially true of "Will" Terry. He had the true hotelmen temperament, and his popularity with guests was phenominal.

But his popularity was not confined to the limits of the hotel, for that only means merely cold, hard business policy, with sometimes a tinge of hypocricy. His popularity extended outward into the atmosphere that is breathed by rube commercial. Few men could boast of a greater number of loyal, admiring friends, wherever his lot was cast, and we never knew of man of more absolutely honorably purpose. He was a true type of the gentleman. He was but thirty-five years of age.

Since leaving here he had been steward of the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, and the Martha Washington, New York.

Capt. Lewis Guard Dead.

A telegram from Tacoma Saturday announced the death in that city of Capt. Lewis Guard, who went there lately from Idaho for a surgical operation for cancer of the stomach.

Capt. Guard was a resident of Charlevoix for about fifteen years, leaving here about five years ago for Pierre, Idaho, where, with his son, E. M. Guard, he was employed on a gold dredge. He came here with the steamer Joseph Gordon, which for several years run between Charlevoix and East Jordan.

He came here from Saginaw, and had master's licence for unlimited tonnage. He was also one of the few masters who held unlimited chief engineer's papers. He leaves a wife.

The Dog and the Man.

On the basis of ordinary estimate there is a difference between the dog and the man, but extraordinary conditions furnish exceptions, in favor of the dog.

The State board of health says that dogs must be muzzled in the interest of public safety. The city of Charlevoix has ratified the decree by creating an office with the imposing title of "dog warden" to go about with a double barreled short gun and shoot all dogs found without a muzzle. And the said shot gun can be seen almost any time of day when the weather is clear.

In any other civilized community, when the dog spasm seizes the authorities, except where dogs are discovered in the developed throes of hydrophobia, dogs without muzzles are caught and impounded awaiting developments. Here in Charlevoix, when a dog pays his dog license, if he don't hang himself with his displaced muzzle he is in danger of being shot by the municipal dog warden, without warning to his owners.

The writer of this has no dog. He had one not so long ago, before the spasm struck the town, but the dog poisoned in his work, to the sorrow of more than one human. He has no dog to poison now. Therefore there is safety in speaking plainly. There is a tender sentiment in the human heart for the faithful dog, and there is a corresponding contempt for the dog killer, whether the weapon be bamboo steak or a double-barreled shot gun.

Furthermore, we do not believe any city ordinance that prescribes this indiscriminate killing will hold good under the test of the law. But if it does, most men would prefer a garbage gathering or outhouse cleaning contract to the job with the double-barreled shot gun.

Lillie Succeeds Bird.

Colon C. Lillie, of Coopersville, president of the State Dairymen's association has been appointed by Gov. Warner to succeed the late Arthur C. Bird as state dairy and food commissioner.

Mr. Lillie some time ago announced his candidacy for lieutenant governor, N. P. Hull, of Diamondale, will be his deputy.

Mr. Lillie owns and lives on a dairy farm of several hundred acres near Coopersville, Ottawa county.

He was a member of the constitutional convention in 1907. He issued a statement today announcing his withdrawal as a candidate for the nomination for lieutenant governor. This leaves a clear field for Senator L. D. Dickinson, of Charlotte.

Mr. Hull was elected master of the State Grange to succeed George H. Horton in 1909. He was re-elected last winter. He owns a dairy farm at Diamondale, Ingham county, where he makes his home.

Boyne Journal: Friends of the late Judge Corbett, formerly of Boyne City, but later of Traverse City, where Mrs. Corbett still lives; are sorry to hear that after a long tedious stay in a hospital in San Francisco, Cal., caused by stepping on a nail followed by blood poisoning that Charles M. Corbett, the son of the Judge, had a foot amputated. After entering the U. of M. a few years ago his health failed and he was ordered to California and there this great misfortune over-took him.

Petoskey News: Capt. H. O. Hosmer and Miss Elsie Bathrick returned home Wednesday evening from Traverse City where they went to attend the annual meeting of the Pioneer association. Captain Hess was re-elected as one of the vice-presidents of the association, he being a charter member. Traverse City did herself proud for the occasion, both young and old made every effort to give pleasure to the visitors and to do them honor. Hon. Archibald Buttars, of Charlevoix, gave a splendid talk before the society on the opening day, where a big luncheon was served to seven hundred people. Automobiles of the city were at the complete disposal of all wearers of pioneer badges, and two bands entertained the people while on the street. At the opera house between speeches an orchestra made things merry, and in every way the day was filled with good fellowship, a general good time and much profit to the visitors and members of the Grand Traverse Pioneer society. The meeting will be held at Traverse City next year.

Merriam finished his plate and with the whip in his hand began:

"Yes, the war's over," he said, "war. There's less another since, but it's presumed to call that Spanish drive-parade and target practice war."

"Did you see much of it?" I asked.

"Saw it all, from the time the Rough Riders—pseudo and target practice war."

"Did you see much of it?" I asked.

"Saw it all, from the time the Rough Riders—pseudo and target practice war." Major Cosgrove called Merriam a fine fellow and a gentleman.

"I'll see you again before you go—have lunch somewhere at the Tuxedo Club." This is well, third-mounted."

Merriam's face set toward the Tuxedo. Cyril Pollock came from some of the expressions and walked briskly across the pavement in the direction of the office. A curious in the path brought him face to face with Merriam. Merriam walked stiff with his right hand. Pollock's face was flushed.

"Big Thomas officer titled his hat.

Cyril Pollock's eyes followed the hansom until it was out of sight.

"I don't know what you are, Mr. Merriam—I don't know what you do," he reflected. "But the smell of that horse reminds me of Spain."

"There's a little little Spain," Merriam said, as he gathered the whip from the socket and turned toward the city. "There's a little Spain everywhere and no war to speak of."

As the Thoroughbred tore him rapidly back to town, Sidney Merriam was trying to think of Zelda Dameron attractively. He's a little little fellow."

"HIS PEPPER VIM"

It is no longer very laudable for a young man to pay his way through college, and Merriam had done it by his wits and without caring to be indebted to any man for a dollar. He had entered his college days, he had been graduated, he had left it behind, he had matriculated in get his share of undergraduate wild oats and left the chaness. He had helped in the college library, he had been a little letter-press on the president's correspondence, he had written a little Sunday school stuff, he

The Fruit Growers

The regular meeting of the Charlevoix Co. Fruit Growers' association was held in VanDyke hall in Charlevoix on Tuesday, June 7.

The meeting was called to order at 2.00 p. m. and while the attendance was small, only about 25 being present, the meeting was one of the best held and those who were not present to hear Mr. Gibson missed a very valuable address on the subject of Fruit Raising.

Mr. Gibson reviewed the matter of preparation for planting very thoroughly and made it very clear that the successful orchardist must inform himself on many points such as soil preparation, location, proper planting, soil drainage, air drainage and many other points.

A crop of potatoes is a good thing for ground that is intended for orchard in order to get the ground in good condition for setting in it is unwise to grow farm crops after the orchard has been set.

Small fruits such as berries can be profitably raised between the rows while the orchard is growing but should be taken out when the trees begin to bear.

He says that it is best to avoid damp heavy soils as they produce a rank growth that is not good for fruit production.

A careful study of the effects of the frosts this year will convince any grower of the necessity of care in avoiding locations containing pockets where the air drainage is not good.

In some of the western states fire pots have been used to a good advantage in preventing frosts. This may in time be introduced in this locality and much of the land that is now too frosty for profitable culture may be made to grow good crops.

Mr. Gibson says that there is really very little land in Western Michigan that will not raise good fruits but advises growers not to attempt the use of setup hillsides where neither moisture of fertility can be retained.

Experts in the question of commercial varieties seem to agree that the Duchess, Wealthy, Wagner and McIntosh lied are good ones and that the growers who raise these varieties will make no mistake.

The matter of variety is an important factor and no grower should set an orchard of any kind of fruit without first informing himself as to the varieties that are best adapted both to the market and the community in which they are to be grown.

Mr. Gibson spoke at some length, regarding the buying and care of stock. Says to be sure that the nursery is reliable. Examine the stock before you order to several nurseries and ask for bids.

Insist on getting one year old trees. Two or three year old stock is very often the culls from the one year olds. Do not allow the nursery to substitute. Order trees supplied or protect with bonds low. Take care of the trees when you get them. Keep the roots damp. Prune severely. Cut injured parts of roots away. If trees seem dried bury entire tree in damp earth for two or three days. Do not expose roots to wind or sunshine even for a short time.

As to distance in planting the following was given.

Apples 40 feet except the smaller growing varieties which may be 30 feet. Peach and plum 16 feet. Pear 20 feet. Sweet cherry 25 feet and sour cherry 15 feet.

In pruning he advises very strongly against the "cow tail" method of the "tree butcher" that is so much in evidence in many of the orchards of Michigan. Branches thinned long and slender with a tuft of twigs left on the end. This method leaves but very little chance for fruit to start and places it to such a position on the tree that the winds will thrash it off before it can mature.

When a tree has been injured it should be pruned or cut back according to the injury.

When pruning one should remove all dead and broken limbs.

Branches which cross and injure each other, limbs which are too close together, those which have grown too strongly and tend to over balance the top of the tree, those of weak wood, slender branches should be taken out.

Trees must have sunlight and air and it is a good idea to take these things into consideration and look the tree over well and make up your mind. Dead limbs can be removed at any time but the early spring is the best time for general pruning.

The man who has an acre of orchard and is not sure that he knows just how it ought to be pruned can well afford to travel a goodly distance to attend an orchard demonstration where instruction in this work is given.

Full and detailed information on the subject of spraying can be obtained in consulting bulletin No. 51, Mar. 1910, issued by the M. A. C. Spray, spray, then spray again is the key to success.

One must study the history and characteristics of the insect and vegetable pests that are to be destroyed in order to successfully follow direction of any kind in this work.

Regarding cultivation Mr. Gibson says that in general a plow is out of place in an orchard. A spring harrow is good but care must be taken not to injure the roots. A disc harrow is the best orchard tool. Frequent and shallow cultivation is best. Do not allow the weeds to grow, whatever the method may be and do not cultivate after Aug. 15.

Mulching can be made to take the place of cultivating to a large extent but the mulch must be heavy enough to assist in retaining the moisture.

In conclusion Mr. Gibson certainly stated a fact when he said that the only sure way to succeed in this work was to give one's attention to it and that it was the height of folly to set fruit trees on a farm and then attempt to make a living by farming the ground thus occupied for the man who tries this will find that neither the farming nor the fruit will pay him.

Mr. Ward who is secretary of a new organization which has been formed and will be known as the straits of Mackinac Apple Belt Association gave a short talk outlining the aim of the organization. The aim of this association will be to secure a market for the fruits raised by the members by being able to guarantee to buyers that the products are properly graded and packed.

The members will be taught proper methods in packing and grading fruit and it is intended that when a label of the association is seen on a box of fruit that the buyer may know that he need not be afraid that the box will contain a row of good fruit on top and that the rest of it may be culls.

Mr. Ward will send literature to the members of the Co. association explaining the method and intention of the new organization.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Boyne City on Saturday, June 25. We hope that the growers will attend the meetings in the future more than they have those that have been held.

Respectfully submitted,
J. H. MILFORD, Secy.

Better Stay in Michigan

It seems that human nature is such that its 'Land O' Heart's Desire ever lies just beyond the hilltops. Opportunity is usually seen strongest and brightest through the haze of distance. Luck is ever beckoning from other fields than the one we occupy.

The irrigated land boom of the west is a case in point. A letter written to Colliers's Weekly from Spokane, Wash., tells how settlers are disillusioned by pictures of the idyllic views, bonaitful crops, etc., in certain districts. All that really exists usually is a desert and the beginning of a big ditch. But some of the farmers of the east allow themselves to be deceived by vivid tales and pictures emanating from the usual ration of the press agents than to their veracity, about the glowing future which awaits them in the west. A man frequently makes a pin-head down on the strength of statements in gorgeous prospectus and, after he has gone to his wilderness, has a natural hesitancy about returning to confess he was "stung," or find himself be ex-ed far from friends.

The west has opportunities. The irrigated land, when it is ready, is all right. But the expense of the original engineering work and the later charges for service means a drain on profits and the same farmer could usually have done better by looking about in his own state. For instance, western Michigan has wonderful fruit land which does not require artificial supply of water. Fertile as have and can still be made in this and adjoining districts by the same care required even on irrigated land. Other sections, formerly despised, have been proved excellent for specific purposes. In short, the chances for wealth and contentment frequently are at our own door instead of when we are looking for them far away.

A Woman's Great Idea.

Is how to make herself attractive. But, without health, it is hard for her to be happy in face, form or temper, weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood, give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth velvety skin, lovely complexion and health. Try them. 50c. at F. G. Hines & Co.

CHINESE FANMAKING.

The Industry Carried on in One District For Centuries.

The fanmaking industry in China was started centuries ago in the village of Tsungshow, at Amoew, about three miles from Newtow. It was formerly confined to women in various households, but for many years past every family in the village has been devoted to the work, all the members of the families being occupied in the manufacture. Only the open fan is manufactured in this district.

For the frame the split bamboo is repeatedly cried until each piece is sufficiently slender and flexible. There thereafter pieces of bamboo are arranged in a row, attached to each other by a thread passed crosswise through the middle. This thread is fastened to a semicircular strip of bamboo, giving the fan its shape. The ribs are then slightly heated and bent at the ends. The fan has now the peculiar and characteristic shell-like shape of the top. Very flimsy silk gauze is then pasted on the face and a kind of tissue-like paper on the back. Lastly the handle is attached the border of the fan is black varnished and the gauze is coated with a chalk and water mixture. The handles are made of bamboo, various kinds of hard wood, bone and ivory. The hand painting on the fans is cleverly done, in some instances being works of art.—Exchange.

A FAITHFUL FRIEND.

The Secret of His Loyalty to the Condemned Man.

A negro was executed in a prison not many miles' journey from the city not long ago, says the Philadelphia Times. For several months prior to his departure he had been visited by a faithful friend who brought him chicken, possum, sweet potatoes, cigars and other things.

The bearer of these good things seemed to be under some trouble. It was suspected that he had some intimate knowledge of the crime for which the other was to be executed. The secret came to light on the morning of the execution, when one of the guards overheard this conversation between the two men:

"Now, Jim, didn't I done do everything I could for you?"

"Yes, Bill, you has sho' fulfilled all yoh yo' obligation an' squared yourself for dem crap games, an' I sho' is tickled to yo."

"And, Jim, does yo' swear that yo' won't come and ha'nt me after yo' done gone an' been hanged?"

"No, Bill; yo' has sho' acted like a nigh an' a troubler, an' I ain't low dough mean 'nuf to ha'nt yo' now, but if yo' hadn't brung me dem things when I told yo' I sho' would ha' ha'nted yo' every night of yo' life, an' don't yo' forget it."

Yellow Fever.

"Every one knows that when a man has called his yellow fever and recovers he never contracts the disease again, no matter how much he exposes himself to infection," said Dr. Fred S. Williams of Havana. "This ability to resist the subsequent attacks, which cause the malady is called immunity, and in tropical countries where yellow jack is always present it is turned to profit in various ways.

"Thus during the Spanish-American war regiments of prisoners were enlisted in the units for service in the fever ridden country about Santiago. Again, during an epidemic in New Orleans many persons purposely exposed themselves to infection because the disease prevailed in a very mild form, and they concluded that if they were infected they would quickly recover and would be immune during severer epidemics in the future."—Washington Herald.

The Poppy Bee.

The poppy bee is the artist of the honey makers, though she builds her nest in a hole in the ground, burrowing down about three inches. At the bottom she makes a large hole and lines it generously with the scarlet petals of the red poppy. She cuts and fits the gorgeous tapestry perfectly, then partly fills the cell with honey, lays an egg, folds down the red blossoms and covers the hole so that it cannot be observed. Saving the baby she cares for herself in the cozy nest.

Born to Starve.

Many years ago an American naturalist, Dana, discovered on the surface of the sea a little animal of so slight a character that he named it "monoritha." It is a small crustacean akin to the cyclops so common in ponds. But, while the latter are furnished with all that is necessary to capture and digest their food, the monoritha has neither apparatus for seizing prey nor any digestive tube. It is richly provided with muscles, nervous system and organs of sense; it lacks only what is necessary to prolong life by alimentation. The monoritha is doomed, therefore, to natural death.—Exchange.

Down and Up.

"That remedy," said a senator of a proposed piece of legislation, "is as impracticable as little George Washington's George Washington, you know, when his father spoke to him about the cherry tree said:

"Yes, father; I did chop down the tree, but I can easily make the evil good:

"'How so, my boy? the father asked.

"'Why, said George, 'if I chopped it down can't I chop it up?'"—Los Angeles Times.

Poor Tinsyra!

"I have just made a valuable discovery," announced Tinsyra.

"What is it?" asked Twigga.

"I'm a fool."

"Ah, the joke is on your friends."

"How is that?"

"You know something they don't think you know."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

THE MUSKRAT.

More People Trap This Little Animal Than Any Other.

In America mostly human people trap the muskrat, or muskrat, every year. More people trap this little animal than any other. It is claimed that the greatest number of skins are taken in Minnesota and the Red River district. Most of the pelts are exported.

The skins are very uniform in color, usually a dark brown. However, those of Alaska and the Northwestern districts are very light in color. The black pelts or those which are nearly so come from the southern section, although occasionally a few are found in other localities.

The muskrat is very prolific. In some latitudes says the New York Sun three litters of young in a summer and from three to five young in each litter. The animals are nocturnal in their habits, but are often seen during the day. Muskrats live in holes in the banks in sluggish streams, lakes and marshes. In appearance it is very much like the beaver, and its habits are very similar.

The muskrats that inhabit the ponds, marshes and shallow lakes build their houses of grass, weeds, etc., and plaster them together with mud. The house is built in the shape of a dome and is usually several feet above the water. The compound that lives along the streams usually has its home in the banks of them. The entrance to this den is almost always towards the water, but as the burrows range upward the dens are never filled with water except in times of freshets.

Color Blinders.

One thing is definitely shown by the tests that have been made for color blindness in various races—an race, however primitive, has been discovered in which red-green blindness was the universal or general condition, and this is a fact of some interest in connection with the physiology of color vision, for it seems probable that red-green blindness since it is not by any means a diseased condition must be a reversion to a more primitive state of the color sense. If this is so we need not even resort to the primitive theory of the evolution of the color sense. The development of a color sense analogous to the condition in which we have it was probably a prehuman achievement.—Professor H. S. Woodworth in Science.

How Inspiration Works.

"This sea poem of yours fairly smacks of the salt gale. It is palpably the result of genuine inspiration. You evidently planned it while upon the bounding main."

ABOUT MARKETS.

Railroads May Help the Farmer if They Will Co-operate.

Some Instances Where Such Co-operation Has Been Beneficial—The "Agricultural Specials" and the Railroad Experiment Farms Quoted—The Partial Problem a Large One.

The following article is an extract from an address by Mr. Frost of the Cornell college of agriculture, which carries a thought both timely and important:

The railroad through its many branches has an opportunity to obtain first hand information at all the important markets. Freight agents are personally acquainted with market conditions They know that New York is demanding baled hay at a certain time of the year. They know when New York has enough baled hay and when the surplus should be shipped to Philadelphia, where there is a strong demand. They know that Boston's market structure is short and that Philadelphia is long. The farmer as a class does not possess this information. Freight agents are able to sell the psychological moment that a market is supplied with a certain commodity. Within a single day's time prices may drop 20 per cent. The farmer cannot get this information to the extent that he is represented before after carload of valuable produce being dispatched rather, all of which must be sold at a loss. For instance, Jefferson county found in New York city a free market for hay. One fall carload after carload was sent down. The market soon nearly exceeded the demand, but the cars still continued to pour in until the yards were lined for miles with cars of baled hay for which there was no sale. The farmers of Jefferson county did not know the market conditions in New York city.

The railroads have been looking at these facts and considering them. They have come to realize that increased profits from proper knowledge of market facilities mean increased working capital for the farmer. Increased capital for the farmer means greater crops. Greater crops mean increased transports for the railroad. Their psychology, while eminently selfish at the best, nevertheless coincides with that of the farmer. Both railroad and farmer are thus working for the same end.

The railroads are willing to co-operate with the farmer in every way. This is typically illustrated by the "agricultural specials," run under the direction of the New York Central, the Erie and the Lehigh. The New York Central at the present time is contemplating the formation of another department, the function of which is the maintenance of experimental farms along the lines of the New York Central to demonstrate advanced methods of farming. The railroads have come to realize that their best interests lie in the soil by aside his ancient prejudices and suspicions of the railroad and that he place confidence in their sincerity and benefit by their advice and information.

A GRANGE VICTORY.

Massachusetts Did Not Remove the Protective Law on Birds.

The National Stockman remarks that the most distinct victory in legislation which the granges of Massachusetts have ever accomplished was seen in the defeat of House Bill No. 200, which proposed to let down the bars on the present excellent bird law of Massachusetts and permit spring shooting of seven different bird species.

This bill had tremendous backing, including practically all the sporting interests of the state, and it looked as if there was every indication that it would win out, especially when the legislative committee on fisheries and game reported unanimously in its favor. But toward the last the friends of the birds throughout the state became aroused, and many every subordinate and Pomona grange in Massachusetts took action in behalf of the birds. Letters by the thousands were written to the representatives in the statehouse, while the state was fairly flooded with literature.

Even the discussion of the debate it was a general topic of conversation around the statehouse that grange influence on legislation was to be given a good test that day in view of the active position the Order had taken in the matter. The debate lasted nearly all day and was very spirited, resulting in a victory for the birds by a roll call vote of 122 to 85 and the complete defeat of the fisheries and game committee.

State Master Charles M. Gardner was one of the most vigorous defenders of the birds and spoke on the floor very earnestly against any letting down of the present protective law in behalf of the sporting interests to agricultural success and progress.

Free Seeds Not Wanted.

Pomona and subordinate granges in Maine are placing themselves squarely on record against the humbug of free seed delivery and in favor of the parcels post. Whatever merit there has been in the free seeds, the day has gone for the farmers to use these relics of a postmaster age when free seeds are so easily and cheaply obtained. If experimental work is desired, then the whole system should be revised. As the Patrons of Androscoggin and Sagadehoc say, "Cut out the free seeds and give us the parcels post;" and the city will go up until the parcels post is granted.

The grange is growing finely.

WARNS AGAINST SOCIALISM.

Taft Says Institution of Private Property Is Growing Issue.

Socialism was proclaimed by President Taft the other day as the greatest and most difficult problem that ever faced the United States, and the institution of private property was heralded as the frame of the growing issue. Without entering into any discussion of the tenets and principles of socialism, the President declared that the Republican party has demonstrated its capacity for dealing with other great issues wisely and effectively and that the country must soon determine whether the same party is to be intrusted with the solution of the new big problem.

President Taft's speech was delivered in Jackson at the unveiling of a bronze tablet in commemoration of the birth of the Republican party "under the oaks" in 1854, and by many of his hearers his utterances were construed as framing a positive issue for the next presidential campaign.

One passing reference to the Sherman anti-trust law by the chief executive in a declaration that unless individuals are willing to subordinate themselves to the will of the party majority the result would be a mob, was greeted by that event," he said. "The Lord only knows what your government would be and what it would accomplish."

Earlier in the day at Monroe, Mich., President Taft paid tribute to the memory of Major General George A. Custer, calling his address at the unveiling of a bronze equestrian statue of the civil war veteran and martyr of the Little Big Horn.

ARBITRATION BOARD DECISION

Wage Is Boosted for 27,000 Men on Fifty-two Roads.

Twenty-seven thousand employes on fifty-one railroads operating west, southwest and southwest of Chicago will receive a wage increase aggregating $2,000,000 a year as a result of a decision given by the arbitration board chosen some time ago to pass upon the grievances of the brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for an increase in pay.

The award of the arbitrators means an increase in wages all along the line, ranging between 10 and 12 per cent. The arguments of representatives of the railroad employes that the increased cost of living at the present time, justified a boost in pay were sustained by the arbitral board, which held that an increase of 15 cents an hour in the pay of firemen and men who are paid on the basis of thirty-mile run and that a similar increase should be paid to the men whose compensation is figured on the "hundred mile schedule.

It was the conclusion of the arbitrators that this advance should be given solely because the cost of living has advanced at a very substantial rate. In addition, a number of increases were granted where it was shown that wage work was demanded.

U. S. CLAIMS $,000,000 ACRES.

Land Worth $20,000,000 May Be Recovered in Oregon.

The grant of 2,000,000 acres to the Oregon and California Railroad Company in 1866 is attacked by a bill filed in Portland, Ore., by H. D. Tyson, special assistant of the attorney general. The bill answers a demurrer by the Southern Pacific Railroad, successor to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to the Government's complaint. Among the other points urged were alleged lack of jurisdiction and loss of right by laches of time. The relief prayed for is the return to the public domain of about 2,000,000 acres of land still held by the company. These lands are estimated to be worth between $15,000,000 and $50,000,000.

COURT STOPS RAISE IN FREIGHT RATES

Twenty-five Western Roads Are Restrained from Enforcing the New Tariff.

PLEA CITES UNLAWFUL COMBINE

Action Is Begun by Attorney General Wickersham on Behalf of Federal Government.

Twenty-five Western railroads were temporarily restrained by United States District Judge David P. Dyer in Hannibal, Mo., from enforcing or making a general advance in interstate freight rates. The injunction was granted on a petition filed by the United States government on the allegations that the advance is rates were fixed by the defendants by agreement, without competition and in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

The petition was filed in the United States Circuit Court at St. Louis and was brought to Hannibal to present to Judge Dyer it states that unless such a restraining order be issued the advances will benefit effective at once, to the grave harm and injury of the people of the United States.

The petition was presented by Edwin C. Crossley of Washington, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Frederick N. Judson of St. Louis, acting as special counsel. It was signed by George W. Wickersham, Attorney General, William S. Kenyon, Assistant Attorney General, and Charles A. Boots, United States District Attorney.

Missouri Pacific Railway.
Chicago and Northwestern Railway.
Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.
Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway.
Wabash Railroad.
Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway.
Chicago and Alton Railroad.
Kansas, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad.
Chicago Great Western Railway.
Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway.
St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad.
San Francisco Railroad.
Quincy, Omaha and Kansas City Railroad.

Illinois Central Railroad.
Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis Railroad Company of Illinois.
Chicago, Milwaukee and Gary Railroad.
Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railroad.
Kansas City Southern Railroad.
Chicago, Indiana and Southern Railroad.

Western Trunk Line committee.

Representatives of roads in the West by the successful invocation of the Sherman anti-trust law to enjoin the lines west of Chicago from putting into effect rate increases in effect the freight rate controversy was given an unexpected turn later. While the injunction was thrown into consternation by the application of a law from which they had considered themselves immune, were preparing to restore their rates and to defend themselves against charges of illegal combination, the eastern roads were filing suit at Washington with the Interstate Commerce Commission. These tariffs advanced commodity rates throughout the territory north of the Ohio River east of the Mississippi. This move will actively extend the fight to every section between Missouri River and the Atlantic seaboard and is expected to make the Harriman lines defendants in a similar proceeding.

SUES HARRY THURSTON PECK

SENATE PASSES RAILROAD BILL

Administration's Measure Is Carried, 50 to 12, at Night Session.

The administration's railroad bill was passed by the Senate of the United States the other night at 10 o'clock by a vote of 50 to 12. The negative votes were cast by Democrats as follows: Bailey, Fletcher, Frazier, Hughes, Money, Newlands, Perry, Purcell, Rayner, Shively, Smith of Maryland and Smith of South Carolina.

After the vote was announced Mr. Beveridge moved the unanimous bill be made the unlimited business. Mr. Nelson, chairman of the Public Lands Committee, contended the public land withdrawal bill, an administration conservation measure, should have precedence. This precipitated a contest, the Democrats lining up with Mr. Beveridge. Finally, with the legislative motion pending, the Senate adjourned.

The railroad bill, that now goes to conference, was reported to the Senate Feb. 25. The debate began March 15, when Mr. Clemmins commenced his four days' speech against the measure. It was aimed, since then in his interest continuously before the Senatorial twelve weeks. The original Hepburn law, of which this is amendatory, was passed in the Senate May 18, 1906.

Many speeches were delivered, in the main brief and explanatory of the position taken by Senators. When it became apparent that the final vote would be reached, several Senators who have fought vigorously for amendments, asserted that, while the bill was not all they desired, it was a step in the right direction and would receive their support. Such statements were made by Insurgent Republicans and Democrats. These speakers were La Follette, Bulkley, Clay, Paynter, Simmons and Gore. Newlands and Bacon spoke at length in opposition.

W. F. Schilling, editor of the Minnesota Daily Star, has filed his card as a candidate for nomination on the Republican ticket.

In the recent Ohio Republican primaries eleven of the twenty-one successful candidates for delegates to the convention declared themselves against the re-election of Speaker Cannon, while only two declared noncommittal, and one, Keifer, is openly for Cannon.

"Elder" William J. Bryan, who retired from New York to a detached charge in the Presbyterian Ecumenical Council at Edinburgh, said in his sermon that he was done so him off that he was overtissed but the country would choose a democratic Congress this year. He said if that happened there would record the next President would be a Democrat. He spoke of Folk and Gaynor as possible candidates, but said there were plenty of men who could do the same. Just sailed Senator Root, who goes to take part in the Newfoundland memorial celebration, beginning June 1, in England.

The National Congress of the Socialist party which met in Chicago to revise the platform and program, voted after a long discussion that the party is opposed to the variation of any immigrants on account of race or nationality, and declared that the party be kept as a free asylum for persecuted foreigners. It was decided that it favors all measures tending to improve the industrial condition of laborers or strike-breakers. This was the decision of the committee, headed by Delegate Hillquit of New York. The report of the committee on the Negro class was left open, and an enlarged committee was appointed to study the question and report at the national convention two years hence. The convention took a positive position against the commission form of city government.

Senator Clapp, Committee on, with Senator Pollivier, is working on the progressive campaign in Iowa, making little comment on the situation in Washington. He concedes the railroad bill, which he thinks should be greatly amended.

"The liquor interests are responsible for the forcing of the county option question into the arena of politics, and they have only themselves to blame for the results that shall follow the growing indignation against the impudence, the arrogance and the servilities of the liquor interests" declare; William J. Bryan in a recent address at Nebraska City.

C. H. TREAT FAILS DEAD.

Former Treasurer of Nation Stricken at Long Beach.

Charles Henry Treat, treasurer of the United States under Presidents Roosevelt, died of apoplexy in his apartment at the Hotel Victoria in New York. He was stricken an hour before death, and did not regain consciousness. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Mr. Treat was born in Frankfort, Me., about sixty-eight years ago. Among his ancestors were Robert Treat Paine, a signer of the declaration of Independence, and Robert Treat, a colonial governor of Connecticut. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1865, and at once entered business with his father and brothers, who operated a fleet of sailing ships engaged in the import and export trade.

In 1885 he was Delaware's delegate at-large to the Republican convention in Chicago and was credited with nullifying the Delaware delegation for Benjamin Harrison. Soon after McKinley's election he was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the Wall street district, serving during the Spanish-American war.

Cuba Tariffs Raising Status.

Representations that have been made recently by John B. Jenkins, the American Consul at Havana, to the State Department, for permission to raise the status, President Taft of Cuba declares that he would be delighted to accord such permission and to facilitate in every way the work of the American engineers.

Held for Murder in War Was Unaware Of Hostilities.

Unaware that a fellow countryman with whom he fought in Watertown, N. Y., had died of his injuries, Kosmo Vasilic, a Montenegrin, was arrested in Canton, Ohio at the request of the Watertown authorities on the charge of murder.

LOOKING HOMEWARD.

By Rev. James E. Kelly, D.D.

"We are conscious, I say, of a willing rather to be absent from the body, and do to depart, with the Lord."—II. Cor., V.8.

That noble spirit, Lamennais, who tasted the bitterness of exile from his native land, comforted himself by saying: "Our homeland is not here below; man vainly seeks it here; that which he takes for it is only a lodging for the night."

The chiefest home of humanity is not here. We are all wanderers. Our rest home is elsewhere. This is not our place of abode. All feels unsatisfactorily or lonely, are travelers, waiting for a home. Our hearts long for what not by sight, but by faith. Our dearest treasures are laid up in heaven. Our hopes, our harvests, our hearts are there. "They that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country." They assert a better country that is heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for He hath prepared for them a city."

Our adversities are the summary incidents of a journey. All earth's joys are the shifting scenes of a long march of a disgruntled pilgrim. This world is the scene of vicissitudes, of storms, of wants and sufferings. Our heart-breaks and trade loneliness. There is a peaceful and permanent home awaiting us. Heaven's city that hath foundations, a settled habitation, a haven after life's tempestuous voyage, a refuge from all the sorrows of life. Contemplate this, and it will make us more contented in our painful mystery; a land of love and eternal reunion, where there is no death, where the heart is satisfied, a realm where we shall be reunited with our ancient folk and dear ones of our own day. There we shall see as we are seen, against life last week, six in 1909 and five in 1908.

NEW YORK

Trade activity was irregular, varying somewhat with the sections or lines traversed, but generally speaking the prevailing feature. In the northern half of the country unseasonable weather has been a bar to expansion in retail trade, which at many cities is disappointing. In southern, at least centers recorder business is light, and delivery service is in some instances restricted. Probably the best reports as to trade come from the Northwest and the Pacific coast.

Business failures for the week ending with June 3 in the United States were 160, against 200 last week, 194 in the first week of 1910, 225 in 1909, 155 in 1907 and 162 in 1906.

Business failures in Canada for the week number eighteen, which compare with fifteen for last week and nineteen in the like week of 1909.

CHICAGO.

The Weekly Review of Chicago Trade, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says:

Despite the lowest weekly aggregate of payments through the banks, the commercial situation is quite real mining troubles and other developments disturbing sentiment, the business position is easier by declining speculation in securities and grain, a better tone in the latter, improving weather and increasing cost of foodstuffs. The failure record also shows a good comparative exhibit and there is now a more adequate reduction of merchandise stocks in the leading industries in this distrct, perhaps, our harvests, our hearts are there. "They that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country." They assert a better country that is heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for He hath prepared for them a city."

Our adversities are the summary incidents of a journey. All earth's joys are the shifting scenes of a long march of a disgruntled pilgrim. This world is the scene of vicissitudes, of storms, of wants and sufferings. Our heart-breaks and trade loneliness. There is a peaceful and permanent home awaiting us. Heaven's city that hath foundations, a settled habitation, a haven after life's tempestuous voyage, a refuge from all the sorrows of life. Contemplate this, and it will make us more contented in our painful mystery; a land of love and eternal reunion, where there is no death, where the heart is satisfied, a realm where we shall be reunited with our ancient folk and dear ones of our own day. There we shall see as we are seen. There light intellectual is full-charged with love, there love is full-charged with gladness—gladness the Saviour bring to every sorrowing heart. That is the goal of all our belongings Archbishop Leighton used to say that if he were a fellow-citizen of the heavenly Jerusalem, he should have been well content if the Deity should bring him from thence, as I am now of little use on the earth." It is the grumpy of ruin, not his fittleness, that inspires him with desire for larger room and the fullest play for his powers and faculties.

There is a rapid sentimentalism that dreams of heaven while neglecting the everyday tasks and sentiments of life that now is. Such an attitude is unworthy. But the longing for heaven on the part of earnest souls is sane and healthy. It is a work of relationship to the Infinite; it is a token that the soul has really been born from above; it is a aspiration for perfection. The future life is ampler than the present; it has more room for energy and enterprise. In that realm of light and gladness are the great spirits of our race, and they have employments congenial to their powers. They have not been retired, but promoted. Human nature is to influence all worlds. A Vital Christianity will always emphasize the future life. Men's souls grow great and their thoughts profound by dwelling on the once of the eternal realities of God and human destiny. Christ is the living bond between both worlds. The love that moves the sun and all the stars is the rapture and the satisfaction of the spirits of just men made perfect and of the festal assembly of the angels.

In the fair mansions of the heavenly home are many unutterably dear, from whom we parted with agony. What joy it will be meet them again! The more aimid we be lonely. The armies of the saints are triumphantly marching onward and homeward to that city whose light is not that of sun or moon, but the glory of the Lord of God. In the quiet of the evening shadows, when all feels safe, all life's storms we catch strains of celestial harmony.

THE THRILL OF HOPE.

By Rev. M. Elvet Lewis.

We have a thousand devices for trying to dazzle at ease in life. We meet it with excuses, we hide our faces from its cruel results, we make ourselves blind to its sins against God and, unhappily, we can astutely deceive ourselves at last. Now, in the trouble that comes with sin, as part of it, there is as much mercy as judgment, there is as much wisdom as pain. The physical pain is a protest against injury to our physical frame, and we prefer to avail clearer views of spiritual things, of spiritual peace and power to avail clearer views of spiritual things, of spiritual peace and power to avoid clearer views of spiritual things, of spiritual peace and power to avoid clearer views of spiritual things, of spiritual peace and power to avoid

STEALING THE STYLES

London Millinery Pirates and Their Methods.

TRICKS OF SMART WOMEN.

Use Their Position to Get a Look at the Advance Models and Then Sell Their Information in Berlin—One Case Where There Was a Slip.

The object of the modern millinery pirate is by some means to get hold of the new fashions well in advance of the coming season, and, however jealously guarded the new models are, she—most pirates are women—very often succeeds, and the real owner has the mortification of seeing her novelty anticipated by some firm of infinitely less importance than his own.

Last spring the proprietor of one of the smartest shops in the West end of London noticed a lady walking in the park attired in a dress almost an exact copy of a brand new model of his own, a model which not half a dozen people had seen besides its inventor and himself. The design had been registered, but the copy was so small, elastic allowed to skirt clear of legal difficulties.

A most searching inquiry revealed the fact that the culprit was a lady who had always been considered one of the firm's smartest and best customers.

Her birth and position were less impeachable than the state of her finances, and she had accepted the offer of a Berlin firm to dress her on condition that she supplied it with the very latest creations that found their way from Paris to London.

Having the entree of the innermost sanctum of the London firm referred to she had taken advantage of the confidence in her to draw its designs from memory and post them to Berlin.

The London firm had no legal redy whatever. All it could do was when the autumn styles were one and the lady called again to inform her that her patronage was no longer desired.

Another lady detected in a similar trick by the manager of a legend street firm was very cleverly punished. Ten her next visit she was received with the same cordiality as ever and taken into the showroom, where the latest models were usually displayed.

She never suspected until too late that the room had been specially arranged for her reception. The models exhibited were anything but new, and the too smart firm which employed her was just to vent exposure to worn up dresses from patterns resurrected from those of years before which proved absolutely unsalable.

It is by no means exclusively for the purpose of stealing other people's original designs that "pinching" firms employ the services of well dressed recruits.

Last summer a lady arrived at a smart seaside hotel, the sort of place where people stay for the whole season. She was pretty, smart and perfectly turned out—so well dressed, in fact, that other women filled with envy did their best to find out who was her dressmaker.

But, though she frequently boasted that her people were perfect treasures and that her bills amounted to next to nothing, she steadfastly refused to disclose the name.

One day, however, she accidentally dropped an envelope inclosing a bill from the supposedly dressmaker, a bill artfully "faked" so as to show prices of startling cheapness. Within a week the firm that employed this clever lady welcomed a dozen new customers.

Hotels, too, find the lady most useful. Last autumn a very pretty girl arrived at a certain Scotch health resort establishment with her mother. She was smart, well dressed, a clever musician—just the sort of girl to be thoroughly popular with both sexes. At once she became the center of a large coterie of admirers.

Then after a few days her vivacious expression gave place to a look of unutterable horror—the look of a hunted plant. It's no doubt dull," she said over and over again, "but I'm sure everyone has announced that she could not endure it an hour longer. She was going."

"Where?" was the question.

"Back to Bilbiboodle," was the decided answer. "It may be a little dearer, but you get your money's worth there. One has such a good time there!"

Next day she left, and before the week was out a large proportion of her friends had followed her—London Grand Magazine.

A Fine Mixup.

"What's the matter?" inquired the proprietor of the zoo.

"This advertisement of 'our delicious canned meats from the best cannibals' evidence in her to draw its designs from memory and post them to Berlin.

"Why, Mr. Halcomb over there," Zelda remarked, quietly, "is a very distinguished looking man." Hard you think he sings divinely?" she added, as Mr. Morris confided, with a provoking air of gravity.

"I am sure he was a pupil Henkel in some former incarnation," said the young man, seriously.

"That was just what I was thinking," said Zelda, with a little laugh of relief. "Shall we go on and see what we can find?"

"I'm glad then, that we can agree about something, even when we're both absolutely wrong."

"I'm sorry to think that I can be wrong," said Zelda. And at last he had her battery for her strongest and most telling. I shall have to speak to my friends about it, I think.

"Any interest you may take in me will be wasted on them."

Zelda had crossed the room, giving Mr. Morris a smile and a glance that meant a long conversation on the way, and he followed meekly.

"Just another Miss Dameron," he thought, as he followed her.

"Mr. Leighton is crazy about your singing, Zelda," said Mr. Morris, for a chance to enlighten her. "But he's a bachelor and a Yankee. Water boil in him." And she smote her hand on the divan in a way that forced him through his words in a great hurry.

"Will kind of a pill, is that?" I say, Mr. Morris," said Zelda, with a little gesture of the fan and a little pout of disappointment. "Mr. Leighton's a dear, you know, in his manner, and when Mr. Halcomb's away I'm always glad to have him with me." Zelda's voice was low and pleasant, and when Mr. Halcomb's name was mentioned it was as when they threw a stone into a pool, and the ripples merrily ran in. I tell you I've had my eye on that man ever since I first knew."

"Why?"

"Why, I remember your flirtations with the girls that walked on table at the college commencement, and he was a very cheering way with them."

"Yes," said Zelda, "I remember really very fine groups of young people. He was appreciative, too, and I think he made us be talked. His idea is to assign a certain number of consecutive young people of the city, who assume a certain degree of social and diligent pursuit of the personal and social amusement." Zelda did parody—admired Leighton, but the Bob-Lo's self-satisfaction irritated him.

"The dance had been drifted apart, and the time for the first time Morris had heard the principle sing. He had passed the chaperon under his arm, Mrs. Carr had insisted, and when he turned into the hall he was sorry that it had not been difficult to comply. She could now come and go.

When the last notes died away, Halcomb stood at the piano's side and began the unswerving song. Halcomb, tall, slender, with a face of refining strain upon him discomfiting. Zelda, was standing at the piano, and this as he began to sing with fervor and a voice of a quality that was quintessence. As he neared the end, he saw Zelda, and thought that he did that could the first half of the opera, Zelda was at the piano, and took them, standing on her own with a fine lack of the Wagner. Halcomb and joined the singer without a break while the directors of the concert, with strange confusions as he struck the last high note, bowed to the room which they gained and held perfectly. "Fine—fine—perfectly fine," was the judgment.

"It simply can't fail!" declared Mrs. Carr to Leighton. "Miss Dameron could carry it alone, if anybody else should break down."

"That is altogether true," said Morris. He was glaring at Halcomb, whom he had known as a member of the cast was bound to be.

CHAPTER IV

"Dandyfoot Dick" was presented, with no decorations and slips than usually incident to amateur performances, to the audience that tested the capacity of the Auditorium. It was a great deal better than Mrs. Carr, as she had confidently talked, it was sobbing fast and made a living thing of it. Mr. Morris was strong leading the Dick, and grouped for all.

"Let us hurry to see Zee and thus at-tase," said Halcomb to his sister, as Zelda, in the mad rush of greeting for Cadmus that was to follow the play, a few and some lady friends, who had formed a little college by themselves, Zelda was one of them, presently from the dressing-room, with her arms full of flowers that had been passed among the footlights, and she bore Olive Merriam with her.

"Don't be afraid; not in the least afraid," Zelda said to her cousin as she hastened across the hall to her aunt and uncle.

"Please don't," urged Olive, "it hurt me to be so."

"No danger at all; they're all perfectly amiable now. You know how nuisance time."

"Well, I think this is a real compliment. Thanks very much. This is Olive Merriam. And, Uncle Rodney, here's the star, to whom I expect you to say something particularly nice. Mr. Merriam, Miss Merriam"—and Zelda smiled at the old gentleman's back bow over the hand of his brother's daughter.

"Olive Merriam," said Zelda, "is my cousin and my very dearest friend."

Olive was not afraid. She smiled at Rodney Merriam, and there was something very winning in Olive Merriam's smile. Zelda looked demurely at her cousin, who seemed startled lest something unpleasant might happen; lest Rodney Merriam might, half at jest, fling himself caught, and half in earnest, at Olive Merriam's blue eyes, by giving offence with their fortive dimples and fair hair that Zelda was now compelling her to wear in the prettiest mode.

"I am delighted! I am proud of you!" said Rodney Merriam, at last.

"I think I may say that I am, too," replied Olive. "I haven't seen you for a long time—Uncle Rodney—except at a distance."

"Altogether my fault and my loss" said Zelda, "and I'm sure we can celebrate somewhere together."

A member of the cast, now satisfying his lay-day with keen interest, something had surely happened among the cast, Zelda was sure, for never since she was a mere member of the chorus had Halcomb been so any social gathering.

"Come to a draft somewhere," said Mrs. Forrest, suddenly. "We must let Mr. Halcomb. And now, Zelda, don't stay out all night. Mrs. Carr is going home with you, Olive, and I'm sure she will if you're not careful. Aug—Zel—Mr. Halcomb is the Wabash and has to him." And she stuck her hand and bowed with the dignity of a queen through this were a great deal between them.

"Politics Mr. Dameron over there," Zelda remarked, casually. "My aunt thinks they are dreadful. Don't you think the stage divinely?" and she looked at Morris suddenly, with a surprising air of gravity.

"I'm sure he was a pretty thinker in some former incarnation," said Morris, seriously.

"That was just what I was thinking, quite literally—that he looked like a Saint Anthony, with a moment's joy at finding that out in me."

"I'm glad, then, that we can agree about something, even when we are unsympathetically—wrong."

"Why, I don't think that I can be wrong," said Zelda. "And it isn't in the least pleasant to have you so emphatic about things. I shall have a chance to get even with you, sometime."

"Any interest you may take in me will be flattering," said Morris.

Zelda had opened demurely at her partner, who seemed to be making an universal swing at nothing in the way, and to remark, aloud:

"Why, anyone, Miss Dameron?"

"Why, Mr. Leighton, I mean!"

"Mr. Leighton is crazy about your whistle," Morris ventured, with a sudden change to complimentary joy. "But he's so absorbed in his work he can't hear him." And she, quick, her hand and foot twinkling, began to hum a tune that Morris knew a goody grief between them.

"What kind of a job is that? I say, Morris, what's the matter with Leighton? He looks as if he had seen a ghost. Where are you playing Hamlet now—the Prince, when Hamlet goes Mac Duff, or when Hamlet Leighton—he belongs in my fen, does he? the tender-hearted Hamlet, who wept over a dead mouse? Look at the poor fellow! Why, Mac Duff, I don't know what's the matter with him, but I know he's in a fine state. Look at him! Look at him!"

"Don't be alarmed," said Zelda, with a gesture of the hand, as Leighton, with his head in his hands, sat motionless across the hall to her amazed gaze.

"I don't disturb you, were, Mr. Hall?" said Zelda.

"There was just one thing lacking to your incomparable rendering of Leighton: 'you sighs, he have been drowned in the Dead sea of the Dead sea' to have made it perfect."

"No, indeed, gentlemen, I beg of you!" and Zelda hurried across the room, where their schoolmate was assembling the principals.

"Miss Dameron, we got the art of stimulating them right. She seems to have—you know what I mean—the twenty-nine voices at a thirty-cent bargain counter, but she makes it use half a wind about sitting out. They're never sure of her, and they're always trying you on your fine and give you the poetry in pay. She's the best and prettiest girl on the sex all right, and I know—"

"I shall hold you responsible for this, you—"

"I certainly hope you will. As I was saying, you referred to a young lady who was here under your protection, in terms which no one but a contemptible cur would use of a woman—"

Halbomb's arm went up and he struck at Pollock with his flat. "The officer stood on he had been, but the glove in his right hand slapped smartly upon Halbomb's face, and Halbomb took an involuntary step backward down the stairway.

"In the jail of the country that I come from, Mr. Halbomb," Pollock came from, Mr. Halbomb," Pollock said in an easy, well-conversational tone, "we do very pleasant things in hospitals and captivating people too fond strips"—he took another step forward, and Halbomb, a little white in the face, retreated again—"but in this instance" Halbomb lifted his left hand to his shadowy moustache and gave it a twist; he took another step and Pollock, quick, jerked before him—"I shall let you off with unmerciful balmony."

Halbomb, forced another step downward, had grown red with fury, and said Stock at Pollock, but with the slightest of a stammer. Pollock had recreated two steps instead of one, reaching a landing. His face was serene, and footing he gained courage.

"Why, Mr. Halbomb, you look perplexed, drawing his face down so that it more nearly matches Pollock's glove.

"You," said Pollock, calmly, "I have no quarrel with you, sir, as that your statement looks specific. As I was saying, I have been captivated by the state fair with the tips of the fingers of his hand, and landing the other alone in the air, he gave a sweep that seemed to take in little the matter further, but I am sorry to have to say, sir, that I have a great pleasure to make your acquaintance in more than one sense. Mr. Halbomb, I'm sorry to leave you—long as I have looked for her such interest—Miss Morrison, I do hope you will excuse me, but I have stayed long enough. And please remember one thing, sir, and—

"And pray remember one also," said Halbomb, stepping down to the last upon him.

"You," said her uncle, in a low tone, "it was all fine, but how did Pollock get into it? I don't know that I ever came to have you know him."

"Of course he knows Mr. Pollock."

"Did I prefer?"

"Why, I thought you were—I'm having a little fun to-night, and I can't be serious at all. Some other time—good night, Zelda."

"What do you think of that, anyway?" asked Miss Forest, when she was alone with her brother in their carriage.

"I think she's very pretty, if you prefer to think so, Marion, and has inter manners," was his reply.

"There seems to be no way of checking Zelda's enthusiasms. I hope that girl won't take advantage of Zora's kindness," said Mrs. Forrest, as her brother left her at her door.

"I shouldn't worry about her if I were you."

"I certainly shan't; but you were always so very fond of Zelda."

"I was always a good deal of a fool, I've said before Marion, and I have tried to be taken home in his sister's carriage, but neither seemed from door through high street, leaving the back entrance and walk home."

At the Allemonsi Pollock was enjoying himself immensely. He could not have been presented to a representative Marionia audience in a very thing very winning in Miss Morrison's smile. Zelda looked demurely at her partner, who seemed almost lost amid thing unpleasant might happen; but Rodney Morrison laughed, half at himself caught, and half at the sight of Miss Morrison's blue eyes twinkling cheerily with their forlorn dimpling, and he was quite ready to dance the next quadrille before him—"I shall let you off with unmerciful balmony."

Halbomb, forced another step downward, had grown red with fury, and said Stock at Pollock, but with the slightest of a stammer. Pollock had recreated two steps instead of one, reaching a landing. His face was serene, and footing he gained courage.

"I think she's very pretty, if you prefer to think so, Marion, and has inter manners," was his reply.

"There seems to be no way of checking Zelda's enthusiasms. I hope that girl won't take advantage of Zora's kindness," said Mrs. Forrest, as her brother left her at her door.

"I shouldn't worry about her if I were you."

"I certainly shan't; but you were always so very fond of Zelda."

"I was always a good deal of a fool, I've said before Marion, and I have tried to be taken home in his sister's carriage, but neither seemed from door through high street, leaving the back entrance and walk home."

At the Allemonsi Pollock was enjoying himself immensely. He could not have been presented to a representative Marionia audience in a very

CAPITAL FIGHT IN OKLAHOMA.

Victory of Oklahoma City Followed by Riotous Demonstrations.

Scenes such as have not occurred in Oklahoma since the rush of the "boys on" when the land was thrown open to settlers have followed the victory of Oklahoma City in the election to decide the permanent location of the State capital.

Rival cities, were aspirants for the capital City. They were Oklahoma City, with 50,000 population; Guthrie and Shawnee, cities of about 20,000 population. Both towns had its champion committee and the fight has been pushed for months. The question was voted on at a special election the other day, and it is claimed by adherents of Oklahoma City that the returns from forty of the seventy counties show Oklahoma City has won over Guthrie and Shawnee by 20,000 plurality.

Guthrie was not willing to stand by the decision of the voters, and Judge S. H. Harris of the District Court, on application of Guthrie citizens, issued an injunction against members of the State election board to prevent the removal of State offices from Guthrie. This was the result of the election became known Oklahoma City's supporters began the moving of the capital. Possession of the State seal was the first step sought. At 1 o'clock in the morning an auto left Oklahoma City with one passenger for Guthrie, private secretary to the governor. It is said that when the auto reached City Guthrie, but Anthony made it in the dark in less than an hour. When the news reached the outskirts of Guthrie he muffled the machine, drove rapidly to the office of the secretary of state in the temporary capitol, where he secured the seal.

The Governor's daughter had her sympathies with Oklahoma City. She is married. She, with several friends, was among the crowds watching the results of the election when Oklahoma City began to pull ahead. Her husband, who is a Boston man, began to cheer. The crowd, agreed by the loss of the capital, jeered. The husband and wife left amid hisses. Miss Haskell and her party came to Oklahoma City in a shower of missiles. Later they slipped away and took the first train for Oklahoma City.

FINGER PRINTS MURDER CLEW.

By finger prints found on a window pane in the second story room in the residence of Mrs. Katherine Schultz, the police hope to locate the person who murdered the woman and then set fire to her house in Leavenworth, on the night of Thanksgiving day. If they succeed in finding the man who left the prints they will have the clew they sought. THE DEVILAR PULPIT

THE UPLIFTED FACE.

By Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

"Then shall thine lift up thy face without spot." Job 11:15.

It is a good thing to look up. God is in the heaven above us, and when we are the clouds let us remember that they are around about His throne. There is a lesson in the Bible about the uplifted face. "Then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot." This phrase, found in the time of Job, is extremely beautiful as a figure of speech, and at the same time very expressive of certain facts in religious experience. It expresses the attitude of a soul at peace with God according to the provisions and terms of the gospel. Confidence is implied in this utterance, for a man without peace and confidence will hang his head with guilt and shame, and not lift it up without spot. It would be well for us to ask ourselves how we stand in the uplifted face, the look of trust and confidence in our heavenly Father. He is good, His attitude towards us is loving; His arms are ever at rest to up our faces toward Him without spot, without any dark form of distrust or doubt.

Again, in the uplifted face fellowship is implied. We love to look steadily, with the uplifted face, upon those we love and trust and whom we are sure know and love us. Then shall thine lift up thy face without spot," when you have fellowship with God; not alone when you have confidence in Him, but when you are in fellowship with Him, and are on terms of intimacy with Him.

Furthermore, a degree of happiness and cheer is involved in the face upwardly lifted without spot. The spot is implies a degree of happiness, and increasing happiness results from the uplifted face. Do we realize the fact that there is hope and cheer in the face upwardly lifted? If you are sad or in sorrow or harassed, try looking up. Look up into the sky. See the billows, the fleecy clouds and the blue heaven beyond. The fact is, we all look down too much. We look down when we are at work, when we are thinking, when we are troubled, when we are ashamed.

A young man suffering from nervous trouble was recently told by an eminent specialist to get out into the country, to take a field glass with him and study the habits of the birds. It was the very counsel which Jesus gave to troubled men of long ago, "Behold the fowls of the air."

A woman who had lost her first born and only child fell into an unutterable state of sorrow and melancholy. She was a Christian, but she seemed to find it impossible to be comforted. Her wise friend told her to look up, to try looking up into the sky every pleasant day. She testified that it broke the spell of her melancholy and that it had proved of immense help to her. The fact is, we all look down too much. We look down when we are at work, when we are thinking, when we are troubled, when we are ashamed.

LABOR

The breeze for the last year of Inman-Cleveland Chase Makers' Union was $27,159.27, and for the last six years were $565,522.24.

Another attempt is being made to unionize the housemaids of Boston, Mass., and vicinity, and it is the movement is meeting with success.

The actual members of the State at Colorado, with a membership of 7,000, have decided to apply for admission to the American Federation of Labor.

Organized labor is fast gaining in Santa Cruz County, California. Recently the bricklayers, cement workers, plasterers and carpenters formed unions.

The general opinion is that Mrs. Schultz, who was a wealthy widow, 54 years old, was killed by one of her debtors. She is known to have held mortgages on several pieces of property in the city. Her will was probated at $50,000. Some think robbery was the motive.

$2,000,000 Taxes Is Illegal.

Taxes to the amount of $2,000,000 levied by the city of New Orleans to collect on stock in foreign corporations held by St. Louisans were held to be illegal by Judge Newman, of the United States Circuit Court, in a decision rendered Thursday. The suit was brought by Mr. Williams. The court held the stock at issue could not be assessed because it was assessed in states where the company is incorporated.

Saved Old Lady's Nair.

"My mother used to have a very hot humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had tried different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the little burning and scalding of her head was over and her hair began growing. To day she feels much as well as Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the first head of hair she has for as old lady of seventy-four.

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then I would crack open with blisters. Then I thought I would flee to my mother's friend, the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are sure than from ten to twelve miles from a railway station. Roads are good, and big loads are easily handled. The price of getting grain to the principal markets is low on the average, and then in reaching the world's markets the railways have their rates established by the Government, and what may be considered a fair deal is certain. Good prices for all kinds of grain is the rule, and if the investor has a good farm he can realize on the value given to his unworked land. It is not difficult to understand that the prairie sod is more valuable in the land is just that much more, and there is no room for speculation. Men who holds a free homestead of one quarter section, and the land which is, get for $15 as an entry fee, his land which at its value is worth $10 an acre—or, $15 an acre—the moment he has completed his homestead duties. It is not, I continue to increase in value until its earning power gives a reasonable interest on it certain sins. That is, if he takes off the land $300 worth of dollars per acre clear profit each year, his land is worth to him, at a fair rate of interest, $20 an acre. If he realizes $10 an acre clear profit, it is worth $200 per acre. Now, these sands of farmers are duplicating these figures in Western Canada. Homesteads to-day is much less than his realizing value. The fact that the fifty thousand Americans who went to Canada year before last were followed by one hundred thousand last year shows some evidence, and good evidence, too, that there is profit in the business. The knowledge that money is to be made in Canada lands. As an investment money is to be made, the same by buying upon the land, secured either by homestead or purchase. The one hundred thousand of last year will be one hundred thousand more this year. These complete people from every state in the Union, and in the same proportion I believe that awaits the homeseeker in Canada. The large numbers that have come, should make no appreciable difference in the supply of land. There is still left vast quantities of the best of it. But the longer a delay is made in arriving at a decision, the price will advance proportionately, and the more delay the more difficult it will be for the settlers become more difficult to secure. The Government publishes interesting literature, which may be had for the application to any of the agents whose offices are in the principal towns throughout the States, and they (the agents) will be pleased to assist in any way possible in the choice of location.

Farms in central New York, bought a few years ago for $15 an acre, produced two years later a crop of pure worth more than $15 an acre. This instead, considered in conjunction with the fact that many farms can be bought for even less than the value of the buildings standing on the land, is a bulletin issued by the commissioner Pearson of the state agricultural department to indicate the possibilities of agriculture in New York.

This publication also gives the value of crops in this state for a period of 40 years, showing that New York is the fourth state in agricultural importance. A significant feature of the statistics is that while in 1875 New York raised $2,300,000 bushels of potatoes, and in 1900 $1,955,179, last year it produced 34,800,000 bushels, valued at $26,127,000. LAND IN CANADA AN INVESTMENT

WORK IT, AND SECURE 20 PER CENT. ON THE EXPENDITURE.

Farm lands in Canada increased in value this Spring from fifteen to twenty per cent, and as a result of this there thousands of those who have gone there within the past few years have had much more value added to their holdings. There is proof here that as a field for investment there is nowhere to be found a more profitable one than in purchasing farm lands in Canada. And, as a field for occupation and working the farmer there is nowhere on the continent where more satisfactory returns is given. The crops are always sure and the prices are always good. With railroads entering and traversing all the settled parts, there are very few districts in which the farmer will be more than from ten to twelve miles from a railway station. Roads are good, and big loads are easily handled. WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR

Theodore Antoinne.

Hello Teddy!

You had a lully time in Africa, and in Europe you proved yourself to be the first citizen of the world.

Therefore your Uncle Samuel is proud of you, and welcomes you home as the greatest living American. During your absence of fifteen months you did not once lose your head, either in the jungles of the dark continent or those of Paris or London.

You were the chief attraction everywhere, in forest or palace, and you were as American all the time. You preached to the Frenchmen and the Germans, and told the English "where to get off at."

You were permitted to do this because you are a citizen of the world. None but a Roosevelt could have done it. You told them the truth every time, as you are in the habit of doing at home.

Here's to you, Teddy!

Long Life!

Why?

No private citizen of any country, whatever position he may have previously filled, was ever honored abroad as Theodore Roosevelt has been honored in his travels through Europe.

Why?

Is it solely because he has been chief magistrate of the republic? No. Other men have been President. McKinley was president when the United States was admitted into the circle of world powers. Is it his war record? He was only a colonel of rough riders.

Is it because he represent the conscience of the people. It is because civic righteousness is the key note and inspiration of his being.

It is because he fears not the combined powers of wealth and greed. It is because he fears naught but God And, added to all these sinews of war in the fight for righteousness, is the position of trustee well filled with knowledge.

The world honors him because he stands for righteousness.

JAPANESE STREETS.

They Swarm With Sideshows and Playing Children.

A Japanese street is a delightful place to play in, for grownup people in Japan do not seem to mind if the rail of a kite flops right into their smiling faces and only laugh when they are turned out of their way by some huge pageop which leans like an angry bee around their feet.

Wee, dark eyed maidens in butterfly kimonos of brilliant coloring turn their skipping ropes gayly, the tiny black heads of the ladies they carry swagged to their backs nodding up and down like small round balls. Their brothers play at "tags," which is a favorite game of males. They divide themselves into two parties, one carrying white flags and the other red ones. At a given signal the "reds" strive to "whisper" stealing to wrest away their flags, and the side which carries off most of these is proclaimed victor.

Wonderful conjurers are to be found at the street corners. They make swarms of birds fly from crystal bowls and flowers spring as if by magic from slender stems of bamboo.

Others show marvelous beetles harnessed with wee to paper carts or command the snakes that accompany them every time to perform extraordinary tricks.

A little farther on you will find an old woman who is making a curious assortment of beaux, called "tofu," over an coal brazier. She can buy a big slice of this wrapped up in a cool leaf for a very small sum or, if you prefer it, a piping hot product costing no more. Arcadia, too, are as common as volcanoes, and savoy in no other land than this amidst little Japan. So they tell me that themselves but such stories subject—Home and Country.

JUDGE WILLIS BROWN

Boy City Movement Made Popular in East.

Lowell (Mass.) Courier Citizen.

Judge Willis Brown of Salt Lake City, Utah, founder of the "Boy City" organization, spoke last night in the vestry of the First Congregational church, in the interest of the Boy City movement. He was accompanied by Frederick E. Smith, director of "Dover Boystown," Dover, N. H. and adult leader of the Boy City movement for New England.

Judge Brown was the founder and first judge of the juvenile court of Salt Lake City, and he is president and general director of the national Boy City at Charlevoix, Mich., a regular city organization by groups, which opens for the reception of boys July 15, and closes September 1.

Judge Brown evidently believes that the organization of a Boy City as an adjunct to the juvenile court, acts as a preventive of crime among boys, and thereby lessens the business of the court. The trouble with our juvenile courts here in the East, according to his idea, is that they undertake to rule the boys by adult methods, and instead of going to keep a boy from becoming a criminal, it aims to keep a boy criminal from becoming an adult criminal.

He said that he tried for 15 years to discover a plan for solving the boy problem, and wound up by finding that there is no boy problem, but just boys.

"Kids, that is all." A boy, he said, will be absolutely square, with the law of "the gang." At certain stages in a boy's life, "the gang" is stronger than any home influence. Out in Utah, it is claimed that the state absolutely owns every boy within its limits, and so it is possible to do preventive work. The best way to work in a juvenile court is to organize a "gang," a boy city. There is one in Salt Lake City, with a city hall equipped by one of the rich men of the city. The city is organized into wards, and the boys make their own laws and elect their own mayor and board of aldermen and other city officers. The boys govern themselves absolutely, the only rule of the Boy City being that of "a square deal." The boy, says Judge Brown, who does not play square is either sick, or he has "bubbles in his dream-box," or else he is a sneak. If he is not sick, and has not "bubbles," then he should be sent to the juvenile court.

Judge Brown says that the boy of a good house, who goes wrong, is harder to redeem than the boy of the bad home. It does him no good to put him on probation, because he has been on probation all his life. "If my boy, with his bringing up, commits a theft, he belongs to the reform school to morrow. But if "Timmy," the tough, next door in New Hampshire, should commit a theft, it should not be so very bad." On this principle, Judge Brown would not send the boy from a bad home to the reform school, until he has given him a chance,—until he can judge him under normal conditions. Put him in a good environment, let him have the things to life that the boys in good homes have, and see if he will then "play fair." If he will not, send him away.

is how to make herself attractive. But, without health, it is hard for her to be lovely in face, form or temper. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion, good health. Try them. 50c at F. G. Hines & Co.

William M. Smith of St. Johns, candidate for the Republican nomination as attorney general, has been prominent in state politics for a number of years. He is a graduate of St. Johns and has several times filled the office of city attorney. He was a presidential elector at large in 1904 and is now a member of the Republican state central committee from the Eighth congressional district.

He attended state-wide attention at the Republican state convention in the spring of 1906, when, in his speech as chairman of the convention, he for the first time voiced the currency feeling which is now so rife in the state. In a speech which referred his audience and brought the delegates to their feet, he declared that the Republican party should purge itself of evils which had grown up within it in the state and political a loss of power if this was not done. Mr. Smith predicted conditions would be as they are today to-nothing.

Northern Michigan

The homestead exemptions of the old soldiers and their widows on the assessment roll of the village of Ontonagon for the year 1910 amounted to $9,000.

Grand Master N. P. Hull of the Michigan State Grange in a recently published statement said: All three candidates for governor are opposed to a tonnage tax. Osborn alone answers our question frankly. The other two (Kelley) and Musselman) sidestep the question."

The salary of the postmaster at Bellaire has been increased from $1,400 to $1,500, at Hope City from $2,200 to $2,300 at Charlevoix from $2,100 to $2,200, at Cadillac from $2,600 to $2,700 East Jordan from $1,700 to $1,800, Gaylord from $1,600 to $1,700. The salary at Kalkaska has been decreased from $1,700 to $1,600, Lake City from $1,600 to $1,400.

Phil Eckhart of Central Lake has sold his farm and orchard to outside parties for $10,000. The farm consists of 190 acres and an orchard of 75 acres is included in the 190. The orchard is one of the finest in this part of the state and has a reputation for the fruit that it produced. Mr. Eckhart also received $100 extra for the work that he has done on the place this year. The price is considered very low.

It appears "blind pigs" flourish in wet counties, and that the easier it is to get liquor the easier it is to conduct a pig. Monday's dailies tell of a deal launch, participated in by 15 men in Wexford county. Four gallons of whiskey was easily obtained in Cadillac and for two days the spree went on. When the whiskey was gone that unquenchable thirst had to be satisfied and they resorted to a mixture of wood alcohol, red pop and sugar. The head line reads "Three dead, two dying and ten in." This is news from a blind pig in a county having saloons.

Thomas Thompson, mail carrier on the Glen Haven-South Manitou route, was drowned Thursday morning at the south point of the island. His body has been recovered. He was out in the boat with his little son, who fell overboard. Thompson jumped in after him and had the boy on its back swimming for shore when he was stricken with cramps or heart failure and sank from view. Mrs. Thompson was on the shore and pushing out in another boat succeeded in rescuing her son, but could be of no assistance to her husband. The life saving crew at the island hurried to the scene and recovered Mr. Thompson's body and worked over it two hours, but without avail, as life was extinct.

Traverse City Record: George E. Howe, editor of the Fruit Belt, and former manager of the West Michigan Development bureau, was in the city Monday for a few hours. Mr. Howe is preparing a special write up of the northern country for the Fruit Belt. The June edition, just completed, contained a special write up of the county south of Grand Traverse, and the July issue will contain special features of the region to the south of Grand Traverse. In the next four editions, there will be an issue of 50,000 copies, leaving a surplus of 100,000 copies to be distributed where they will do the fruit growing district the most good. Mr. Howe at the same time is preparing an edition of a full car load of the choicest fruit, selected from Northern Michigan fruit farms, which he will exhibit at the Interstate fair at Syracuse, N. Y. at Trenton, N. J. at Berkey Temple, and at Hosmer, Mass. giving one week to each place.

difference in the looks of your clothes whether or not the cloth is properly shrunk before it is cut. You may have had experience with clothes that go out of shape quickly; poor shrinking, or perhaps no shrinking at all.

Hart Schaffner & Marx

clothes are made from strictly all-wool cloths that are shrunk by the cold-water process; the woolen cloth packed for several hours in a cold-water sheet, then dried by air passing throu and around it.

That's one reason why these clothes fit so well, keep shape so well, last so well; they're tailored perfectly. You ought to wear them!

Pain in Heart

"For two years I had pain in my heart, back and left side. Could not draw a deep breath or lie on left side, and any little exertion would cause palpitation. Under advice I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine. I took about thirteen bottles, am in better health than I ever was, and have gained 14 pounds."

MRS. LILLIE THOMAS,
Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

For many years Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been very successful in the treatment of heart troubles, because of its tonic effect upon the heart nerves and muscles. Even in severe cases of long standing it has frequently prolonged life for many years after doctors had given up all hope, as proven by thousands of letters we have received from grateful people.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return your money.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR 5 DROPS
RHEUMATISM
A reliable preparation for both internal and external use that gives quick relief to the sufferer and is especially to be depended upon when other remedies have failed to give relief. Sold by druggists generally. Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.00. Directions in many languages accompany each bottle. Some druggists will not supply the 5 Drops, but we prefer to supply our patrons rather than to recommend substitutes which may be offered for profit. When in your opinion is the greatest obstacle at the present time to vocational training, the fit or unfit teacher? Not to homogenize knowledge! Now we know the cow and Satan are affinities, if not relatives. Where once the cow was worse than worse in our cities, cramping urban ill manifested by dilute and diluting the flavor of our cream, we now more that milk is a greater demon than Satan. Satan is a spirit, but he has adequate flesh in the cow of Horace Greeley's Hymn, which generally speaks for himself. Satan is a spirit, but he has a great affinity for milk. Our farms, our dairies, our cities, the air our lungs fill with most terrible stenches of lime, urinous and fecal matter, the cow, the dairy, and awesome rolling tiers Millions and millions of cows, twice, twice, twice as bad as Horace Greeley's Hymn, speak in the air, laugh in the air, cry in the air, and the air is full of them. Not only does milk give all that, but from the stagnant streams of Satan. Are needs, even, more than ever before for Hilliputian doses of evil spirits. If we allow a wounded horse to lie in the road a million devils are forced to the milk cows. The city has the pure air. That is why we have to have the country. The country has the pure air. Yet, we have in the country the only pure air we have in the country. Yet, we have in the country the only pure air we have in the country. Yet, we have in the country the only pure air we have in the country

MANY DEAD IN QUAKES; PANIC REIGNS IN ITALY

LOSS OF LIFE ABOVE THIRTY

The provinces of Avellino here the brunt of a earthquake shock was felt throughout Southern Italy shortly before dawn the other day. The dead are estimated from thirty-five to fifty, and many are injured. Distressing scenes were witnessed as thousands fled in terror from their hovels, some dying of fright. Much damage was done to property, but it is impossible to determine the extent of the devastation.

In Avellino little harm was done, and the only death reported was that of an old man who died of fright. The population, however, ran into the open.

Reports from villages throughout the province are much more grave. At Calitri, where many people are reported killed, the situation is distressing. Two persons are said to have met death at San Sossio, where the shaking waters, with which the district is rich, were released from beneath by the disturbance and flooded the vicinity. From the best reports guess seems, the quake a house fell, burying and killing an aged man. One person was killed and several were injured at Castelfranco. Calabritto was badly damaged.

It was in the dreary hour of the morning when the shock was felt at Avellino. The sleeping town was aroused by the shaking of walls, the rattling of furniture and the falling of plaster from the ceilings into a smashed mass that seized the 20,000 inhabitants, who were released from bounds

Eighth Grade Examination.

The eighth grade examination for 1910 has left pleasant memories with the class that the examinations of former years have done.

The general impression seemed to be that the examination was easier than former ones have been but while this may be partially true, yet more of the success is due to better teaching and better application on the part of the students than to the fact that the examination was particularly easy.

An even 200 students wrote the examination and of these 118 received state diplomas while about 80 others were very near the passing mark and will be admitted to the high schools if they will make an effort to make up a little work during the summer.

12 of the others were seventh graders who wanted to try the examination. None of the seventh graders received diplomas though some of them made fairly good records.

In addition to this 6 students wrote part of the examination as a special test on some work that they were making up and 5 students from other counties had their papers forwarded from this county to other commissioners.

The four students from the Bay Shore school who passed the examination were determined to complete their work in orthodox fashion and it was my pleasure to attend one of the prettiest little commencement exercises in the church there that I have seen anywhere.

The church was handsomely decorated and was filled to its capacity when the exercises opened.

The members of the class, Orlie Hooper, Bessie Tillotson, Waneta Zipp, and Ethel Zipp each took part in the program and if their maiden efforts on the platform as speakers can be taken as a guide, there is a bright future in store for the entire quartette.

All present enjoyed the affair and the general interest shown by the parents speaks well for the schools of Bay Shore.

To members of the 8th grade of the Parochial school in Charlevoix and 9 to the students of the schools on the Beaver Islands.

In the rural schools diplomas were given as follows:

Florence Alexander, Bessie Allen, Ole Lyngklip, Oswald Euler, Bertie Howe, Ward Genett, Hattie Hamlin, Father Hand, Geo. Hamlin, Chas. Mascho, Orlie Hooper, Ethel Zipp, Waneta Zipp, Bessie Tillotson, Edward Metz, Iva Olney, James Fraser, Mae Sanford, Jessie Sanford, Edna Pinsent, Grace Davis, Merle Stoody, Nina Kubler, Earl Bardwell, Elizabeth Doyle, Jennie M. Davis, Mary Hanton, Walter Holbrook, Edward Wittle, Leo Holmberg, Donald Graham, Glenn Thomas, Hazel Niles, Isabel Phillips, Lydia Hayden, Lloyd Ballard, Susie Hunnett, and Elsie Bailey.

I hope that the successful applicants will take advantage of the tuition law and that they will be enrolled in the high schools of the county next year.

Hampered by Conventionalities.

Washington was crossing the Delaware river at Trenton.

"Of course," he said, "I don't mind standing in this boat and going stormy in the direction of the musketpacking foe, since the artists insist on painting me in this absurd attitude, but the blithering chumps ought to have better than to paint these blocks of floating ice protecting a fool shove the owner. Jump with an avalanche of quinquin known that the ice in this river isn't eight feet thick."

PHYSICAL EXERCISE.

Do You Take Enough to Keep Your Anatomy in Good Condition?

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, is criticising the different fads of exercise in Outing, says:

"The worst error of exercise, the most dangerous fad of physical culture, is not to take enough of it and to same at every form of it that does not bear the dollar mark. By one of those cruel irony's of fate the men and the very men who denounce all physical culture and recreation as fads are those who pay the heaviest personal penalty for this delusion. They use the vigor they have gained in early youth in nature's open air school to chain themselves to the desk, to forge themselves in dungeon-like offices or airless workrooms twelve or fourteen hours a day. They "feel fine" and are sure they are going to live to be a hundred, but one day, by sheer accidement, a bacillus or artery whose cost has been hardened by twenty years unrestful decrease so irritate that it snaps suddenly, and down they go with a stroke of paralysis, like a winged deer. It is never safe to jeer at the gods, whether the imaginary ones of Olympus or the realities of modern science.

"The man who for four instant at physical culture and who successfully attended college and high school studying, and'class for gymnasium or athletic fields, to go and get a backsaw and a cord of wood" or a hoe and a potato patch and develop their muscles like I did when I was a boy are the very ones who die suddenly when they should be in their prime for lack of exercise and open air recreation. It is really an astonishing thing how many giants of industry and transportation, particularly executive railroad men, die or suddenly go to pieces between fifty and sixty years of age. It is a common saying in railroad circles that a big general superintendent or department chief will seldom live beyond forty-eight to fifty-five years of age. Many break down before that."

A Gambler's Philosophy.

"There's no use in trying to buck against luck," said the veteran. "Every fool gambler is he put down his glass of whisky and said: "If you are lucky it will generally you, drop out. If the fickle goddess of fortune is with you, you bet for all you are worth. That's the whole secret of the game. I've been gambling all my life, and I know by look. Why? Because I never take a chance against bad luck. Luck is bound to be either with you or against you. You win or you lose. The chances of breaking even are mighty slim. So I never buck bad luck."—New York Times.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, June 21, '10

Mayor Hampton presiding.

Aldermen present—Paddock, Swinton, Hachow, Nordrum, Webster and Gelken.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Moved by Alderman Webster and seconded by Alderman Nordrum that the petition of the property holders on Alice street to pave said street be referred to the street commissioner to be reported at the next regular meeting. Motion prevailed.

Moved by Alderman Gelken and seconded by Alderman Nordrum that the petition of E. A. Stewart to construct cement sidewalk be granted. Motion prevailed.

Alderman Gelken offered the following resolution and moved its adoption.

RESOLVED by the Common Council that extension bonds be issued as follows: Viz: to take up Charlevoix park bonds Nos. 1 and 2 each for $1,000; No. 1 to be for six years from date and No. 2 for seven years from date with interest at 4½ per centum per annum and that the mayor and clerk be instructed to sign the bonds and also sell the same. Adopted by aye and nay vote as follows: Ayes, Paddock, Swinton, Hachow, Nordrum, Webster and Gelken. Nays none.

Alderman Paddock introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption, which motion was supported by Alderman Gelken.

WHEREAS, the Board of Public Works has by resolution notified this body that the Carnegie Library building has been completed, and the same turned over to the council, pursuant to original resolutions accepting the gift from Mr. Carnegie, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that this body hereby accepts the building from the Board of Public Works, and does by this resolution transfer the same to the Board of Education, as the property of School District No. 1, and the clerk is hereby instructed to send a copy of this resolution, duly certified, to the secretary of the Board of Education.

Passed June 21, 1910.

WILL E. HAMPTON, Mayor.

G. ELLSWORTH DUTTON, City Clerk.

On motion of Alderman Gelken the Clerk was instructed to write Mrs. Lawrenson to the effect that the sidewalk in front of her lot on Alice street is dangerous and must be replaced with a cement walk on or before June 28th 1910 otherwise the council will take steps to put in said walk and charge same to the property. They Cannot Lose Charlevoix.

The magnificent steamer Theodore Roosevelt, with the Chicago Association of Commerce delegation on board, entered the port at 6:30 Tuesday morning. She came up through the bridge with nobody in sight on board but the officers and a few deck hands, with here and there a soulless protruding his head through a port-hole.

She did the beautiful trick in Round Lake that Billy Sunday invented—turned around and landed at William's dock. Most of the merchants were yet in bed, after a strenuous night at Petoskey. Soon after landing, a steam calliope was turned loose on the upper deck, and the music awakened everybody, ashore and aboard.

In the itinerary of the cruise Charlevoix was left out, while Petoskey and Traverse City were in the list. Charlevoix the Beautiful would not stand for this, and the board of commerce got busy. Telegraphic communication was opened up with the boat at Marquette and again at Duluth, and finally a wireless from the vicinity of the straits stating that Charlevoix harbor would not be skipped.

The Roosevelt was here more than two hours. Autos and carriages were pressed into service, and the time well used. Many walked about town, from preference. All were pleased with the town, and how could they help it? But the hour was unfavorable for a successful visit or the proper sort of a reception.

Anyhow, the Chicago Association of Commerce found that Charlevoix was on the map. A number of Charlevoix business men went to Traverse City with the party, returning by rail in the evening.

Fatal Duel on Bicycles.

Only a few years ago Spain was treated to a duel on bicycles between members of a wheel club in Granada. The opponents were posted 700 feet apart, with their backs turned toward one another, each directing his machine with his left hand and brandishing in his right a huge bowie in the Spanish manner. Then they were three clashes, and in the third, one of the fighters drove his knife into the heart of his opponent.

—Next Monday will be the glorious 4th. There will be no celebration in Charlevoix, therefore remain at home and enjoy the beauties of nature as I set ice cream with your wife and children on the lawn or in the park. You will have more money Tuesday morning and feel much more like resuming work. The sensel kind of a sane 4th is a day of domestic enjoyment with your family in Charlevoix the Beautiful.

—See that your dog has an effective muzzle.

—The lighthouse tender Hyacinthe was in port Monday.

—Reports from all directions are that crops are booming.

—Lee Scroggie and Clare Coulter are home from U. of M. for the summer.

—Prepare for a rousing good time July 5th when Chas S. Osborn comes to town.

—Turn out the evening of July 5th and get acquainted with the next governor of Michigan.

—Mrs. Lizie Shanahan and son, are spending a few days at "The Never Inn" Hayden's Point.

—Every train and boat is bringing summer residents, and the season already promises to be a record breaker.

—Judge Willis Brown, founder of Hoy City, is in town completing arrangements for the opening of the Blue Lake summer settlement.

—Where is there a village or city in this section of Northern Michigan that is doing the work of public and private improvement that Charlevoix is?

—Historic old "Antrim City," south of Norwood, and west of Atwood, will celebrate the 4th. The ladies will serve ice cream and refreshments.

—The swimming pool will open next Sunday, July 3d. Prof. Leopold Tucker, the manager, who has made the place so popular for many years, arrived from Toledo Saturday and is busy getting ready for the opening.

—The Beaver Armstrong camp at Hayden's Point situated in a beautiful grove of birch trees in one of the most alluring resorts on Pine Lake, continues to be very popular, the Capt. is kept busy carrying friends and supplies.

—Notice is sent to the East Jordan Local Union of the Farmers' Society of Equity from Assistant Secretary M. H. Sleight of Indianapolis, that a county union of the society will be established in this county in the near future and will be located at either East Jordan, Charlevoix or Boyne City, the place offering best shipping facilities and interest.

—As an example of what can be done with cement we refer you to the pleasant home of Lee Howland, on Antrim street. The house is constructed of light colored cement blocks, with a porch on two sides. Mr. Howland has just completed the porch, the railing and splendid column of which are of white cement.

—Dr. Wilkinson informs us that more recent examinations have die for the co-operation of every citizen who owns a dog. There are still dogs at large with the leather halters, that are absolutely no protection. This requires prompt attention. Look after your dogs.

—Sunday was the official inauguration day for the city park. In view of the recent improvements at the park, alderman Nordrum, of the park committee, conceived the idea of a Sunday afternoon band concert. The people turned out in large numbers, and the band did work that merited many compliments. As a matter of fact, Charlevoix has an excellent band, and it is an honor and credit to the city.

—Boyne Citizen: Should Chase S. Osborn be nominated and elected governor these promises to be a warm fight on for the position now held by State Game Warden Pierce. The names of Jas. H. Chapman of the "Soo" John Baird of Saginaw and Henry A. Wolf of Muskegon, have all been mentioned. A new candidate has developed, however, and that is is now stated that A. L. Coulter of Charlevoix will receive this appointment in the event of Mr. Osborn's success. The Kelley-Mussel man supporters claim that these gentlemen are pacifistic and are grooming chickens that never will be hatched.

Osborn Like Roosevelt

During our trip north last week we spent some time in the Soo and we naturally were interested to know what the home people thought of Chase S. Osborn and his candidacy for the governorship. His home city is a unit for him—men of all political parties recognize in him a leader, who by experience and his exceptional ability is particularly fitted, at this particular time, to take charge of the old ship of state and bring her back to her former proud position. That Mr. Osborn is not only popular in his home section but in every part of the state is acknowledged by every one who has given the matter any attention at all. The people generally looked upon Mr. Osborn as the best man fitted to give Michigan an administration such as Mr. Roosevelt gave the United States, and they believe that this is the kind of medicine that will do our state most good. The two men are alike fearless and independent and the intense vigor which characterizes their public utterances and actions is what the people like, for they have shown by their words and actions that the highest public good is the goal they are striving to reach. On the tonnage tax question he gave his reason why in such a convincing manner that he has converted a great many to his way of thinking and impressed the remainder with the fact that he is honest and above board and willing to stand by the consequences if the majority turn him down. Mr. Osborn occupies the unique position of being the only candidate who has dared to answer the question. There is no doubt as to where he stands while with others, they may or they may not favor the position the members of the State Grange take—with strong probabilities that they will not—Saranac Advertiser.

—Twenty thousand dollars is the amount that the Western Michigan Development Bureau expects to expend the current year advertising the best region on the American continent.

—A connection force of ten men has been here this week installing a new Western Union telegraph wire in the local office, and laying a new cable across the upper river to meet the requirements of the increased service. This gives the Charlevoix office five wires—three direct Chicago wires; one direct Detroit wire, and one "way" Grand Rapids wire. It does not require any conditions to show that this gives as good telegraphic facilities as those of any city anywhere.

—Photographs of the many attractive farm and orchard scenes in Western Michigan are now being secured that they may be available for use in the folder which the Western Michigan Development Bureau is about to publish in behalf of the advertisement of Western Michigan and that they may be used in connection with the illustrated lecture entitled "Developing Western Michigan," which is now being given in many places in this part of the state.

—In 1896 I received an order for 600 feet cedar telegraph poles and filled it in three months," said Harrison P. Grover of Grand Rapids lately. "It would take about 60 years to fill such an order now. "Cedar is becoming scarce and in 10 or 15 years the supply will be practically exhausted as far as Michigan is concerned. All the lower peninsula from Kent county north used to be good cedar country and the cedar for pole purposes was the finest in the world. Now when poles are needed in most of this district they have to be shipped in. Most of the present supply comes from the upper peninsula, but the upper peninsula tree does not grow so tall as in the lower peninsula.

—So much has been said about those beautiful streets—Michigan and Petoskey Avenues—that we are apt to forget that there are other beautiful streets on the north side, streets whose residents are making improvements both on their premises and in the street. One very attractive spot is at the corner of Nicholls and Atwater streets. On one of the corners is the beautiful home of Andrew Ross, recently enlarged and beautified. There are few pleasanter homes in this city of beautiful homes. It has all the conveniences for comfort and convenience, and has one feature that is worthy of mention—the organ stairway. It is constructed of pine cut in Southern Georgia seventeen years ago by Mr. Ross himself, when he was lumbering there. Invested in the Ross attic for more than fifteen years, and the panels and railing reveal no markings any wood we have ever seen. That section over on the east side of Michigan Avenue is worth a visit.

MAROONED

A Game Warden Victim of "Smart" Fishermen.

Menominee special: Deputy Game and Fish Warden C. E. Pettit is here unharmed following his adventurous trip on the Wisconsin fishing tug which he assisted in capturing yesterday on a charge of poaching in Michigan waters and upon which he was subsequently taken as a virtual prisoner towards the Wisconsin shore line and away from the sight of the Michigan fish warden's tug, Chase S. Osborn, commanded by his comrade, Deputy Warden J. H. Eddy.

Late today Warden Pettit was brought to Menominee by a fishing boat, having been taken off Chambers Island, where he was marooned by the Wisconsin fishermen. The Michigan warden believes that he will be unable to cause the rearrest of the Wisconsin fishermen, who became too fresh to give out at present. The Michigan warden, however, expects to get revenge by capturing the boat if it ever poaches again in Michigan waters.

Pettit spent two days on Chambers island before he was rescued. He refuses to describe his experience, or tell of his plans for the future. He says the boat which kidnaped him hailed from Green Bay, but beyond that he will not give any intimation as to its identity. The boat had on board 400 pounds of fish, said to be illegally caught, when Pettit boarded it, but the fish are supposed to have been disposed of quickly after Pettit left.

The department has had men investigating matters in Green Bay, and on Sunday, the tug Chase S. Osborn was detailed there with Deputy Pettit of Clare and Deputy Eddy of the Soo on board. Both the officers are stationed at Ironwood. They discovered the Wisconsin boat and placed the captain and crew under arrest. Deputy Pettit was placed in charge as prize officer, a tow line was stretched from the Chase S. Osborn and the latter then started to bring the prize into this harbor.

One of the crew of the Wisconsin boat suddenly cut the towing hawser with an axe and the prize boat, at once showed its captors as clean a pair of heels as could be desired in a closely contested race. The Osborn was soon distanced in the stern chase and was compelled to abandon both the tow and Deputy Pettit concerning whom some anxiety was felt.

Deputy Eddy at once wired to Game Warden Pierce, notifying him of the unusual situation and asking him to at once come to the aid of his widely separated deputies. The game warden conferred with Attorney General Franz Kuhn, and the latter got by looking up the legal authorities which might have some bearing on the case. He has taken the matter under advisement and will not render a decision immediately.

Just a Word of Warning.

We understand that, as we close these columns (Wednesday afternoon), there is being held in this city a meeting of leading local option advocates, the purpose of which is to line up "the faithful" for the September primaries. We just want to say to understand by this we are not truly advised. But a word on the subject will not be amiss.

The SENTINEL has proven its loyalty to the local option cause in a hard-fought battle, in which the victory for the cause was most pronounced. It is ready for another battle, if necessary, on principles of decency and order as against the saloons.

But if, in the remotest degree, the cause is to force itself into county politics we shall reluctantly drop out. There are those in any reform movement of this nature who would seek to ride into office on the wave. There are doubtless such in Charlevoix county.

The local option cause is able to stand on its own legs and win as any other fight it is forced upon us, but there are hundreds of men in all parties who will be alienated from the cause if it is mixed up with politics in any way. If these leaders wish to weaken the cause they could not select a better way to do it, and the enemy will make the most of it.

Keep the forces "lined up" strictly on anti saloon principles and let politics alone in that connection, or the good ship of local option will bring up on the rocks.

MCCLELLAN COMING

The Next Governor Will Cross Charlevoix County—Due to arrive Here Evening of July 6th.

Chase S. Osborn, the frank, fearless and magnetic candidate for the governorship, and without doubt the next governor of Michigan, will fly through Charlevoix county on July sixth,—not in an aviator, but in an automobile.

With a big state like Michigan to cover, rapid traveling is necessary; and it is Mr. Osborn's purpose to visit every section of the State and certainly every section of the state wants to meet Mr. Osborn.

Every day strengthens the Osborn cause. There can be no mistaking the import of the enthusiasm of the people wherever Osborn goes. The people know that Osborn's cause means reform and a new deal in State affairs. They know that Osborn means what he says and will do what he promises. Somehow, Osborn is regarded as the Roosevelt of Michigan.

He will start the day at Boyne Falls, where he will be from 9:30 a. m., until 10:30. From there he goes by automobile to Boyne City where he will address a mid-day meeting, and will then go to East Jordan, where he will speak at 3:00 p. m. He will make a stop at Ironton, where he will arrive about 5:00 and will come from that place direct to Charlevoix.

Therefore it is certain that Mr. Osborn will devote the evening to Charlevoix, and the gathering will be a rouser. An effort will be made to get everybody in from the country, but it will require very little effort—the people will come where Osborn is without any coaxing.

The meeting will be at the opera house, and the committee having the matter in charge is sparing no efforts to make the event one that will long be remembered as a record breaker.

Chase S. Osborn is one of the cleanest, brainiest and most attractive men in the field of Michigan politics. He has never been an office-seeker, and his present candidacy is the result of a general demand throughout the state of those who have watched him and observed in him the man of the hour. He belongs to no clique, and has the courage to talk plainly concerning the evils and shortcomings of existing conditions. He is an eloquent and thoughtful speaker, and is tho

CHAPTER X.

When Zelda called her father came duly upon the table, he answered eagerly that it was in the Dameron libe. It was an old-fashioned room, like lobbying, with a basement and a short piazza which ran along one side of it. It was to honor Colonelcolo, or the colonel, that the Dameron family had built the lobbyes that sugar building of a hundred years ago. Zelda found the glad tidings in the Dameron. Black Frank, the colored man, was seated in the lobby of lively small attitude and had nearly gone to the land of nod when Zelda came in the house and in the lobby. Frank was the porter, a janitor, a lady's man, the proprietor, a quasi-relative, with a very high opinion of his own looks and paper and national blood in his veins. He was a black man of the Dameron lobby, or a black Zelda, greeted him thus thoughtfully: "Frank, I want you to go down to the lobby and get your father. Tell him I want him to come to the house at once. Tell him I'm in trouble and want to talk to him about it. Do as I tell you and don't stop to talk to anybody on the way."

"Yes, Miss Zelda, I'll go right along," said the obsequious Frank, who was a great relief to Zelda, who was in no mood for the lobby. Frank was a good messenger, and she knew he would not stop to talk to the lobby. Frank was a good messenger, and she knew he would not stop to talk to the lobby. Frank was a good messenger, and she knew he would not stop to talk to FAMOUS FISH EATERS.

The Love of Sea Food Was a Mania In the Time of Lucullus.

Many famous persons both in modern and ancient times have been known as devoted fish eaters. Gatta, queen of Syria, was so fond of fish that she ordered all caught within the limit of her kingdom to be brought to her in order that she might be continually supplied with the choicest quality. Philoxenus of Cytheria, on learning from his physician that his most die of indigestion from having eaten excessively of a delicious fish, sobbed, "Be it so, but before I go allow me to finish what remains."

Athens was a city of fish eaters, and its cooks were famous for their knowledge of cooking fish. The wise writers of the day spent much time in recording recipes for preserving fish in salt, oil or bottle. There was a law in the city that forbade a dishmonger to sit down until he had disposed of all his stock on the ground that a standing position made his more submissive and inclined to sell at a reasonable price.

The Romans inherited from the Greeks their love for fish. Heavy soldiers were fed on fish, her generals on fish, her senators were epicures in fish and her emperors recognized no dish more desirable than fish.

Lucullus caused a canal to be cut through a mountain near Naples to bring up the sea and its fishes to the center of the gardens of his sumptuous villa. The love of fish in those days was a mania. The red mullet was prized beyond all food. A sauce called garum, made from the entrails and blood of mackerel and other fishes, brought high prices. Small great prices were offered the man who could make a similar sauce out of the liver of the red mullet.

In more modern times kings have been known for their fondness of fish. In the reign of Edward II. in England sturgeon could be served only on the king's table. In France dishmongers were licensed by the King. Louis XII. was so fond of fish he appointed six fishmongers to supply his table. Francis I. had twenty-two and Henry the Great twenty-four.

Under the reign of Louis XIV. fish eating became as popular at the French court as it had ever been in Rome. A story is told that when Sen. Fouquet arrive from the seacoast in time for a grand dinner being given by the Prince of Condé to the king the prince's chef, an Italian, had prepared no fish, was so chagrined he ran to his chamber, took his sword and pierced his heart.—Boston Globe.

AS THE WRIGHT AEROPLANE WILL LOOK.

This gives a good idea of how the Wright aeroplanes to be seen at the State Fair, Sept. 19-26th, will appear. Recent improvements permit of much better handling of the airships than ever, and now circling a grand stand is a matter of easy achievement for the aviators. The aeroplanes will remain at all times in sight of the spectators. This will be the first appearance of the planes in Michigan.

RETURNED THE CHANGE.

An Experience on a Train Between Metz and Paris.

"For scrupulous care and trouble taken to return change I have never heard of anything that equaled an experience of mine on the railroad between Metz and Paris," said a national guardsman the other day. "I had been studying the battlefields about Metz, and when I decided to get back to Paris I converted most of the money I had left into francs.

"It was a hot day in August, and the second class compartments were so crowded that I decided as we stopped at a town near the French border to change to a first class coach. There was a supplement to pay, and the only German money I had was in twenty-mark pieces. The official who made the transfer did not have the proper change, and while I was waiting for him to come back with the 12 marks and some pfennigs that belonged to me the train moved off, and I gave my money up for gone.

"About 11 o'clock that night the train stopped at a town about halfway to Paris. There was only one other occupant of my compartment, a man who had got on at some station in Germany. Soon after we stopped the door of the compartment was opened and a man jumped within and we had given twenty mark pieces to be changed at the station in Germany. I replied that I was the individual.

"'Come with me, mein herr,' he said. So I alighted and followed him into the station office.

"There I found that my change had been telegraphed on, and he had the sum due me carefully counted out. There were a lot of receipts and things to sign, and the train was held up at least fifteen minutes on my account, but I got my money and a lot of satisfaction."—New York Sun.

POISING OF THE TROUT.

Its Resemblance to the Hovering of the Kestrel in the Air.

As the kestrel is to the clouds so is the trout in the crystal waters. Both wonderful and iron display that unglad poising as if suspended by invisible threads—only now and then, when cross currents are encountered, is a wavering and iron display that indicates that life itself is not in suspense.

A brief agitation of the trout's tail, a switching of the trout's tail—the cross current is mastered, and lifeless fish poises motionless again. And as when walking along we are jarred up in our fresh wonder by the sight of the hovering kestrel, so we must needs pause on a bridge when there is a trout in the stream below.

He looks his best, polished with head to the stream—a slender form against the background of smooth brown pebbles and waving emerald weeds. Leaning over the bridge with eyes on the trout, a vision is conjured—an aluminum drops on the water, then a black fine tightness, there is a scar from the rod, a foul hook, here follows a dazzling dance of vermilion spots against the green of the hook.

Or as we come to the bridge on a winter's day we think we hear a mighty plashing of water over the pebbles, which turns out to be the play of thirty or forty trout, the play of the last round of some eager courtship. As they come to the surface, coiling and wallowing, their great fat sides look twice as big as when seen through the clear water. They almost make a dam across the stream as they jostle each other, seeking for the choicest places on the spawning bed.—London Standard.

Forgetful.

Absentminded Annette belongs to a club of young women in the west end of London. She went to a bridal shower given by the club and left her present at home.

"I'm so sorry that I forgot it," she said.

"Never mind," the other girls told her. "You can send it around later."

A few weeks later the club gave another bridal shower, and again Annette left her gift at home.

"Do you know what I've done?" she cried when she discovered her mistake. "I've forgotten my present!"

No one felt disposed to help her out.

"But, then," she added, "didn't one of the girls forget her present last time, and didn't we say it would be all right if she sent it around later? I'm sure that happened to somebody."—Newark News.

Chamois Tobogganers.

"Chamois tobogganers do the sleep white slides of the Alps with the skill of Norwegian skeers," said a mountaineer. "I know, he cried on, "for I have seen them do it. I spent a winter at St. Moritz, and on many a moonlight trip I saw a chamois lie on his back and go skimming like the wind down a white precipice—a pretty sight. The creature's paws would be folded on his breast, his head uplifted and frowning, would keep watch. Thus he'd slide down a half mile steep, growing smaller and smaller and finally disappearing in a whirl of snow."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A Real Disappointment.

"Yes, sir," Uncle Ellen said to his nephew, "there are all kinds of disappointments in this world, Charley, and some of 'em are worse'n others. But they're all jest ways o'treatin' bad for a minute, I guess. But the disappointment I experienced I ever saw is when I feel and feel like sneezin' and it won't sneeze! That kind of gives you a notion of how all disappointments feel till you get over them."—Youth's Companion.

Smoking in Tibet.

Smokers in Tibet make a pipe in the floor, of two holes, connected by an underground channel. In one hole is placed lighted tobacco, while a reed is stuck in the other, to keep the smoker from bending his back too much. Smaller groundhog pipes are been used by prisoners the world over.

DETROIT INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION.

"An exhibition of home products starting in extent is what the Detroit Industrial Exposition, June 20th to July 6th, will be. The big buildings will have the beautiful gateways are ready, and the beautiful gateways are ready, machinery and exhibits are moving into place, and the opening promises to be a gala affair.

"Wayne Tent Pavilion, Detroit's largest hall, has been supplemented by an equally large building erected for Exposition purposes and completely equipped.

"This exhibition of home products will be one of the largest displays of the kind, including an automobile show, a fine art fair, a machinery display, a furniture display, an electrical show and other features. It will be a rare opportunity to see what makes Detroit. On the river front a spacious garden will be a charming and unique feature, enhance decorative floral decorations and brilliant electrical illuminations. Two concert bands will give afternoon and evening concert programs, playing simultaneously in different parts of the Exposition grounds.

"Dorlis, Germany, U. S."

"Say, is this letter addressed right?" asked a subject of Germany, holding up an elaborately decorated envelope before the eyes of a postman the other day. The latter surveyed the writing closely. There were a name, a street and then the city and country, "Berlin, Germany." Below were written in bold characters the letters "U. S." "Oh, you don't mean it, S' an there," remarked the postman. "Berlin, Germany, isn't in the United States." "I don't mean United States in U. S.," countered the man from Esther Wilhelmina land. "I mean the letter This friend of mine lives on the seed floor."—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Little Pet.

An investigator will not longer allow the capacity of a well loaded bull hearth low for humanity to get dinner on the premises.

"Why," replied the expert, "we always cook dinner for the bull."

"Good, a bull! I'm convinced of the value of your discovery. I have long felt that humanity should be provided with proteinous food for all events."—London Graphic.

THE NEW EDUCATION.

Practical Instruction in Agriculture in Pennsylvania Schools.

There are ten thousand high schools in the country and fewer still where practical agriculture make up the curriculum without gap, but everywhere monthly with the regular high school teachers.

Such, however, is the case in the school high school of Greenfield, Pa., which has a course regular in farm studies where practical things are taught and where about one half the pupils, including some of the town people, elect to take this course.

The feature of instruction which sharply distinguishes this high school course from the ordinary lies in the prominence given to outdoor practical work. The class studies the plants exactly as the students personal experiences of farm life and work, and the pupils are required to keep a record of their work and results. Thus the pupils are enabled to put into practice the principles taught. While the school building is secured in the town, every good farm within a mile is at the disposal of the students, and they are required to make an inventory every farm and garden in the village and the surrounding farms and labor highways there for this first year. In the second year the students use material and extend vastly the reading force of the high school. In the second year the pupils good the stock either being their property or that of their parents, or enrolled by the class in agriculture or allow the class to do for them. It is said to be a sure thing for a good horse or cow to come to the school farm one day without being examined by the class and a report made on it. The class goes to the dairy farm, the dairy farmer is the teacher, and the pupils take the milk, test the cows and the milk, and the pupils are required to pay the most careful attention to the cleanliness of the cows and between the tight lips of horse and the dairy farmer. It is said that the cows only for the class, but for the sense of sense of harmony and cleanliness and order. The class also goes to the local butcher if a butcher is in the town, and the pupils studying the best type of beef cattle, the various cuts, the relative values, etc.

Into this little village high school, which says such $22,000 a year for salaries, and $1,000 a year for the purchase of farm and other equipment specialists will be brought in to illustrate the material such as few technical high schools could afford.

MISSOURI SUITS ASK OUSTER OF PACKERS

TRUST CHARGE IS THE BASIS

Armour, Morris and Swift Co's Accused as Principals in Trade Conspiracy.

Attorney General Elliott W. Major of Missouri began ouster proceedings against five meat packing companies Monday by filing quo warranto petitions in the Supreme Court at Jefferson City. The corporations attacked are the Armour Packing Company, Morris & Co., Swift & Co., Hammond Packing Company and the St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision Company. The Armour, Swift and Morris companies are accused of violating the anti-trust law, and with the Hammond and St. Louis companies, as subsidiary concerns of the National Packing Company, of conspiracy to control the business in Missouri.

The five companies are named in two petitions which ask that the corporations be excluded from all corporate rights, that their licenses be forfeited and that all or such portion of their property as the court may decree proper be confiscated, or in lieu thereof a fine be imposed. Armour, Swift and Morris are charged with having entered into a conspiracy in 1906 to control the price to be paid by retail and wholesale dealers in live stock, poultry, butter, eggs, game and agricultural products, dressed meats and provisions from the Missouri of slaughtering live stock.

THEODORE JR. WEDS

Colonel Roosevelt Present at Marriage of His Son.

Weather typical of the month of brides and roses attended the wedding of Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., whose nuptials at the pretty Episcopal Presbyterian Church in New York furnish one of the most notable society events of the season.

The capacity of the spacious edifice where the wedding took place was taxed to accommodate the guests. Then attendance of the groom's distinguished father so stimulated popular interest in the function that there were crowds thousands in the vicinity of the church edifice long before the hour set for the ceremony.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry M. Sanders, a great uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. Gordon Russell of Cincinnati. A musical program was given while the guests were assembling. The bride was given away in marriage by her mother, Mrs. Henry Addison Alexander.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, the bride's uncle and aunt. The young couple go on their honeymoon in California, and will spend some time there. The bridal gifts were many and valuable.

The engagement of Miss Roosevelt and Miss Alexander was announced last February. The groom is 22 years of age and his bride 21.

PATTEN IS INDICTED

Chicago Trader and Seven Others Held for Conspiracy.

James A. Patten and seven others were indicted in New York by a special Federal grand jury, charged with conspiracy to restrict of trade under the Sherman anti-trust law. This is the first fruit of the government's attempt to prove that manipulating the cotton market is against the law. It is alleged that the accused men formed a pool for the purpose of cornering and arbitrarily fixing the price of cotton. Those indicted are: James A. Patten, Thomas S. Sabin, Frank H. Hayne, William P. Brown, M. H. Rothschild, Sydney J. Brown, Robert M. Thomson, Charles A. Little.

The first five gave bail of $5,000, as required, through counsel. For the other three, who were neither present in court nor represented by lawyers bench warrants were issued.

Patten has been known for years as a corn and wheat speculator, and more latterly as the "cotton king." Frank H. Hayne and William P. Brown are well known cotton operators of New Orleans and Eugene H. Scales is a leader in the same line in Texas.

$300,000 LOST IN OIL BLAST.

Fire starting from an explosion in the architectural iron works of the Hansell-Elcock company, 236 place and Fulton street, Chicago, shortly after 12 o'clock in the morning, resulted in an estimated loss of $300,000 to the iron concern and damage of $25,000 to the plant of the C. B. Judy Company, adjoining, directly in the rear. An investigation will be made by the police of a rumor that the explosion was caused by sympathizers of disgruntled iron workers who suffered great loss in their troubles at the Hansell-Elcock plant.

STATEHOOD BILL PASSES SENATE

Action Insures Admission of Arizona and New Mexico Union.

Two more stars, making forty-eight in all, will be added to the American flag as a result of the action of the United States Senate in unanimously passing the bill granting statehood to Arizona and New Mexico.

The House having already acted, the measure went to a conference committee, which will arrange the differences in the two measures adopted, and submit for the approval of Congress and the President the act under which the territories will be admitted into the Union.

The Democrats had feared the Republicans would endeavor to postpone the report of the committee, thus killing statehood for the session. But they received positive assurance that delay would not be attempted and that Congress would not adjourn without action.

The bill passed victoriously a struggle of years on the part of Arizona and New Mexico to be admitted as separate states. Twice before they could have received statehood at the time this high privilege was accorded to Oklahoma. But the Arizonians objected to amalgamation with the New Mexicans and strenuously opposed the plan.

The terms upon which the grant is made may not meet with the full approval of the residents of the territories. They may feel that onerous conditions have been imposed in some respects, but there is not the slightest doubt but that they will accept them and lose no time in qualifying for the improved status which has been conferred.

LAW VIOLATION COSTS $45,000.

Construction Company Punished for Attempting to Bring in Aliens.

The largest judgment ever entered by a United States court in favor of the government arising out of a prosecution for attempting to bring alien laborers into this country in violation of law has been reported to the department of commerce and labor from Tucson, Ariz., where the jury rendered a verdict of $45,000. This was $1,000 the penalty fixed by statute, for each of forty-five aliens whom it was attempted to import. The defendant in the suit was a construction company of Los Angeles.

BROWNE PROSECUTION CLOSES.

Summary of Evidence Introduced to Support Bribery Charges.

As an unexpected climax to the most dramatic session of court since the opening of the Browne bribery trial in Chicago a motion fairly crammed with tense situations—State's Attorney Wayman the other day announced that the prosecution had completed its case.

The entire day's session had been one succession of victories for the State in the tangle of legal technicalities that were injected into the trial by Representative Lee O'Neil Browne's lawyers.

The evidence introduced to support the charges of bribery against Browne may be summed up as follows:

Representative Charles A. White's story told of three payments, the last of which was $850, given him at the Briggs House, amounting to $1,000, which Browne made to him to vote for Lorimer.

Representative H. J. C. Beckemeyer told of a similar cash payment, but said that there was no previous understanding.

Representative Link told that he received $1,000 of "Lorimer money," but without previous agreement.

The register of the Southern Hotel, where Browne was in the habit of stopping, showed that he was in Springfield at the time the alleged bribery was consummated.

Representative Hull testified that he had started to walk from Pontiac to Springfield, but changed his mind and took a train.

Other witnesses for the prosecution testified that the key to the better crop and trade reports received this week from the West, Northwest and Southwest, while cool, moist conditions along the Atlantic coast, now predominant, have been a bar to trade and crop developments in the East.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending June 16 were 178, as against 195 last week, 213 in the week of 1910, 234 in 1909, 165 in 1907 and 173 in 1906. Business failures in Canada for the week were 32, as against 26 last week, 23 in the week of 1910, 24 in 1909, 15 in 1907 and 17

Pomona Grange.

On June 23, Ironton grange enjoyed one of the most successful Pomona grange meetings every held in Charlevoix county. Nearly two hundred Patrons were present and from the moment that Worthy Master Mears' gavel fell, there was something "doing." With but one exception all officers were present. After a brief fifth degree session in which the standing committees were instructed to get "busy," a most bountiful spread furnished by the local grange was enjoyed by all. After dinner Worthy Lecturer Walter Black presented a literary program of high order. Of particular merit were two addresses, one by Mrs. Dora Stockman, of Lansing, Mich. "The Farm Art Gallery." Mrs. Stockman proved a very pleasing speaker and handled her subject admirably; she convincing her hearers of the wisdom and necessity of cultivating a deeper appreciation of the artistic side of farm life. Brother E. B. Ward's presentation of the plan and purpose of the Straits of Mackinac Association was closely followed and the occasion will no doubt add substantial support to a very deserving and progressive movement to secure the proper and equitable marketing of Michigan fruit.

An excellent essay on "Character" prepared and read by Mrs. Josephine Ingalls, was order published in local papers. Resolutions of sympathy and respect relative to the sudden death of St. Clara Wagner, of Boyne River grange, were adopted and ordered published.

The public were admitted during the first half of the evening session and were entertained by a varied program of songs, recitations, music, recitation or etc., furnished by the local grange and others. Witty and interesting talks were given by Mrs. Stockman, H. S. Gaskey, J. H. Milford and others. Several made pointed reference to the present status of local option in Charlevoix County, and the manner in which their remarks were received was indicative of universal satisfaction with prevailing conditions as compared with previous conditions.

Brother Nat Burns, E. H. Clark and M. J. Staley were elected as Committee on State Grange Exhibits.

Twenty two applicants for fifth degree membership were initiated in an impressive manner by Marion Centre Degree team. A committee of three composed of Bros. Frank Hammond, John A. Newville, and John H. Hogle, has been appointed to arrange time and place for Grange Rallies. A rising vote of thanks was given Marion Centre Degree team for their excellent work, and Ironton Grange for their hospitable entertainment.

The next Pomona meeting will be held with Norwood grange, August 18. The special order at this meeting will be the adoption of new By-Laws. As several important changes will be recommended by the committees on By-laws, every Pomona member should make it a point to attend this meeting.

H. A. BRINSNALL, Sec'y.

Resolutions

Adopted by Charlevoix County Pomona Grange, June 23, 1910.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, on June 13, 1910, to remove from our midst Sister Clara Wagner, of Boyne River Grange, No. 1010, who has for many years been a most faithful and efficient member of our Order, a sympathetic and daily conduct and in her association with her fellow members the noble precepts of our Order, and Whereas, in her death our Order has sustained a great loss, therefore be it Resolved, that we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, and that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends of the deceased, looking forward to the time when broken ties will be re-united, and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, and published in each of our local newspapers.

COIN FOR INDIANS

Total Amount is $860,000 Including Principal and Interest—Bill in House for Payment

Ottawa and Chippewa Indians may get another large payment from Uncle Sam. Congressman McLaughlin introduced a bill lately permitting those Michigan Indians to go before the Court of Claims and present their case. This action follows the inquiry made by McLaughlin and by the Indian bureau at his request. The tentative in vestigation of the bureau indicates that the government owes these Indians $200,000 principal and interest at 6 per cent since 1855, aggregating about $860,000.

This payment is due under the treaty made about 1835. As originally negotiated that treaty permitted the Indians to retain certain lands in western and northern Michigan included within the boundaries of a large tract which they ceded to the whites. The senate amended that treaty to permit them to retain those lands five years, but specified and thereafter they should abandon these remaining tracts for a payment of $200,000. The treaty specified that 6 per cent interest should be paid on unpaid amounts.

Inquiries thus far made indicate that the government paid interest from 1837 to 1855, but has paid neither principal nor interest since. A final report on the facts will be prepared by the Indian bureau and given McLaughlin Saturday. If more complete inquiry confirms the tentative findings Michigan Indians will get fat payments, within a year or two. These Indians reside chiefly in the Little and Grand Traverse bay regions.

SERMON

(Copr. 1910 by Bradley Gatcherian Co. L.D.L.)

And all my body,
Henry IV., Part III., Act V., Sc. 2.

Warwick in the battle of Barnet had received his death wound. He was the wealthiest nobleman in England and the most powerful. He had been the "proud setter-up and pulter-down of kings." In his dying moments what a weak prince he was, how powerless was his wealth to save him. He realized that his years of energetic action, his ambitions and successful schemes and plots had left him absolute owner of just as much land as would hold his body's length. A sorry thought that! The greedy hoarder, the land grabber should take it to heart. Man's chief end is evidently not to hoard and possess. He must have a higher destiny or else life is a failure and not worth the living.

It was natural that Shakespeare should make Warwick speak of his wealth in terms of land. England in the fifteenth century was an agricultural country. The ideal life for every Englishman was one spent, save when he was engaged in war, on his ancestral estates. He was a king in fitness; his vassals and his tenants were his subjects. He was proud of his broad fields, his parks with oak and chestnut shady. It was the ideal of the nation. Even an actor and playwright like Shakespeare found his highest satisfaction in returning to his early home in Warwickshire and taking up the life of a country gentleman.

Land hunger is as strong in the twentieth century as it was in the fifteenth. Let a block of land be opened up for settlement in Montana or Saskatchewan and there is a mad scramble for possession. It is something to own a portion of this earth; to that extent are men kings. They have their sheep and their cattle, their men-servants and their maid-servants, their command and are obeyed.

Despite the fact that Shakespeare was himself a landowner he, in a way, despised wealth. It was so much "dirt" to him. He "prized not gain, lifty of dirty lands" for itself. It was to him a means to an end. The wealth and leisure it brought him enabled him to develop his higher nature.

Nations are so fond of the possession of territory as individuals. Tyre and Sidon, Palestine, Carthage, ancient Greece and Rome, were notorious land-grabbers, ever broadening their territory. Where are they? Their greatness is buried in the soil on which they stood. Their conquests just so much land as holds their ruins. Yet some of them have immortality. Palestine, Greece and Rome are alive and at work among the nations. Their splendid possessions, their glorious battles by sea and by land, have left but little inheritance behind; but the spiritual conquests they made, the spiritual efforts they put forth can never perish. That great library of Jewish literature, the Bible, is still the main factor in the moral development of the human race; the poetry and philosophy of Greece and Rome still have a refining and uplifting influence.

It is easy to kill the body and bury it out of sight. Spirit is as impossible to kill. The nations, which, while over-anxious about their earthly possessions, at the same time developed a soul-life, have immortality bestowed on them. A man might own a whole state or province; he might possess factories by hundreds and control armies of workmen; he might be a Croesus in wealth, yet when his death hour arrives he might be forced to cry out as did Warwick: "Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?" If he cultivate his lands to give work and food to earth's millions; if he set the wheels of his factories in motion with a creator's intent for the good of humanity,—he could end life thus fair earth with no regrets.

"Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither," said Job. He was speaking merely of the flesh. His material possessions he could not carry beyond the grave. Wordsworth's words are nearer the mark regarding the spirit:

"Trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home."

Every child is born into the world with infinite spiritual possibilities for good or evil. There is a potentially perfect being in every cradle.

When the man who has lived a righteous life faces the grim conqueror death he can do so realizing that, in so far as he wrought to bring about the brotherhood of man, in so far as he has cultivated a lofty spiritual life he can never die. Dust unto dust was never spoken of the soul. There are many graves in the world; millions upon millions of mounds that tell that they who lie beneath had to leave their hard fields and hoarded wealth. Their names are lost. But there are a few shrines; the grave of Shakespeare, the son of an illiterate glover, and the grave of Lincoln, the son of a more illiterate backwoodsman, attract the feet of many pilgrims. Their spirits still preach to humanity. Every man has in him immortal possibilities. He may possess, when he passes away, but six feet of land, or he may be a part of the infinite, his words and deeds still at work for the uplifting of mankind.

—While Charlevoix had no celebration the 4th, we were not without considerable excitement. Late in the afternoon, while the prize light bulletins were coming, an alarm called out both hose companies. The blaze was at the residence of W. A. Smith, on Park Avenue. An oil stove went wrong, and for a moment the trouble was very threatening; but Earl Young and J. L. Crane went in and dragged the burning stove to the yard. Damage small, but sure big. Within an hour another alarm called the department to the old Williams bowl factory. Small damage likewise.

—The Butte, (Mont) Miner of recent date gives an account of the choosing of George F. Downer as Superintendent of the public schools with 235 teachers and 8000 students. There were 75 applications for the position and although Mr. Downer had not applied for the place, he was the unanimous choice of the board of education. The paper says this of him. "Mr. Downer has been principal of the high school for three years and in that time has placed the high school in the front rank of institutions of the grade in the west. He is young, progressive and fully abreast of the times, is widely known and popular and a hard working and energetic laborer in school matters. He has been especially active in high school athletics and has given to Butte some splendid baseball, football and track teams." Geo. F. In administering the Sacrament of confirmation, His Lordship was assisted by the Franciscan Fathers Rev. Stan Bart O. F. M. and Rev. Burchard Dietrich O. F. M. Before the children received the sacrament the Bishop examined them in the Christian doctrine, which examination was very good in every respect.

If you Want Your Money's Worth Smoke Mr. Oshorn

Mr. Osborn probably has as many loyal friends, on his own account, aside from politics, as any man in Michigan.

He makes friends wherever he goes; not only because of his sterling personal qualities, but because he has brains and moral courage.

Moreover, he is thoroughly familiar with State affairs, and knows what he is talking about, and is the personification of frankness and sincerity.

An Additional Word of Warning.

The SENTINEL has been criticized in certain quarters for its editorial of last week on the subject of the recent local option "conference" in this city. The charge is made that we misrepresented the facts.

We answer the criticism by emphasizing the warning. There is no question but that the Charlevoix conference, and conferences held at Boyne City and East Jordan, were called for a purpose involving county politics. At one of these conferences certain candidates for county offices were "endorsed." There is no doubt but that action in any way threatens local option, and there is no movement on foot to re-submit the question. Then, wherefore local option "conferences?" County politics and nothing else.

In the recent fight for local option the editor of this paper was as near the firing line of battle as he could get. He fought as hard as he could in the cause of decency, law and order, against the saloons. He proved his sincerity by refusing saloon money to publish saloon literature. Yet he was not invited to attend the conferences. Why? Because he is a newspaper man, and publicity was not desired. They call it the "Civic League." There is not a man in Charlevoix county who was nearer the fighting line than the writer, yet he has not been invited to join the "Civic League." Why? Because a reporter in the camp might frustrate the purposes and work of the League. This kind of business, gentlemen, is what will wreck local option if continued.

One of the strongest factors in the general awakening of the people on the saloon question was the saloon in politics. The influence of its liquor interests on legislation and local affairs became alarming. The saloons were driven out of business, and the votes did not all come from total abstainers. There are very many local option supporters in Charlevoix county whose souls are not entirely absorbed in the local option cause to the exclusion of their party fealty or their loyalty to political friends and associates, who will quickly resent the entrance of the Civic League into any phase of county politics. Local option cannot afford to lose this class of supporters.

The Civic League seems to have fixed its eagle eye upon the offices of sheriff and prosecutor, and railroad caboose is the rallying influence. Law enforcement seems to be worrying the League. In the enforcement of law the initiative is with the people, and the enforcement of negligent or corrupt officials the lash is in the hands of the people, and the SENTINEL would not be the last to apply it.

There is no need of any "Keep Your-Mouth-Shut" clubs in the cause of local option. Round table, closed-corporation "conferences," from which the press is excluded, cannot fail to be retroactive. Let the Civic League stand watch on the ramparts for the approach of the enemy. Let it keep its eye open for re-submission movements, and keep its nose out of local politics, or there is trouble ahead.

SENTINEL if not supporting any candidate for primary nomination to any county office, but it will support the republican county ticket in November, regardless of the opinion of the Civic League or any other league. In a review of the record the republicans of Charlevoix county have no need to apologize. Michigan has not produced a public prosecutor who has been more tireless or merciless in the prosecution of violators of the liquor law, when sufficient evidence was forthcoming, than A. B. Nicholas. The sheriff can only make an arrest when the prosecutor directs, and it is as much the duty of the prosecutor to protect the treasury as it is to prosecute.

MOTOR BOATS

New Regulations Governing Their Use—In Effect July 9th.

The custom officers within the past week received the new motor boat laws and we are herewith giving a synopsis of them. All motor boats are divided into classes, as follows: Class 1, anything under 26 feet in length; Class 2, those of 26 to 40 feet in length, Class 3, 40 to 65 feet in length.

Boats in Class 1 shall carry the following lights: A white light aft, showing all around the horizon, and in the bow part, lower than the white light, a combined lantern, showing red to port and green to starboard.

Class 2 shall carry the white light aft, and also a white headlight, as near the stem as possible showing an arc of 20 points of the compass, that is straight ahead and 2 points abaft the beam on either side. They shall also carry the red port light and the green starboard light in screens 18 inches long. The glass or lense of the headlight shall be not less than 19 square inches.

Class 3 is the same as class 2, excepting that the white headlight shall have a glass with 31 inches of surface and sidelights of not less than 25 square inches, and the screens must be 24 inches in length. After July 1st 1911 all classes 2 and 3 boats of class 2 and 3 must have fire-rail or fluted glass.

Every motor boat must have a whistle or sound producing appliance which is capable of producing a blast of two seconds duration. In addition to this an efficient fog horn must be carried on classes 2 and 3.

Boats in class 2 shall carry an anchient bell, but no size is specified. Class 3 must have at least an 8 inch bell. Nothing is said about a bell in the first class.

Every motor boat must carry life-preservers, life belts, ring buoys or buoyant cushions sufficient to sustain about every person on board. Where devices other than the regulation preserver are used they must be submitted to local inspectors. Boats carrying passengers for hire must carry the regulation life preserver and be in charge of a licensed person. The law provides that the preserver shall be so placed as to be readily accessible.

Section 6 provides that every boat and also every vessel propelled by machinery other than steam, more than 65 feet in length, shall carry ready for immediate use the means of promptly and effectually extinguished burning gasoline.

The above laws go into effect on July 9th, 1910, and vessels must be equipped by that date.

MILLIONS IN IT.

Iron and Chemical Interests of Michigan in Big Trust.

Western Michigan and the upper peninsula are concerned in what is probably the largest trust company operation in Michigan in connection with state management.

The Union Trust company has just closed a $20,000,000 deal involving the sale of the old Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company of Michigan to the newly organized Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company, incorporated under New York laws.

There is much interest in inner financial and corporation circles over the probability that back of the transaction stands the Standard Oil group, for heading the list of directors of the new Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company is F. M. Harrison, president of the United States Industrial Alcohol company, a large Standard Oil subsidiary, and the undertaxed main purpose of the new company is said to develop the output of wood or industrial alcohol and of acetate of lime.

The properties transferred consist of six charcoal iron furnaces, with some chemical and charcoal plants at Manistique, Mich.; Newberry, Mich.; Boyne City, Mich.; Elk Rapids, Mich.; Chocolay, Mich., and Ashland, Wis. Plants at a number of these places will also be added to the new concern, and a timely new plant is to be built at Chocolay.

An inventory of the properties made by experts in their several lines gives total values of $6,558,863. The company has set aside $1,000,000 to rebuild and remodel the charcoal plants at Ashland, Manistique, Newberry and Elk Rapids. Modern methods have made the kiln method obsolete, owing to the alcohol and acetate of lime waste, hence new retort plants.

It is estimate that the new and remodeled plants will have an annual output of 198,000 tons of charcoal pig, from at $19 per ton, or $693,000; 3,420,000 gallons of wood alcohol, at 29c the gallon, or $789,600; 61,560,000 at 16c per pound, or $984,960; operation of Yale iron ore mine, $75,000; estimated net earnings after all allowances, $1,923,420.

In addition to the properties acquired from the old company, the new company is acquiring 137,551 acres of hardwood forest land in fee; cordwood stumpage contracts covering 190,028 acres, from which the cordwood has not been removed, giving a total hardwood supply of 301,700 acres. The new company is also acquiring railroad branches and spurs aggregating 35 miles and a boat in the Yale mine in Bessemer, Mich.; in which 570,000 tons of ore are blocked out.

The capitalization is in the total sum of $10,000,000, of which $3,375,000 is in common and $1,625,000 in preferred stock. The authorized bond issue is $10,000,000, but at present $6,500,000 of the bonds will be issued and $3,500,000 left in the treasury for future requirements.

Officers will be as follows: President, John Joyce, Boston, vice president and general manager, W. H. Matthews, superintendent of the Boyne City Chemical Co., Boyne City, Mich.; secretary, L. F. Knowles, Boyne City, Mich.; treasurer, to be named by Dominion Iron & Steel Co. interest.

Mr. Matthews and Mr. Knowles will make their residence in Detroit, where the general business offices will be maintained.

Local Option Meeting

Representatives of local option from East Jordan, Boyne City, Charlevoix and surrounding townships met at Van Pelt's hall Wednesday afternoon last to consider the advisability of forming a permanent county organization in the interest of local option.

After a full discussion of the subject, it was decided to appoint a committee to draft articles of organization for a permanent county committee to be submitted at an adjourned meeting.

The number in attendance and the interest manifested in the discussion prove beyond question that the advocates of local option have lost none of their interest in the cause and the results thus far attained have fallen to the highest expectations of its advocates.

REGULATING THE USE OF ARMS.

That is an interesting and a suggestive proposal which has been made at Alsbury—to legislate against the common use and even ownership of the ingenious device which has been invented for slaying the sons of firearms, says New York Tribune. That device is said to be so effective as to make the discharge of a rifle of a pistol nearly noiseless, without decreasing the lethal effectiveness of the weapon. It is easily conceivable that such an attachment to military firearms would be of inestimable advantage in warfare, a noiseless rifle using smokeless powder giving practically no information as to the location of the user. But it is obvious that precisely the same thing would make a gun or a pistol a far more dangerous tool for the use of assassins. It may, indeed, be said that the use of such a silencer for a silencing device, save in military doings and in actual war, it was from that citizens now and then need to use firearms against burglars, highwaymen and others it should be obvious that the most desirable and most effective arm for such purposes is handicap and hurry. People are petty creatures, if they are not getting killed, and the former is a good one of the latter. They have plenty of time to work at that that is worth while, or even to play, and it is one of the wholesome satisfactions of a healthy life that people in this country play as hard as they work. Hurry, worry and pleasure have turned their backs upon the knocker, setting their faces to helpful ends. So if you are at outs with somebody settle the matter with him; do not bother me with it. There is the answer of the world to day, a good one, too. Even in sports this wholesome spirit prevails; the deed it denotes there perhaps more than anywhere else. It takes the form of insolence, it is as pronounced. It is the spirit of a manly age, a big age and fast, too big and fast to slow up for the little fellow.

Practical jokes are in very bad taste and not at all as funny as their perpetrators seem to think. Sometimes such jokes invite legal punishment. Down in Panama a party of would be humorists circulated the story that scientists had predicted that the country would be visited in the night by a great shock and that Colon would be wiped out of existence by a tidal wave. Coming on the heels of the Costa Rican disaster, this prophecy threw the ignorant and superstitious into terror, and there was something of a panic. Of course the convulsions did not occur. But the Panama authorities took the matter in hand and the joker is now in jail awaiting the result of proceedings that will be instituted against him. And if these humorists get a round sentence the general verdict will be that it served them right.

The war against the white plague will never be effective while contagion is allowed to be free and wantonly spread by expectoration in public places, especially on the streets, where all lungs are exposed to infection. Not until measures are taken severe enough to check, if not to abolish, the habit, objectionable both to health and to public decency, will the fight against tuberculosis be taken seriously.

If the grandsons of the late Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, live to be fifty, they will come into possession of their grandfather's real estate, which it is estimated by that time will be worth $100,000,000, at the age of fifty the happy heirs will probably have outlived their boyish foibles, so that they will work the money.

There is in the physiological laboratory of the University of Pennsylvania a machine that measures the mental capabilities of any person to whom it is applied. It would probably register zero if applied to persons who pay money to go to shows that it is necessary for the police to try in any press.

ADJOURNS SINE DIE

FIRST REGULAR SESSION SIXTY-FIRST CONGRESS COMES TO CLOSE.

TAFT'S PROGRAM IS PASSED

President Signs Harbor Bill, But Objects to System in Vogue—Gore's Bribe Charges to Be Probed During Recess.

Washington.—With President Taft's legislative program practically carried in its entirety the first regular session of the Sixty-first congress adjourned sine die Saturday night.

Among the measures passed are the rivers and harbors bill, but sent a message to congress indicating that he had made up his mind to do so practically at the last minute of time at his disposal, so far as that measure was concerned.

Congress was warned that it must change its method of framing river and harbor improvement measures, and announcement is made that unless reforms which he suggests are carried out in future bills the withholding of executive approval will be justified, even though a rivers and harbors bill fail.

The president also signed without comment the postal savings bank bill, the omnibus public building bill, the latter carrying authorization for improvements aggregating $23,000,000, but leaving the items of appropriation to be attended to later, in connection with the regular estimates of the treasury department with respect to work authorized by congress.

There was little work remaining to be done when the two houses of congress met for the last day of the session. Practically everything of importance had been attended to except the general deficiency appropriation bill, which had become involved in the question of attempted riders made by Senator Gore of Oklahoma. The author of the recommitting of the last of the big appropriation measures in conference was the adoption of an amendment offered by Senator Gore, the Oklahoma senator had declared, providing that no contracts hereafter or hereafter made affecting the tribal money or property of the Indian tribes shall be approved until further action by congress.

With this amendment, following the adoption of a resolution in the senate to have the Indian affairs committee investigate the contracts involved in the Gore charges, the general deficiency bill was passed by both houses. The one thing left pending when congress adjourned was the Appalachian forest reserve measure, upon which opponents in the senate prevented a vote.

For ten days after the president received his amendment to the bill, according to an announcement made in the White House, he did not take his business matters—make no appointments and have no political conferences, devoting the time to rest and recreation.

The only touch of excitement in the closing hours of the house came when Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, arose to a question of personal privilege and charged Representative Graham, in investigation of the charges of fraud and perjury in Indian contracts, with introducing an amendment, offered by Representative Carter, more specific and stronger, was preferred by the house after prominent debate, which developed nothing of importance, except a widespread sentiment that a thorough inquiry should be made.

After a fight which had lasted almost from the beginning of the session of congress last ended Representative Martin, Democrat, of Colorado succeeded in securing an investigation by congress of his charges of fraud and maladministration in the sale of friar lands in the Philippines and of the entire interior department of the Philippine government by the house committee on insular affairs.

1,500 IN SHIP FIRE PERILS

Four Dead, Number Seriously Injured and 400 Slightly Hurt—Result of Burning of Excursion Steamer.

La Crosse, Wis.—Four persons are dead, a number seriously injured and about 400 slightly burned in attempting to escape from the burning hulk of the excursion steamer T. S. with 1,500 passengers aboard, which caught fire Saturday night in the Mississippi river 15 miles south of here.

The story of the rescue as told by the captain of the steamer, when it finally reached Red Ax island, where the passengers were able to escape ashore, was burning so fiercely that only 200 of the 1,500 aboard were able to go ashore on the gangplank. The other 1,200 or 1,300 passengers were forced from over the rail into water four or five feet deep and wade ashore, suffering frightful until they were able to reach the main land.

POSTAL BANK BILL PASSED

TAFT'S "BIG STICK" POLICY BRINGS SENATE TO TERMS.

Disposal of the Deposits Was the Main Issue on Which Senators Clashed.

Washington.—Jacking only the signature of President Taft to become a law, the final step toward postal savings was taken Wednesday when the senate concurred in the house postal savings bank after voting down a number of amendments.

President Taft's action in assuming "blanketing" policy is regarded as having made the vote a certainty.

The vote was 44 to 25. The bill now goes to President Taft without a conference.

On the main issue of the legislation relating to the disposal of deposits in postal banks the house bill concurred in by the senate provides that 65 per cent may be redeposited in the local banks and 50 per cent may be used for the purchase of bonds backed by the taxing power of the national government. There is nothing arbitrary about either of these provisions, however. Five per cent of the deposits will be retained as a reserve fund.

As security for deposits in local banks, bonds backed by national, state and municipal government and other securities approved by the trustees may be used.

The house bill creates a board of trustees consisting of the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general, who are vested with discrimination in the administration of the system, including the designation of post offices as postal savings banks.

Deposits in these banks by one person shall not extend more than $100 a month, or a total of $500 on which interest shall be paid at the rate of two per cent a year. An account may be opened with one dollar but stamps may be purchased in the denomination of ten cents for those desiring to accumulate money to be deposited.

At the request of the deputy government bonds in amount of $20, $50, $100, $500 and $1000 may be purchased with his deposit, the bonds to bear interest at 2½ per cent. These bonds will be redeemable on refunding of the $4,000,000 of three per cent government bonds outstanding and a new issue of Panama canal bonds. The banks will be required to pay 2½ per cent. Interest on postal bank funds deposited with them.

GOV. HARMON RENOMINATED

Plan to Pledge Candidate for Senate Defeated, in Ohio Democratic Convention.

Dayton, O.—The following resolution, indorsing Gov. Judson Harmon for the presidency in 1912, was adopted by the Ohio Democratic convention after the renomination of Mr. Harmon for governor by acclamation: "We invite the attention of the nation to Judson Harmon and the work he is doing for Ohio. Two years hence it will have been completed, then we can spare him for larger duties. He believes that his duty consists in working on that belief at home and would act upon it in larger fields. A high sense of duty provides his only motives for official actions and his sense of justice alone compels judgment. Firmness and strength mark him the man to supplant vacillation and weakness. The nation needs a real man, and the Ohio Democracy here presents and indorses for the presidency in 1912 Judson Harmon."

Attie Pomerene of Canton was nominated for lieutenant governor on the second ballot and the vote was made unanimous without finishing the roll call.

The proposition to indorse a candidate for United States senator was defeated by a vote of 840 to 254.

LANDIS QUASHES INDICTMENT

FREES NATIONAL PACKING COMPANY AND SUBSIDIARY FIRMS.

Sustains Demurrer on Technical Grounds—Orders Special Grand Jury at New Hearing.

Chicago.—The indictment against the National Packing company and fifteen subsidiary corporations charging them with conspiracy to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was knocked out Thursday when Judge Kenesaw M. Landis in the United States district court sustained the demurrer filed against the indictment by the so-called beef trust.

A special venire of seventy-five men was ordered called for July 14. From this venire a grand jury will be drawn and a second investigation of the packing companies begun.

In his decision sustaining the demurrer of the government indictment Judge Landis said:

"The most substantial search of this indictment fails to disclose the presence of a charge that during the statutory period the defendants have conspired with each and anything else with interstate commerce, or that they done anything having any direct or material connection with it, and the is not clothed with authority to supply, indirectly, by inference, the complete omission of such a fundamental element of the offense.

"Title fatal weakness might have been obviated by including the charge, had the evidence warranted it, that the defendants, or their respective officers or agents, did something, as, for instance, fixed prices, controlled output, divided territory, or the like, which effected a restraint of interstate commerce being carried on within the three years' period.

"The general averment that the defendants engaged in a combination in restraint of interstate trade is, of course, a conclusion of law, therefore insufficient. The demurrer must be sustained."

GEN. FUNSTON NEAR DEATH

Army Officer Dangerously Ill of Heart Disease at His Home in Kansas.

Leavenworth, Kan.—Gen. Frederick Funston, commander of the army service schools here, is dangerously ill with an attack of heart disease at his home here.

General Funston's condition is such that the post army physicians said the wounded soldier is in a critical state in constant attendance upon him. Mrs. Funston, who is in California, was notified of the general's condition Friday.

General Funston is suffering from angina pectoris. It was learned that he has been subject to heart trouble for some time, and it is believed that the heat of the last week brought on the present severe attack.

This the colonel denied, characterizing the report as the "scandalous infamy of a scoundrel."

Standard Reduces Oil Prices.

New York.—The wholesale prices for refined oil have been reduced from one and one-half cents to one cent a gallon by the Standard Oil company, making the prevailing price through out the country from seven and one half cents a gallon. The standard controls more than seventy per cent of the refined output of the country and it was readily be seen what such a reduction in price means to the great corporation.

Steal $5,000 From a Bank.

Boston.—Under a search warrant for thieves who stole $5,000 worth of Austrian and German paper currency from the private bank of Julius Rotteburg while the bank was crowded Friday, the money has been placed in a show window.

Public Building Bill Passed.

Washington.—The house adopted the conference report on the public buildings bill, which disposes of that measure. The bill now goes to the president.

TRIUMPH FOR AMERICANS

German Campaign of Slander Against the Deutsche Vacuum Oil Company Fails.

Berlin.—The long and venomous campaign waged in the newspapers and rival industrial interests against one of the German branches of the Standard Oil company—the Deutsche Vacuum Oil company—has been seen brought to a victorious end for the Americans involved.

A well-known Berlin newspaper for months printed such a series of attacks on the "American graft methods" alleged to have been practised by the vacuum company in the conduct of its business that the public prosecutor of Hamburg felt constrained to make an official investigation with a view to eventual indictment. The prosecutor has just concluded his investigation, especially of the work of A. L. Quarles, American manager of the German company's sales department, and announced that he will not proceed further in the inquiry further.

The evidence not warranting prosecution was found against Mr. Quarles, who is well known in Berlin, the inquiry will be borne by the state.

The result of the investigation certainly will be humiliating to the rival German interests in Germany.

It is not the first time that Germans, finding themselves unable to compete with Americans or ordinary virtue, have resorted to slander.

SAY CHARLTON IS INSANE

Alienists Who Examined Wife Murderer Declare He Is Irresponsible for His Acts.

New York.—Peter Charlton, self-confessed slayer of his wife, Mrs. Mary Castle Charlton, whose body stuffed in a trunk he tossed into Lake Como, Italy, may escape punishment for his crime.

Powerful influences were put at work Friday to save the prisoner, now locked up in the Hudson county jail in Jersey City, from being extradited to Italy.

Judge Charlton the murderer's father, consulted with Frederick Fitzgerald of this city and former Senator William Hill of Hackensack, New Jersey. Hill returned on Thursday after getting word at Washington of the prisoner's plan to escape from the steamer Princess Irene at Hoboken. At this conference it was decided to fight the extradition proceedings urged by the Italian charge d'affaires in a cable-gram to his government.

The murderer's counsel have determined upon a defense of insanity based on his alleged mental troubles in this country. Four alienists visited Charlton in his cell and examined him for five hours. When they emerged they said that he is without doubt insane and that his particular species of insanity is incurable.

45,000,000 EGGS IN POOL

Newark, N. J.—Forty-five million eggs have been shipped into this city since April 1 and placed in cold storage for the speculators, to remain there until the high prices of last winter are duplicated. They were purchased at an average price of 24 cents a dozen, and the total cost is about twenty-six cents a dozen. If the eggs can be retailed in New York next winter at 45 cents a dozen—what they fetched last winter—there will be a profit of 19 cents a dozen, or a total of something over $70,000.

Actress is Drowned.

New York.—An actress, known to the stage as Alice Marion Dell Taylor, was drowned in the Hudson river when a small skiff in which she and three other theatrical people were riding was smashed by a barge. Miss Taylor's real name is Alice Dell Seidler, and her parents live in Kankakee, Ill.

Fire Destroys Town of 300.

Pond du Lac, Wis.—Allenton, a town of about 300 population on the line of railway in Washington county, was almost totally destroyed by fire Saturday. Rough estimates place the loss at from $75,000 to $100,000.

20,000 Cloakmakers Out.

New York.—Between 18,000 and 20,000 men and women cloakmakers employed by about 400 shops of the union leaders declare that the number of strikers will reach the mark of 30,000. The regular strike order is expected before July 1.

Gambling, Mayor Indicted.

Granite City, Ill.—Frank Prizevo, the mayor, was indicted Friday on the charge of maladministration in office. It is alleged he permitted gambling houses to operate.

BANDITS ROB TRAIN

EXPRESS SAFE IS LOOTED

One Woman Has Pair of Diamond Rings Torn From Her Ears by Desperado—Many Shots Fired.

Ogden, Utah.—Three masked bandits held up the second section of Oregon Short Line train No. 1, northbound, which left Ogden at 1:30 a. m. Monday at Second street, in the northern part of the city.

All of the 100 passengers in the train were robbed of valuable effects and the express messenger was compelled to deliver over the contents of his safe. The exact amount the robbers obtained has not been learned.

Two passengers and two trainmen were injured. The robbers stopped the train in a placed known as Canyon on the track. When the engineer brought the train to a standstill, the bandit leader went forward to ascertain the cause of the delay and was met with a command to "throw up" the robbers.

He was taken at the point of a gun to the express car and compelled to order the messenger to open the door. As soon as the door was opened, one of the bandits crawled in and compelled the messenger to open the safe.

After rifling the safe the robbers turned their attention to the coaches. Rear Brakeman N. B. Franklin was shot in the leg as he left the caboose. The bandits commanded him to halt, and when he refused to do so two shots were fired at him.

Franklin crawled into a ditch, where he fetched unconsciousness. After seeing that he was not watched he crawled out of the ditch and hobbled to the home of Deputy Sheriff John Hindley, who lives near the place of the robbery. The deputy sheriff at once started in pursuit of the bandits.

The train robbers went through each car in the train, relieving passengers that showed they were not armed.

While one of the desperados stood guard over Fireman Kirkwood, the other two, with revolvers drawn, went through the train, ordering each passenger to hand over his valuables.

One woman, Mrs. J. H. Hall, was relieved of a pair of diamond earrings, which were torn from her ears. A foreigner who claimed to be a Russian was attacked by the robbers. The man did not understand what was going on and was beaten with the butt of a revolver.

After the train had been robbed the bandits ordered the passengers back into the train. Before leaving the train the robbers fired a number of shots in the air to terrorize the passengers, got into a buggy and drove away.

TAFT'S SON RUNS DOWN MAN

Laborer is Probably Fatally Injured When Hit by Auto Driven by Youth.

Beverly, Mass.—One of President Taft's automobiles, driven by his son, Robert T. Taft, ran over and fatally injured a street laborer.

The injured man was said there were indications that the workman's skull was fractured.

The party of two college friends, Lendal King of Minneapolis, and George Harrison of Washington, started out from the summer White House for a ride through the Massachusetts north shore.

Robert, who has been driving the automobile around the city considerably since his arrival last week, was at the steering wheel.

At Pride's crossing, about two miles from the summer home, the automobile was driven by a gang of men. The automobile was slowed down. The men scattered out ahead of the men stepped aside.

One of them, however, was not quite quick enough, and the machine struck him, tossing him into the gutter. He was unconscious when picked up by young Taft and his two friends.

DESPERADO SHOT BY MILITIA

Atlanta, Ga.—After being barricaded in his home for nearly hours and killing two of his bedegrees, W. T. Hoot, who was killed by soldiers in a rush on his house near Irwinville, Ga. His six children were taken captive. Threats were made to burn Hoolick out of his house, but when it was seen the situation was approaching that way the posse began firing. The military company came from Ellaville and went to the scene of the battle.

Storm Makes Many Homeless.

Whitesburg, Ky.—As the result of the worst storm which has ever visited southeastern Kentucky, over a hundred people were hopelessly rendered homeless and when a full report is in it will be found that there are several persons have lost their lives in the flood. The storm lasted for two hours and overflowed its banks following the storm and swept away from its home a score of homes at the lower mining site of its banks. The loss is estimated will run into millions of dollars.

American is Held Guilty.

Utsunomiya.—William Pittman, the American aviator, who was captured by the Mikado army during the fight for the Shoji Hundreds, more than a month ago, has been found guilty by a court martial of espionage, against the Japanese government according to dispatches received here Monday. Pittman will serve two years in the government prison at Sunsan. As a result of his death at once to indose the state department of Japan to the effort to check the execution of sentence.

"I suppose," said Zelda, who was thinking very hard, "that one simply has to have a mortgage; just as though it were measles or croup or scarlet fever."

"Oh, mortgages aren't at all serious—not necessarily fatal—if you don't take cold or sniffle, yourself behind you."

"How does one contract a mortgage?" said Zelda.

"It caught mine at college," said Orlie. "Or blow our substance on education. I just found it out recently. Mother has been carrying the burden of it all by herself. The subject isn't pleasant. Let us talk of something else."

"Where do you keep your mortgage?" asked Zelda, half-seriously. "How does one get it in the house?"

"Ours seems to be in a bank just at present," answered Orlie, easily.

"That sounds formidable. But it's too bad that you have to worry. Mortgaged interest is the most charming affair in town. I can't think of any one living anywhere else except in this prairie country."

"You'll have to, for we move almost always, as they say, in society."

Zelda's father continued to pay a good deal of attention to the subject of bank, and money matters were rarely yet never spoken of before them. She did not understand how anxious he was to avoid the necessity of selling his interest in the management of her property, and she had no idea that the amount of the sum he gave her was quite insignificant when compared with the income her father had enjoyed from her property. She was spoken of in his presence as a person of means who would have not only all necessary things, but the large gifts her fancy might dictate. Zelda's relatives knew the facts, however, accustomed to the ways of the world. They, too, were Mrs. Forrest's relatives, and her kinsfolk were glad to see her relatives that she showed them.

"What is the amount, father?" she inquired, "and what is the current interest, with accumulated interest?"

Zelda asked in the tone she could accommodate two thousand dollars.

"And how much do the papers worth?" "About five thousand, possibly. But it is a little complicated, and I'm just at present. The trend of real estate is in a direction downward."

"I want to carry this loan—if it has to be carried—personally, and I'm to make it over to me, and then take it out of my allowance, or pay it to me in the trustees'. I suppose I ought to be able to do some of the more businesslike; but I haven't more than two hundred dollars. Now you'll sell it to me for that, father, as a special favor."

"It is to sound you against just such chimerical ideas as this," said Orlie. "You know nothing of these things, Zee."

"But my own aunt and cousin!"

"Be that as it may, slightly, yet he was trivial to refuse to grant Zelda's wish, but perhaps in permitting him to help her unfortunate relatives he felt would gain the favor of Heaven.

"I will draw the notes from the bank and let the matter rest from the present. Zee, if you very much wish it."

"If that will do more than that, dear, that will do."

"I shall advise the bank notice in a day or two," said Dameron, reluctantly. He would have preferred to do this himself, but he was not sure that he would be able to do it. Zelda's interest in the matter was so much greater than his own. He stood with a pile of architects' sketches before him, dividing to his associates of the Patoka Land and Improvement Company his scheme for an ideal fair. He smoothed the blue prints on the table carefully and rolled them.

"Any gentlemen and street-car men from the city of apartment houses downtown. Every odd corner is getting occupied by a flat, and the suburbs everywhere takes her life insurance money and goes to live in a flat and thinks it is better than government bonds. But I've got to be a good fellow and stick to business. I wish, we could copyright it. It's so good."

He let a dreamy look come into his eyes and began to whistle softly. The Patoka Land and Improvement Company formed a syndicate and engineered the "war" in a casual way, but it had been a matter of pride to the promoters of the interurbanites.

"It's time to do something new; and it has struck me that a ten-story flat with a roof-garden, fully furnished, provided, located away from the heat of the city, but accessible to business, or lies, is the thing we're looking for. Instead of paying our rents we make our tenants will look down on them! Dameron's Ideal Apartments!

"But where are you going to get all this money?" asked the Patoka people who frequently noted as interlocutor in the discussion.

"That's not so easy. You've got to be a good fellow and stick to your war lies, and you've got to go north. Hennepin's the place to get money, that war right up the creek. A man's success is measured by the number of his enemies. There are some people who are so generous that they will do anything for a large authorized rear as to the water available. The skipper asked the Patoka's draft and said: 'The way the tide's scoonun up you'll 'ave a foot and a 'arf is spare." But he was wrong, for an hour before high water the tide stopped rising. Do what one and the yacht could not be moved.

The tides were "taking off" or diminishing, and the little ship was "beaged" in and not due to float for eleven days. Luckily after six days, the wind came from the south, and a foot of water around her at high water, a northeast wind prang up, brought a good tide and she floated. It was an anxious week, particularly at high water, for sometimes, although the little vessel did not float, she bumped and bore down upon the bottom for the sand is very hard both on the keel and on the side, with dire damage to those who know better. Yes, sels have been known to be "beaged" for months.

Notated in a loud tone to one of the stenographers. It was a letter to a famous Wall street banking house and referred in large figures to a certain or certain deal which, from the terms of the letter, the New York house and Zelboeth were carrying on together. It was to be sure, a letter that never would reach the mails but this made no difference to Zelboeth, who gave it a place among his most commercial literary finds.

He left the stenographer to themselves with the solemn injunction that he was not to be disturbed, then he entered his private office briskly and was soon talking transcription to his Jonson auditors. He stood with a pile of architect's sketches before him, dividing to his associates of the Patoka Land and Improvement Company his scheme for an ideal fair. He smoothed the blue prints on the table carefully and rolled them.

NO HOPE FOR SALT PLANTS

HUNDREDS OF OLD WELLS NO LONGER BEING USED.

PUMPING BRINE LEAST COST

Huge Works of the Saginaw Valley and Huron Shore Were Operated in Connection With Lumber Industry.

Lansing.—The proposition of Carton of the public domain commission, that the completion of the power plant on the Au Sable by the big lower merger of the state is going to bring about a revival of the manufacture of salt in a district long ago abandoned because of the price of fuel, is received with a smile by the old salt men of the state. Hundreds of old wells in Saginaw and Huron counties are out of use, but they were not abandoned because of the cost of fuel for pumping the brine," as indicated by Mr. Carton.

The huge salt plants of the Saginaw valley and the Huron shore were operated in connection with the lumber industry, the pioneers finding the brine was the smallest item, but it required fuel to evaporate the brine and make the salt, and this was furnished by the sawmills. Sawdust was the fuel used to run the engines used to run the sawmills. The salt was in reality a "by-product," and the manufacture involved little more than the cost of the few men required to pick it.

There is practically no salt made in the district, excepting by a few run in a small scale, where power for other purposes is sufficient quantities to shake the salt from evaporating pans. In other words, still a "by-product," and so cheap that even if it cost both to pump the brine there would be no profit in the manufacture, even with the assistance of some other industry. This is explained by the fact that the brine is so rich in salt that along the bay shore do not get little more than a gallon of brine to the thirton and the vielaty of Detroit, and the method of manufacture of salt is accordingly much more expensive.

Mint Crop is Below Average.

The peppermint crop of Berrien county is not up to the average, and the cut worm will shorten it from one sixth to one-fourth. Growers state that the supply is sufficient for the demand.

The greatest peppermint land in the world is in southern Michigan and northern Indiana, and some of the finest farms in the country are situated in this part of the state.

Peppermint farmers of Berrien have made much money in peppermint.

It is impossible to determine the acreage to be devoted to the business in southern Michigan, unless a statement is made, but it is very greatly from year to year. The price paid for peppermint is governed by the quotation in $1 40 per pound, while it was nearly double that figure a few years ago. This low figure, however, is due to the fact that people are now engaged in raising peppermint.

Black, heavy swamp soil is the kind used in raising peppermint. It requires much hard work to get the soil in shape, but when it is ready for planting it is worth $100 an acre and more.

To Confer New Degree.

The degree of "Juris Doctor" will be conferred for the first time in the history of the University of Michigan law department on Thursday. The requirements for the degree are more stringent than for the degree of bachelor of laws, because to be entitled to the degree one must have had his arts degree from some college approved by the U. of M., and he must work during the first two years in the law school must be such that the faculty will recommend him for the degree in his third year, ranking it in a measure as honor work.

New Michigan Postmasters.

Postmasters appointed: Mason, Mich., Daniel Ryan, vice W. Hamilton, Ill., H. Doner, resigned; Ortiwa Beach, Ottawa county, Charles M. Cannon, vice F. A. Warsberg, resigned; Rose, Oakland county, Will M. Shuttleworth, vice C. Barnett, resigned; Slocum, Muskegon county, Arcella Hall, vice G. B. Nichols, resigned.

New Corporations.

New corporations—Capital City Automobile Co., Lansing, increased from $15,000 to $25,000; White Pigeon Co., Grand Rapids, $500; Kalamazoo Light Co., Kalamazoo, $25,000.

Gives Forty Acres of Land to Birds.

Conveying to the Michigan Audubon society 40 acres of land, described as the south half of the northwest quarter of section 31, 53-3, a deed which carries with it a sentimental story has been filed for record in the archives of the Michigan secretary of state.

The Audubon society formed for the purpose of protecting the wild birds. This land is given it for the purpose of creating a game and bird preserve and it is stipulated in the deed what kind of birds may be killed thereon.

Dr. Shumway May Fire His Deputy.

F. E. McCormick, deputy to Dr. Shumway of the state department of health, is being investigated by the public official head at both ears to keep it from falling off. Shumway is after "Mac" with a meat axe.

McDonald is from Allegan county, where politics come from the pores of every mile citizen of voting age. He has mapped the feelings of Shumway before. It is his latest that is liable to cost him his job. Shumway is about no more than that the deputy will be up on the carpet later.

Makes Objections to Assessments.

Prosecuting Attorney Norman W. Dunan, in a communication to the state tax commission, says that general property in Missaukee county is not assessed at more than one-third of its cash value, thereby making it impossible to determine which Lutsenada belonging to veterans of the Civil war should be exempt from taxation under the provisions of the act passed by the legislature of 1909.

Secretary George Lord of the tax commission, referred that matter to the attorney general's department and Deputy Harry Chase rendered the following opinion, which will serve as a reminder to prosecuting attorneys that they are expected to keep in touch with the assessing boards.

"All property under the law should be assessed at cash value and a

COUNTING BY TENS.

And a Suggestion as to Why We Buy Things by the Dozen.

Did it ever occur to you as strange that while we count by tens we buy so many articles by the dozen? If we ask the price of apples, oranges, oysters, eggs, onions, potatoes, and many other things we will be told so many cents or dollars a dozen, or if large quantities are wanted so much a gross, which means a dozen dozen.

How do you suppose this has come about? It was this way: Nearly all savage people count by their fingers—that is, if they want to tell you they have seen two wild beasts they will hold up two fingers, and if on they will hold up both hands, and if twenty both hands twice, and so on. Babies also learn to count by their fingers and toes, and to many people it seems as if that were the only possible way.

It is, however, rather a clumsy way, as you find out when you try to divide 10. Say, for example, you have ten apples. You can only make an equal division among two or five persons, while if you had twelve you could give an equal number to two, three, four or six. We find the same difficulty arises in dividing a dollar and often have to pay 13 cents for what should properly cost 12½ cents.

If we had been born with two, four etc. or eight fingers or toes, like some animals, it is possible that we should have counted differently, but it does not now seem likely there will ever be any change to the ten system, which is, as it is called, especially above ten, as it is called, especially above ten, as the Arabic numerals now used nearly everywhere are based on this system.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SPOILED THE PLOT.

A Display of Juvenile Affection That Saved the Mongrel.

About three weeks ago there strolled into a Bilding Park house a dirty, disreputable looking dog. He was of no particular breed, but a general mixture of all three sex. Out of the kindness of her heart the cook gave him a few bites to eat, and from that time on, try as they would, the family could not get rid of the mongrel. The small children took a great fancy to the dog and named him Hinks. Their father and mother grew tired of seeing Hinks curled and secretly pleased to get him out of the way. They feared to kiboup him openly by day, for there would surely follow much protest and distress on the part of the children. Accordingly plans were made for losing Hinks some place far from Bidley Park by night. The evening that the plot was to be carried out, just after supper, father, mother and a five-year-old boy were in the parlor. The little fellow was fondling the dog as if he were his best friend in the world. Finally he seized the dog firmly under the shoulders and, looking straight into his eyes, lisped out: "Hinkses, do you wove me?" and then after a moment with joy in his voice, "Hinks wows me and the world is mine." After that touching display neither father nor mother had the heart to deprive the little fellow of "Hownie's" company, but in the morning the dog was given a comfortable home for life.—Philadelphia Record.

How Japs Play Kan.

In the now widely practiced form the basis of the Japanese game of kan is that the fully outstretched hand, all nine pieces, the fully closed hand, a stone, and two fingers alone extended, the rest being closed, scissors. Each of the players, counting one, two, three, throws a hand at the moment of pronouncing three, and the one whose manual symbol is superior to that of the others, according to the theory of the game, wins the trick. Superiority is determined on the hypothesis that whereas scissors cut out a stone (they can cut paper and wiry wires) paper is unfit to scissors it can wrap up a stone—consequently stones are inferior to scissors, but conquer paper; stone is inferior to paper, but conquers scissors, and paper is inferior to scissors, but conquers stone. There are innumerable varieties of the game.

The Price of Eloquence.

"The auctioneer held up a battered fiddle.

"What am I offered for this antique violin?" he pathetically inquired. "Look it over. See the blurred finger marks of rapsodists thus. Note the stains of the heaving years. To the merry notes of this old old instrument the brocaded dames of fair France may have danced the minuet in glittering Versailles. Perhaps the vestal virgins marched to its stirring rhythm in the fosses of Lupercalia. Hi, it bears an obtrusive—perhaps a touch of fire. Why, this may have been the very fiddle on which Nero played when Rome burned."

"Fifteen cents!" said a well dressed man in the front row.

"It's yours!" cried the auctioneer cheerfully. "What next?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A South Arabian Food Plant.

Jowari, a cereal weighed from remaining corn and needed with a grain something like millet, is the Abidhi chief crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Jowari requires little cultivation except weeding, when the Abidhi goes for hand, and when ripe he cuts it off close to the ground with the sickle. Large New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a cereal food of this kind 20 pounds be receives on Aden in average of two rupees, or $64.80 per bushel, which is twenty cents a pound.—Consular and Trade Reports.

Fairly Warned.

"Mr. Subbit," spoke up the young lawyer, "I come here as a representative of your widower. Tom Jones—with the commission to collect a debt owing him."

"I congratulate you," answered Mr. Subbit, "on obtaining so permanent a job at such an early stage in your career."—Success.

TWO STOCK DEALS.

Sherwood Took Flood's Boast and Later Handed It Back.

In Joseph L. King's "History of the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board" is this story of Flood and Sherwood:

In the early days, in the seventies, quite a number of operators would gather together in Colville's office on Montgomery street, near California. Among them were Mr. James C. Flood and Mr. Robert Sherwood. Sherwood had 1,000 Consolidated Virginia, the stock selling at about $100. One day Sherwood, on looking at the prices, remarked that he was getting tired of that Consolidated Virginia; it did not move much. Mr. Flood said: "What are you growing about? If you are tired of that stock I will take it off your hands at $100." "Sold," said Sherwood, and the stock changed hands.

In course of time the Nevada bank building was erected on the corner of Pine and Montgomery streets. On meeting Sherwood one day Mr. Flood remarked: "We built that Nevada block on the profits of that 1,000 shares of Consolidated Virginia you sold us."

Subsequently, in the sierra Nevada and Union deal, Mr. Flood approached Sherwood on the street and bought from him 5,000 Union at $200 a share, the transaction footing up $1,000,000.

Sherwood built the Union block on the gore corner of Pine, Davis and Market streets. Meeting Flood one day, he remarked, "I built that Union block with the profits of that 5,000 Union I sold you."

A WARM GREETING.

She Overcame the Rules and Met Him at the Station.

She was rushing through the train just Bill Gibson, the guteman, like a passenger train by a flag station, but Gibson stopped her.

"Let's see your ticket, lady," he asked politely enough.

"Oh, I have no ticket," she said, "but don't you please let me through. I want to—"

"It's against the rules," cut in Gibson.

"Yes, but I want to be there on the platform—all this breathlessly—I'm an anxious to meet him."

"Well, go on through," Gibson told her. "I guess it'll be all right." Then to himself he soliloquized: "Why not? Perhaps she won't always be so free to meet him; probably hasn't been married but a month or so, maybe isn't married yet at all. For be it from me to interrupt her in such nice little attentions."

The train came in. Gibson sort of looked out of the tail of his eye for a chance to witness the happy reunion. Such sights illumine the dark recesses of the dingy old depot.

In a moment he caught sight of her, that her husband or sweetheart did not land one or the other—was not with her. However, she was not alone. Under her arm she clutched tightly a compact portable English bulldog with a countenance like a deformed gargoyle.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Growing Corn For Cob Pipes.

Probably not one smoker in a hundred who fires the "real American pipe"—the corncob—is aware of the fact that corns in ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska are devoted to raising corn for the special purpose of producing cobs suitable for fashioning into pipe bowls. The grain itself is marketed of course, but the cob on which it grows is the real harvest and is cut carefully into proper lengths, smoothed and polished, the soft inner pulp being pushed out by specially constructed machinery. The corncob pipe goes to every country in the world—China, Africa, Mexico and is especially in favor in Australia and New Zealand. There it is regarded as characteristically American, because it suggests the idea of Yankee ingenuity. The briar is the favorite with Englishmen, who are probably the greatest pipe smokers in the world.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Waiting For the Note.

As English churchmen tells the following:

"At one of our cathedrals the minor canon was ill and could not sing. A suffragan bishop had a good voice and volunteered to sing the litany. 'Go,' he said to the verger, 'and tell the organist that I will sing the litany and ask him to give me the intoning note.' 'Please, sir,' said the verger to the organist, 'the bishop 'as sent me to 'im to 'ey 'e will sing the litany.' 'All right,' said the organist. Seeing the verger mumble, he said, 'You need not stay.' 'Please, sir, the bishop asked me to 'ey you if you would give him a something—I didn't quite catch—note.' 'You mean the reciting note.' 'That's it, sir, that's it.' Seeing the verger still remaining, he said, 'You need not stay.' To which the verger said, 'Please, sir, shall I take it to his lordship?'"

Canal Carriages.

Canal carriages are not common conveyances in most parts of India, but on the great trunk roll leading to Delhi they are frequently to be seen. They are large, double story wagons, drawn sometimes by one, sometimes by two or even three camels. Accordingly as the load is light or heavy give them a cognitive appearance were originally intended as a defense against robbers, and the carts were probably also used for the conveyance of prisoners.

The Only Thing They Ever Did.

John Bright's powers of sarcasm were almost unrivaled. Some of his sharpest utterances were against members of the church. When Canon Ind had made of the antipathy of a prominent friend that their ancestors eaten over with the Conqueror, his reply was prompt, "I never heard that they did anything else."

FREEZING CAVERNS.

Subterranean Caves That Are Lined With Crystalline Ice.

There are deep cavities and tunnelled recesses in the earth far away from sunlight and held in the tight embrace of rocky arms where never beams of glittering ice this blistering all the year round. Yet down in these queer caves the ice is as clear and crystalline as any that nature maintains in the open air. Moreover, it occurs on a truly grand and massive scale.

Imagine thick underground ice walls and floors and costly faceted columns beautiful in shape and color streaming from roof to floor of lofty rock chambers! And under the slow drip, drip, drip of percolating water this same ice seems to fashion itself into cave adornments—frozen water drops, curling shapes, stalactites and stalagmites of fantastic shape and, mirror like.

Subterranean cold waves, or "glaciers," as they are frequently called, crop up in some 200 scattered localities in Europe, Asia and America, but all, with rare exceptions, whether true ice caverns or grottoes and deep hollows, are confined to the north temperate zone. Many of these contraptions—that is, to places where there is a sufficiently low temperature at some portion of the year to reach freezing point and render ice will possible.—Harper's Magazine.

THEY SIT AND LOOK.

Woman Who Watch For Celebrities in a New York Restaurant.

"I always wonder," said a New York woman who lunches out a good deal, "what satisfaction the women get out of life who flock to a certain fashionable uptown restaurant at lunchtime just to see celebrities.

"They look as if they cannot afford to be there, and the truth is they do not apparently go there for food. I have watched them ordering and noted what was brought them, and almost invariably it is some such thing as one cup of tea or a glass of milk, or a cup of tea or of chocolate and a sandwich.

"They sit and look. The moment some stage celebrity comes in there is a craning of necks, and you hear excited whisperings. 'Oh, there's So-and-so!' mentioning a name of a well known idol, and the neck craning keeps on until a fresh subject for scrutiny comes in.

"You can see this sort of thing every lunchtime at this restaurant. There is a regular contingent of these rubber-neckers, and they are not visitors from the far west, either."—New York Sun.

TIBURON ISLAND.

Its Waters Are Literally Swarming With Fearsome Sharks.

Less than three thousand miles from the city of New York and about a third of that distance from San Francisco there is situated, in the upper reaches of the gulf of California, a small island, worthless even for so much as a pasture as the raising of goats, but nevertheless a center of attraction for the ethnologists and archaeologists of the old and new worlds for many generations.

This rocky peak, rising from the quiet waters of the gulf, is known as Tiburon island. Tiburon is a Spanish word which, translated into English, means "shark." The waters around the island are literally swarming with these tigers of the sea, and the inhabitants of the island are said to be no less perilous than the sharks. Tiburon is peopled with a handful of Indians, the only aborigines of their kind in the world, known as Seris. They are reputed to be cannibals, to be so fierce that none of the mainland tribes of Mexican robbins ever dare intrude their shores and to possess the secret of manufacture of a peculiarly deadly poison with which they empoison their arrows before battle.—Wide World Magazine.

The Dragon Fly.

The oldest extant poem about a dragon fly is said to have been composed 1,400 years ago by the Emperor Yuriaku of Japan. One day, while this emperor was hunting, say the ancient records, a gadfly came and bit his arm. Thereupon a dragon fly pounced upon the gadfly and devoured it. Then the emperor commanded his ministers to make an ode in praise of the dragon fly. But as they hesitated how to begin he himself composed a poem in praise of the insect, ending with the words:

Even a creeping insect
Wishes upon the great lord.
Yet I will give to the dragon fly!

And in honor of the dragon fly the place of the incident was called Akitsu, or the moor of the dragon fly.—"A Japanese Miscellany."

A Stubborn Husband.

A most interesting phenomenon is the stubborn husband. He is not a bad man. He is contrary, and he has to be managed. He is usually married to a clever little woman, who is constantly devising schemes to accomplish the things which make their joint lives a success.

He has no suspicion of this. If he had he would be so mad he could undoubtedly eat her. So all through life she goes on swinging a lurid wheel of the mine to make him go the way she thinks he were a baby mule. She is a cheery little body, and she grows thinner with every year, and she does her smiling behind the door or she sketches in her sleeve when he is not by. The stubborn husband is as interesting as a bug.—London Standard.

The Artist and the Critic

Sidney Cooper, the English artist, happening one day to visit the Royal academy, when some of his works were on exhibition, while a couple of critics were examining the pictures overheard one of them say: "Why, this picture is not finished!" Cooper put his hand in his pocket, produced his card and handing it to the newspaper man with, with graciousness: "If you will kindly send that on I shall be much obliged." Cooper enclosed with such a check for $1,000 to the "artistic or designed journalists."

Dropsy—
Given up by Doctor

"I had dropsy, and was told by my family physician that there was no chance for me. My family also gave me up. My limbs and body were swollen one-third larger than natural, water collected around my heart and I had to be propped up in bed to keep from smothering. I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy until I was entirely cured. This was in 1902, and I am now able to do any kind of work on my farm. My cure was certainly marvelous."

L. TURLEY CURD,
Wilmore, Ky.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been wonderfully successful in relieving heart trouble. Its tonic effect upon the heart nerves and muscles is a great factor in assisting nature to overcome heart weakness.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle does not benefit, your druggist will send a check for $1.00 to the "artistic or designed journalists."

Dated June 27th, 1903.
JOHN M. HARRIS, Judge of Probate.

Cheerfulness.

Wonderous is the strength of cheerfulness and its power of endurance—the cheerful man will do more in the same time, will do it better, will persevere in it longer, than the sad and solemn. Wordsous is the strength of cheerfulness, altogether, last, robust, tons in powers of endurance. Efforts, to be permanently useful, must be cheerfully joyous—a spirit all sunshine, graceful from very gladness, beautiful because bright.—Thomas Carlyle.

Just a Little Exercise.

The obstetric conductor of a tall office building, noticing that the colored janitor had ridden up with him several times that morning, remarked: "Sam this is the fifth time I have taken you up, but you have not come down with me." "Well, you see," Sam replied, "ah been wastin' wid dem on de fourteenth floor, and every now and agin ah misses mah hold and falls out."—Success Magazine.

Suspicious Man.

When a woman insists that her husband shall not work at the office on Sundays he has a suspicion that it is not solicitude as much as it is a desire to get him to church.—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

The Usual Procedure.

A SERIOUS DINER.

The Way the Great Emperor Charles V. Ate His Meals.

The diary of a German gentleman, Bartholomew Sastrow, who lived in the time of the Emperor Charles V., gives us a good idea of the gastronomic customs of those times. Sastrow's description of the table manners of the greatest ruler in his day is very interesting.

Young princes and counts served the repast. There were invariably four courses of six dishes. The emperor had no use for carve for him. He began by making his bread in pieces large enough for one mouthful, then arranged the whole piece with the fingers while he held the plate under his chin with the other hand.

When he felt thirsty he made a sign to the "dresser" standing by the table. Then the word to the sideboard for two silver flagons and filled a goblet which held about a quart and a half. The emperor drained it to the last drop, practically at one draft.

During the repast he never uttered a syllable, scarcely smiled at the most amusing sallies of the jester behind his chair, busily picked his teeth with toothpick and then washing his hands, retired to a window recess, where nobody could approach him with a petition.

SALT WATER.

Deep Sea Are More Saline Than Those Near the Shore.

The density of sea water depends upon the quantity of saline matter it contains. The proportion is generally from 3 or 4 per cent, though it varies in different places. The ocean contains more salt in the southern than in the northern hemisphere, and the Atlantic contains more than the Pacific. The greatest proportion of salt in the Pacific is in the parallels of 22 degrees north and from 35 degrees south latitude. Near the equator it is less, and in the polar seas it is least. Water from a depth of 1,000 fathoms of the open sea is found, cutting it slightly.

An indispensable member of the ocean flung the knife back to the stage, where it was deftly caught by Grimes. Rating is soft in the land and as it is were accurred, Grimes swallowed it two and then managed upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grimes was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had rinsed here and there and was on his feet in his seat.

After settling him in a chair Grimes threw himself on his knees and began a long prayer for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed plaintiff, who in the adjoining box he allowed to return to his seat.

That this was not to be until Grimes, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

Then he arrived with a bound and cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully lowered his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.—London Express.

Perils of the Hair Cut.

"Ouch!" cried the barber and something sensitive. He stuck the end of one thumb in his mouth and began sucking it.

"Cut yourself?" asked the man in the chair.

"No; it's an ingrowing hair" replied the barber—"an ingrowing hair under my thumb nail."

The man in the chair laughed.

"Huh," said the barber. "It isn't an uncommon thing either. Is giving a customer a hair cut a bit of hair often indeed when I do my thumb and it hasn't removed it is apt to tester and get sore. Sometimes we don't even get any there until it begins to get to its live work. It hurts like the chickens sometimes. If you don't believe me, ask any barber and he'll tell you the same thing."—New York Times.

A Gun Club's Treasure.

Thirteen million cartridge shells, the result of eleven years of shooting by the members of a gun club, have been gathered into a huge pile by one of the leading sporting organizations of England. Eleven years ago one of the members conceived the idea of having the members save all their shells and deposit them on the pile. The shell buzz is now the annual most prized possession. If a single man were to shoot one cartridge a second day and night it would take about three years to discharge 13,000,000. The club maintains a vigilant guard over its precious pile.

Filial Reparter.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who was always difficult for comedy was one day knocking his face with a dull razor when he turned to his eldest son and said:

"Tom, if you open any more oysters with my razor I'll cut you off with a shilling."

"Very well, father," said Tom, "but where will you get the shilling?"

The Prize Holder.

"I understand you have a fine track team here," said the visitor to the man who was showing him over the college campus. "What individual holds most of the medals?"

"The coach," answered the conversed with due deliberation.—New York Journal.

There are between 21,000 and 23,000 war-ravaged women in New York city alone who are combining for mutual aid with the college women. The alliance work, in the settlements and they are ready to help the woman who earns her own living in any way possible.

SINGS ITS DEATH SONG.

A Peculiar Bird Found in the Jungles of South America.

There is a queer bird in the jungles of northern South America which is called the "pauji" by the natives, but is known to science as the galeated curassow. It is chiefly remarkable because it sings its own death song.

It does not really sing, but makes a deep humming noise which sounds very much like the Spanish words "El muerto sois pujui" (the corpse lies here).

"It is while uttering this lugubrious chant," said a South American traveler, "that the pauji usually meets its death, for the hunter can then easily track it to its nest, and it falls a victim, as the Indians say, to its own death song."

If the pauji gets suspicious it immediately ceases humming, and that is a sure indication to the hunter that the bird has seen him or scents danger. In such a case the only thing for the sportsman to do is to remain perfectly still. The bird may become reassured after waiting awhile and again begin to call, "The corpse lies here." It then can be approached and shot and killed.

If it is only wounded the pauji usually escapes, though it cannot fly much better than the ordinary domestic fowl. It runs very fleet of foot and will outrun the hunter until it is lost in the dense undergrowth of the jungle.

In the mating season the male pauji is the most generous of birds and will fight its own kind whenever it sees them. At other times the fight ends in the annihilation of both combatants.

SALVE FOR HIS WOUND.

A Strenuous Scene That Was Not on the Bill of the Play.

Giovanni Grasso, a Sicilian actor of unusual dramatic energy, was playing in Florence in one of his fierce parts, where he had to stab his enemy with a dagger. Suddenly, in the heat of his passion, Grasso let the weapon slip out of his hand. It alighted in the pit on a man's head, cutting it slightly.

The indignant member of the audience flung the knife back to the stage, where it was deftly caught by Grimes. Rating is soft in the land and as it it were accurred, Grasso swallowed it two and then managed upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grasso was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had rinsed here and there and was on his feet in his seat.

After settling him in a chair Grasso threw himself on his knees and began a long prayer for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed plaintiff, who in the adjoining box he allowed to return to his seat.

That this was not to be until Grasso, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

Then he arrived with a bound and cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully lowered his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.—London Express.

JULY FOURTH

TEXAS INSPIRATION

By HENRY BARRETT CHAMBERLIN

When the clock struck four, I was on the floor. The bells backs to ring and the cannon to roar. The ayes to live free and the noes to assist— This is the Fourth of July.

NOW upon a time—if you are exacting as to dates, the time fell between 1876 and 1886—there was a country parson who kept a record of his Fourths. In the years 1876 he read his poetry and the quoted quatrain was the result. This record of 10 Fourths, taken from his journal, was published in the Atlanta Constitution, a southern of independence prepared by a committee of five, headed by Thomas Jefferson, was discussed and adopted, the resolution for independence was, as these letters show, really adopted July 2.

It took a long time for the petitioners of the colonies to conceive of independence. Leaders like Samuel Adams waxed impatient with those who believed a peaceful settlement of the trouble was possible without separation from the mother country. Yet Washington in the first congress doubted that the colonies desired or that it was to their interest to set up for independence. Franklin looked upon it as an event which, if it must come, was inevitable.

Lexington and Concord and Bunker hill favored the radicals. June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee of the Virginia delegation, following the instructions which he had received from the council of Virginia, presented a resolution "that these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown; that all political connection between them and Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved." John Adams seconded the motion and a debate followed. There are no authentic reports of these debates. The war had not yet been won. Public report of what went said would have been of assistance to those men, who, indeed, would have been hanged if they had failed. Lee's motion, if it failed, hanging men is like making rabbit pie—you must first catch the rabbit.

It is likely that those who led the debate in support of the measure were John and Samuel Adams, Roger Sherman, Oliver Wolcott, Richard Henry Lee and George Wythe. These opposing were probably John Dickinson, John Jay, James Wilson and Robert R. Wilson. It appeared that four New England colonies, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, and three southern colonies, Virginia, Georgia and North Carolina, were prepared to vote at once in the affirmative, but as unanimity was desired a final vote was postponed until July 1, and a committee composed of Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston, was appointed to prepare a formal statement for the world.

Lee, the mover of the resolution, would perhaps have been named chairman of the committee had not his wife fallen ill. As it was, Jefferson received the honor and save for a few alterations by "readers and Adams the Declaration of Independence was written by him. The original draft in the state department at Washington, save for these interlineations by Franklin and Adams, is in his handwriting.

July 1 debate was resumed on the Lee resolution. July 2 all the delegates but three from New York voted in favor of it and it was of this action that John Adams wrote to his wife. The original resolution having been carried, the formal declaration prepared by the committee in deference to respect for the opinions of mankind was reported and discussed until July 4, when it was finally accepted and signed by the president of the congress, John Hancock, and the secretary. Within a week the provincial congress of New York expressed its approval. August 2 an engrossed copy of the declaration was ready for congress and received the signatures of delegates from 13 colonies, 56 in all, though Matthew Thornton of New Jersey did not sign until November.

Grim jests were passed. Hancock, writing his name large, said that John Bull could read it without spectacles and improved upon his compliment by adding that the colonies would shout "all hang together in this matter," which gave Franklin a chance for his bon mot, "Yes, indeed, we must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately."

A tall delegate—some say it was Harrison, others that it was Carter Braxton of Virginia—said to one of light weight, either Gerry of Massachusetts or Gerry of Massachusetts: "When it comes to hanging I shall have greatly the advantage, for my neck would be broken instantly, while you will dangle in the air and hang for some time."

The first public celebration of the Declaration of Independence was probably that of July 8, 1776, when John Nixon read the document from the steps of the statehouse in Philadelphia and the king's arms were taken down in the congress hall. In 1777, in honor of the first anniversary of the glorious day, every soldier was ordered an extra ration of rum. In 1781 congress, "desirous of a memorial of the anniversary of the Declaration of independence, will be celebrated by firing 13 rounds of cannon and a fee de joie of the whole army." Washington in his general orders of the day ordered a "generous allowance of spirituous liquors to be served out to the soldiers." A description of one shows that elaborate kilt dressing is not of the twentieth century only and that the Tories are not so Hooverfonic as to escape notice.

"We had a magnificent celebration of the anniversary of independence, when handsome fireworks were discharged. The Whigs of the city paraded up a woman with the monstrous headdress of the Tory ladies and escorted her through the streets with a great concourse of people. Her head was elegantly and expensively dressed. I suppose about three feet high and proportionate width, with a profusion of curls. The figure was droll and occasioned much mirth. It has lessened some heads already and will probably bring the rest within the bounds of reason, for they are monstrous indeed. They were wife of Dr. Smith who christened the figure Constantia, or the Duchess of Independence, and prayed for a pin from her head by way of relic. The Tory women are very much mortified—overshadowing like."

Barbecues, fireworks, parades, picnics, white dresses—these seem only to have become a part of the day's celebration. Noise and accidents, also, early developed. Julia Ward Howe, in her reminiscences, tells that she remembers her own distress as a child because the Democratic mayor of New York, Fernando Wood, prohibited the fireworks. Fortunately for her and her sisters and brothers, they had firecrackers and the mayor could be made an exception in their favor.

In 1857 she listened to the note written by Emerson and sung for the first time in Concord, Mass., July 4, 1857. Perhaps he caught the spirit of even the day's noise better than the clergyman, at least he wrote more kindly of it:

"The messengers from town to town.
Our pulses beat not tame,
The joy bells chime their tidings down,
Which children's voices blame.

"What we see, largely determines what we are. The books we read and the sights we witness furnish much of the foundation of a man's character and mind. Indeed, we say broadly: "Reading is delicious," and that the field of man's activities to the boundaries of his horizon.

"It is not without significance that the children of Israel, dying from fever caused by the fiery serpents, were told that everyone who looked should live. Surely the principle is of wider application than this isolated incident. It can be truly said that only those who look really live. Here is a blind man. He never had the incentive to work that comes to every man at the sight of thousands of his fellows thronging our city's streets, intent upon their business. Standing on some mountain peak, he never saw the crimson hues falling behind the sling of day; never knew the glory of God as shown with sun and stars and constellations unfold his mighty power; never the thrilling emotion when the night was passed and on the morning's sky clusters of purple cloud began to ripen in the crimson dawn—that man does not know nature, nor his nor God's mind through it. He must also see. Vision has value.

"Years ago I may have been standing on a tower of hope perhaps, as did the prophet Habakkuk, you peered through the mists of the future and saw a vision in the days to be. Perhaps I was the man who first shouted it to you. Perhaps it was an achievement you hoped to see. Perhaps it was a goal you determined to make a reality. Perhaps I was one who made it possible to realize that vision.

"Years have passed. You have not been living on the tower. You have changed to the valleys. You have waded deep waters. You have scaled steep heights. Sometimes it has been dark, dim and cloudy down the valleys of the years you have come struggling, crying, cursing, sometimes praying, but the ideal has not yet realized. Disappointment, despair, the failure of one of two parties to keep an appointment. The vision has failed.

"Here is where a prophet on a tower is needed. He can see some things which you can not. You, in the depths below. You in the darkness behind! You, disappointed at the appointed place, hear what the Lord God says to Habakkuk on the tower: "That vision is yet for an appointed time. . . . Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come."

"Life's disappointments are not universal experience. Some disappointments must succeed the certain declensions of youth. The man who has up has spoken a word to us and our cherished plans have crumbled into a big saw puzzle. Joys we have sought have slipped from our hands. Our ideals have grown and have driven beyond today into that vast tomorrow blessings promised in some distant time. Our Angels with drawn and flaming swords have barred our pathway to the rebuke to which we dragged our weary feet.

"It is equally true of the moral life. In the darkness of some disappointment we have had a vision of what we should be, of what we ought to be and of what we said: "By the grace of God, we will be."

"Years have passed. At least I hope we have not attained that ideal. I say "hope not," because if we have achieved that ambition it means, not that we have lived up to our ideal, but that the vision was too insignificant to have lasting value.

"Here is a prophecy of life, be they in secular business, Christian work or in the professions. Some years ago one of two results. One is despair. Disappointments are like eggs, which, brooded over and hatched, produce chicken—despair. When a man says he begins to ask: "What's the use?" he has given up and fallen out.

The other effect of disappointment, time to time, produces more of strength and new habitudes of energy.

"Years ago I read the world's best biographies have been published. Of an actor, a soldier and a reporter, Edwin Booth, Grant, General, a haughty spirit, at the beginning of his stage career, he was disappointed that he was "assigned

SWORDS OF JAPAN

Old Samurai Blades Are Looked Upon as Sacred.

HANDLED WITH REVERENCE.

A Curious Formula of Etiquette Follows When "the Steel Bible of Bushido" Is Drawn From Its Sheath by a Hand Which Grasps It in Peace.

If one were in a friend's house in Japan and should ask to examine one of the old samurai swords that rest in the lacquered sword rack in a place of honor there a curious formula of etiquette would be followed by the host.

He would go to a closet and return with a little square of silk in his hand. This he would wrap about the short, skin handle of the sheathed sword before touching his bare hand to the scabbard. Then, with his right hand grasping the silk covered handle and the fingers of his left gingerly raising the lacquered hilt from the rack, the Japanese host would lift the sword to the level of his forehead and bow to it.

All this is ceremonial spirit and with almost gravity. The square of silk, preserved for no purpose but this and having its own name in the Japanese vocabulary, is to prevent the defilement of the handle by a hand which grasps it in peace. The bow is meant for the spirit of the swordsmith who forged this weapon. The reverence is for the sword itself, "soul of the samurai," in the Japanese poetical conception and gently called by foreigners "the steel Bible of Bushido."

But this is only the beginning of the formality. When the Japanese host unsheaths the blade he does it with the edge toward his own body and the point directed away from his guest. When the guest receives the sword in his own hands he must be careful to keep the outer edge always away from the direction of his friend the host. If he wishes to examine both sides of the blade he must even turn his back so that never will the mucro of the samurai edge be directed toward his friend.

After the examination is completed the sword is returned to its scabbard, and the owner reserve it with another bow and places it once more on its rack.

The etiquette of the sword is no empty thing. With the high spirited Japanese, who have not forgotten the many centuries of chivalry and of hand fighting behind them, the delicately carved and curiously welded sword of the samurai has a significance almost sacred. There is a philosophy of the sword, no less stern than the one of the weapon.

In the old days when the Japanese fighters were the war minions and the steel armor seen nowadays in the curiosity shops then by way was taught that as the shining blade must be kept free from spot and corruption, so must his soul be ever clean. Neglect of the blade brings rust, neglect of the soul an impure character.

Thus the sword edge was held not only as a constant guardian of personal safety and honor, but as a special disciplinarian to punish whenever the possessor stepped from the narrow path of the Yamato spirit of chivalry. Again, the sword was emblematical of true gentility, which is never overbearing or vulgar in deportment, but sternly self repressive.

No man knows when first the forge for fighting weapons was set up in the dawn of Japanese history nor who was the man who first replaced the crude bronze blades of a primitive folk by the tempered steel of the Damascene blade. There is in the imperial collection of swords at the castle of Nara the weapon worn by the Crown Prince Shotoku, who compiled the constitution of seventeen articles in A. D. 605, the oldest sword known in Japan. From that weapon, which was straight and not curved as all other swords of Nippon are, down to the fall of the Tokugawa shogunate in the middle of the last century there is an unbroken history of the art of the swordsmith. Twelve centuries of recorded art in sword making and the intervening 50,000 makes constitute the history of the sword in Japan.

The Japanese blade, pieced almost on a par with the Damascus product in art and utility, differs from the Arabian weapon in one material detail of manufacture. Instead of having a uniform high temper, which gives the remarkable flexibility possessed by the Damascus blade, the Japanese sword has two tempers, a hard and a mild steel.

The edge of the blade is hard with the finest temper the body and back of a milder temper, sufficient to give some elasticity. A Japanese sword cannot be bent half double with the pressure of a hand; it is nearly rigid.

Though sword manufacture has ceased to be in Japan today outside of the government arsenals, which turn out only the approved military blade of the modern army, the country is filled with refined relics of the past art, and these are relics which the Japanese will not part. A possessor of one of the old swords, keen and lone while in name as the day it was forged, would sell his house, even himself maybe, before he would part with his long Bible of Bushido for money.—Boston Magazine.

TIME FREIGHT CARS.

Traced by Hourly Reports the Whole Length of Their Run.

A freight car is essentially common property. It has to go from one line to another in the course of its business. It has to carry loads from Jacksonville, Fla., to Spokane, Wash.; from Phoenix, Ariz., to Augusta, Me. If all the freight cars in the United States were owned by one big company and if that company charged the railroads for the exact amount of use which they made of each car the situation would theoretically be more reasonable than it is today.

But in any case the wanderings of freight cars will always entail an enormous amount of labor with pen and pencil and telegraph key and typewriter and long distance telephone, writes William Hard in the Technical World Magazine.

The modern hunter of freight cars is not satisfied with knowing where all the cars on his own lines are at the end of each day's run. Modern business life has become so rapid that in the case of certain kinds of freight it is necessary to know just where each car is every few hours. This kind of freight is called time freight.

Ordinary freight is dead freight. Time freight consists only of certain materials. These materials run slightly behind all the way from asbestos, through cranberries, raw cane sliver, oak, peanuts and varnish, down to lime. All cars in time freight trains are reported by telegraph from all divisions.

You can stand in front of a log board on the wall—it is like the board in a cranberry office except that it has little holes in it—and watch the progress of the cars in a time freight train from point to point. As the telegrams come in the pegs are moved from hole to hole. If you stand in a cranberry varnish from Chicago to Omaha last night you can come in today and see just where that car is. You can watch all the way up to Omaha on the board. It is a great humiliation for the freight car. It used to be a wild stray without an aim. Now it is tamed and domesticated. Just as we now have small white lighting houses for trains, so we have telegraph record boards for freight cars. Every man nobody will be able to escape from the authorities. It is only occasionally under modern methods a freight car trainer has to go out and bring it home by force.

THE WORD "GOWN."

It First Came Into Use in the Fourteenth Century.

Female costume in the fourth century was classical in its simplicity. The women wore long, loose, flowing skirts reaching to the feet and a draped "robe," or upper garment. Chaucer, who died in 1400, when Henry IV. was king, frequently uses the word robe. In the "Canterbury Tales" he depicts the accomplishments as a curing a "mellee cote," which no doubt means a coat of many colors, while the miller is described as wearing "a whyte cote."

It was in the fourteenth century that the word "gown" first came into use. An anonymous author in no mild words finds fault with the fashion of his days. He writes that "the common were lonested in excess of apparel, in wide surcote reaching to their loyns, some in a garment reaching to their knees, close before and strowting out on the side, so that on the back they make men seem women, and these they call by a ridiculous name—gowns."

As early as the twelfth century women's cotes were made with trains, and to the first quarter of the thirteenth century a lobbe mortlinee every one their vesstiff for wearing ermined cotes, some of which contained seven ells and a half.—Westminster Gazette.

The Boyne City, Gaylord & Alpena railroad management announce that in about 30 days they will add to their equipment a fine 50 passenger gasoline motor car for quick passenger service between Boyne City and Boyne Falls and Gaylord.

Declaring the mingling of the sexes during school hours has demoralized conditions to such an extent that it will have to be abandoned, Superintendent McGee of the Cadillac high school has issued an order decreeing that hereafter the boys and girls will not be permitted in the same room only while at recitations.

Secretary John T. Gibson of the development bureau attended the banquet given by the business men of East Jordan Monday night of last week. This event was also attended by many of the business men of Charlevoix. The development spirit has taken a firm hold upon the people of East Jordan, and in order to show that they are interested in the problem of developing their section of the country they subscribed $200 toward the work of the bureau.

Traverse City Record: The Rev. J. Andrew Jackson Eared, the oldest Methodist minister in Michigan and who for some years was presiding elder of the Grand Traverse district, passed away at the home of his son, William Eared, of Garfield township, at 12:10 yesterday afternoon, after an illness of some duration. He was 85 years old and besides his widow, leaves one son, William, and eight grandchildren, five of whom are in Seattle, Wash. He also leaves several brothers and sisters, as follows: Stephen, of Bellaire, Samuel, of Martin, Mrs Emily Young, Mrs. C. E. Smith, of Grand Rapids, and Mrs I. I. Blair, of Mt. Clemens. Although the Rev. Mr. Eared had been in poor health for some time he had been afflicted with a chronic ailment, he was only confined to his bed a few days. On April 20, with his wife, he came from Grand Rapids to spend a couple of weeks with his son, but his failing health would not permit of his taking the return journey, and on Wednesday last, he was confined to his bed, the end coming very graceful yesterday.

WHERE DIGNITY SITS ENTHRONED

by EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT BY W. A. PATTERSON

WHEN the Supreme court of the United States with full membership provided no deaths occur during the vacation period just ended also that Associate Justice William H. Moody has so far recovered his health that he can join his brethren upon its fall term it will be and esteem. Some one has said that Governor Hughes, while in the main a his colleagues on the bench.

Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York state will be welcomed to membership by the individual members of the court with full hearted pleasure conservative, is a man who believes that the laws should be interpreted in the spirit of 1910 rather than in the spirit of 1830. The criticism on the judgments rendered on occasion by the Supreme court has been to the effect that seemingly some of the members live in the past, and that objection has been made to allowing new lights to strike the "laws of the ancients."

The Supreme court of the United States is said to be the most dignified body in the world. It looks it, but it must not be taken for granted that these judges, from the veteran Chief Justice down to the youngest man on the bench, have not had their times of relaxing when they give full vent to their some in the journey of their robing room four students take up their places in the corridor and stretch across it two thick white cords, thus making a passageway through which the proceedings evolve. It is the most dignified looking proceeding possible and the listless look neither to the right nor the left, but conscious that there are scores of onlookers, each one knows, but knows straight ahead in order that there may be no discrimination in courtesy between those of the public who are standing on the right and those standing on the left. It is a perfectly impartial bow. The lawyers of the country to have a "judicial mind" not excelled in the United states, has hard work at times to keep from giving vent to his humorous conception of things as they appear in court. Such a proceeding would be dubbed undignified, and so Judge White manages to control his flow of wit when in court, but when the tribunal is not in session he gives his mood full play.

Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, son of one of the most distinguished American scholars and one of its ablest humorists, has a great deal of the fun of his father in him, but self-consciously he tries to hold its expression in check on many occasions because it might be said that he was trying to make Oliver Wendell Holmes the second appear as Oliver Wendell Holmes the first, and this the present justice modestly holds, to be impossible.

Not long ago a lawyer went to the residence of one of the associate justices of the Supreme court, a married man and one who the lawyer thought was the student of the stall. The visitor had come to see the justice to get some advice on behalf of a person who he know was a family friend of the one of whom he was seeking advisory help.

It seems that the man's wife had died, and while the husband was a kindly disposed and most excellent man generally, his father-in-law and mother-in-law insisted on taking the children who had been left motherless. The widower did not want to part with his children and neither did he want to make a fight which would bring the children into public notice and show that he had had a division with his wife's father and mother.

The lawyer visitor was calling on the justice said, "What would you do if your father-in-law and mother-in-law on your wife's death tried to get your children away from you?" The answer came quick and sharp, "I'd tell them to go to the devil."

Now it happened that the justice's wife was sitting at his elbow and the lawyer at this strong expression from the judicial minded one looked with trepidation at Mrs. Justice, expecting to see her overcome with mortification at her husband's outbreak. The visitor was relieved and also somewhat surprised when Mrs. Justice said, "I'd tell them to go to the devil, too."

The household court being thus unanimous, the lawyer went away and gave advice to his client, and the presumption is that within a day or two the father-in-law and mother-in-law went to the devil.

The justices of the Supreme court put on their robes in a room which is across the main corridor of the center hall from the courtroom. In order to reach the bench they are obliged to cross the corridor and take their places in procession, the clerk of the court leading the way like a pioneer and being followed by the chief justice and the associate justices in order of rank.

It is on the stroke of twelve, noon, that this procession takes place by the way, and it is then that noon is the hour for the court opens by the usher in the hall, who people who want to see the judges file by. Just before they appear

Alloy of Wonderful Power

Remarkable Qualities That Caused It to Be Given the Name of "The Devil's Touchstone."

There has always been a popular notion which connected the Satanic element with fire, and so, when Welsbach, the inventor of the gas light mantles, discovered a new alloy which, when roughly rubbed with a file, gave out masses of fire, the new fire-producing metal was dubbed "The Devil's Touchstone."

This new metal is an alloy of iron with certain rare earths, such as cerium, etc. As is well known, these metals have such a strong affinity for oxygen that they burn with great energy when ignited in the open air, writes Prof. John Uhler Lloyd, in Western Druggist. Magnesium, which is used for photographic flashlights, may be cited as an example of this. And certain metals, such as potassium, etc., which are near akin to these rare earths, actually take fire when they are brought into contact with water, so that the modern chemist finds no difficulty in "setting the Thames on fire," or even in causing a piece of ice to burn.

When sharply rubbed with a file the new alloy gives off such a shower of sparks that they literally make a flash of light as far as the sparks from flint and steel, but not nearly so hot and lasting. These sparks are capable of setting fire to substances upon which the sparks from flint and steel fall harmlessly, and some very ingenious devices have been invented whereby on opening a small metal case, the striking of the file causes a small flame to pass over a piece of the new alloy and produce sparks which ignite a lamp and thus furnish a flame which will light gas, candles and cigars.

STATE NEWS

Port Huron.—A proposition to change the name of Black river is now being agitated in this city, and a letter has dressed to the Chamber of Commerce appeals to that organization to bring the change about. The letter is from a vancal are that the name of Black river is a very common one in this state, not altogether pleasing, and certainly not descriptive. In fact the stream was called the "De Lode," after the French De-Lhut, but seen after it was given the appellation of Black river which has clung to it ever since. Du L'hut was commander and the city of Duluth was named after him. It is pointed out that if the river is given this name again it will merit historical interest.

Battle Creek.—Induced to locate their convention and campmeeting here through the efforts of the Indoor Sanitation Association, the Free Methodists of Indiana, Illinois and Michigan are having hard sledding, in the matter of being police interference. In getting the power the campers have the habit of shouting, wildly gesticulating and even rolling on the ground. At first this was amusing, but now it has become serious. Adventist neighbors, robbed of their usual land of daytime comfort as well, have complained to the police, and Chief Partington has sent several patrolmen to the camp with warning messages.

Saginaw.—The third annual convention of the Michigan Typographical union was brought to a close when the following officers were elected: President, M. M. Horr; secretary, Charles Creek; vice-president, William Barber, Detroit; secretary-treasurer, J. O. Jones; Miss Jackson; members of the executive committee, Henry Dosina, Saginaw; A. A. Wurdis, Adrian; John E. Hartigan, Kalamazoo. The place for the 1911 convention was left to the jurisdiction of the executive committee.

Houghton.—Forest fires are raging all through Keweenaw peninsula and along the railroad line. They are fanned by western winds. The copper range railroad station at Kim River, south of Houghton, was destroyed with a large amount of money and freight. The fire in that section is now under control. Several small farm buildings in Ontonagon and Baraga counties are reported destroyed. The fire is now in the valuable timber lands in Baraga county.

Mt. Clemens.—Gaining examination before Justice H. V. Kennedy, Dr. A. W. Stewart was found over to the circuit court for trial on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. Stewart appeared without counsel and filed a petition signed by 24 leading physicians asking that the prosecution of his case on technicalities be stopped practicing until legally qualified.

Muskegon.—While his skull fractured, and suffering lateral injuries, Jacob Sheldon, foreman of the Sims lumber yards, fell to the floor of the plant of the Muskegon Novelty Manufacturing company, a pile of bricks near which he was working suddenly toppled over on him, pinning him to the floor. Fellow workmen pelted him out and rushed him to Hackley hospital.

Grand Rapids.—In the convention of the Michigan Association of Municipal Engineers, J. Corey of Detroit was elected president; Emmert Sherrard, Grand Rapids, vice-president, John W. Ames, A. J. Cochran, 1323 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 27, 1910.

Secretary, R. W. Chaff, Bellaire; treasurer, H. W. Chaff, Bellaire; auditor, C. E. Clark, Detroit, auditor.

Cadillac.—Rev. J. Frank Green, field superintendent of the Church of Christ Disciples of Michigan, who is stationed here, will in August start an institutional church in the auditorium factory district at Flint. He will then put in a new pastor here.

Saginaw.—Adolph C. Heller has commenced suit against the Saginaw & Flint railway, $25,000 for alleged damages. Mr. Heller was one of the passengers hurt in the rear-end collision last April, near Bridgeport, being thrown out of a window.

Lansing.—A controversy between the state board of auditors and the board of control over the loss for the feeble-minded at Lapeer, the rate per capita for caring for that institution was placed at 43 cents.

Port Huron.—A movement has been started here to change the name of the Black river to "DeLode," after the French Indian, who discovered it. It is pointed out "Black river" is a common name in the state.

Battle Creek.—Charles E. Clippert of St. Charles, was elected president of Michigan Sanitary Lansing was chosen as the place for the next annual meeting.

Norkville.—The Michigan Vacuum Cleaner company has just been organized and has its factory on the top floor of the Union Mass'.—during the Lumber company's building.

Mount Pleasant.—The Ann Arbor railroad has settled a damage suit for injuries sustained in a wreck by Miss Ruth Newberry of this city, by paying her $6,500.

Lansing.—Auditor General Pillsbury received $11,000 tax money from the Michigan State Telephone company.

Mount Pleasant.—According to a decision of the courts, George Gilmore, a Chippewa township farmer, must pay $1,000 for promising to marry Miss Winnie Thompson, daughter of Hugh Thompson, "the blind hero of Chickamauga," and failing to keep his word. She is now 21 and they were ready to wed.

Saginaw.—One of the most hotly fought divorce cases in the annals of Merrow county is now in progress before Judge Frank Gordon, the defendant in the case being George Hoffman, of Bridgeport township, and his wife, of Swanpin.—At a largely attended meeting the Delta County Grange adopted resolutions indorsing Arthur Brazeau for governor and expressing opposition to Chase S. Osborn because of his opposition to the tonnage tax for the upper peninsula mines.

Hastings.—After hearing the testimony of nine men relative to the woman to whom she told her story, the attorney of Adelbert Mertle, who is under arrest for a statutory assault upon the girl, waived further examination, and his client was bound over for trial.

Saginaw.—One of the most hotly fought divorce cases in the annals of Merrow county is now in progress before Judge Frank Gordon, the defendant in the case being George Hoffman, of Bridgeport township, and his wife, of Swanpin.—At a largely attended meeting the Delta County Grange adopted resolutions indorsing Arthur Brazeau for governor and expressing opposition to Chase S. Osborn because of his opposition to the tonnage tax for the upper peninsula mines.

Hastings.—After hearing the testimony of nine men relative to the woman to whom she told her story, the attorney of Adelbert Mertle, who is under arrest for a statutory assault upon the girl, waived further examination, and his client was bound over for trial.

DICKINSON ON WORLD TRIP

Secretary of War Starts on Journey Which Recalls Taft's "Cupid voyage."

Washington.—Secretary of War Dickinson is off on a trip that will take him around the world. Several years ago William H. Taft, while the head of the war department, made such a voyage and it came to be known as the "Cupid voyage." At least two weddings resulted from that long jaunt, that of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth being among them. In this trip of Secretary Dickinson's, however, the party consists mostly of bachelors.

The objective point of Secretary Dickinson's trip is the Philippine islands, where he will spend five weeks familiarizing himself with conditions there.

On the steamer Siberia, on which he sailed from San Francisco for the Philippines via Honolulu and Guam, the secretary was accompanied by Mrs. Dickinson, his son, J. M. Dickinson, Jr., Miss Clarence Dickinson, Mrs. Edwards and daughter, Miss Bessie Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson, Miss Jessie M. Clark, confidential clerk, and George Long, a messenger. The party will inspect Pearl Harbor and the fortifications at Honolulu to the extent of $100,000 in order to legislate the outstanding obligations of the corporation which, according to the officials, amount to $439,000.

In the petition there is a provision that the company shall for each $10,000 worth of bonds issued, take up and cancel not less than $9,000 of such obligations.

The Hay City company is one of those included in the proposed power merger which caused state officials so much anxiety a few weeks ago. Already five of these corporations, producing a different course, have appeared before the state railroad commission simply to ask attempts to secure bond issues.

State Protects Waifs.

Children placed in homes by the managers of institutions hospitals as we be brought under the supervision of the state, it is announced by Secretary M. T. Murray, of the state board of corrections and charities. The law requires all institutions to report to us any of any character which agrees to receive or place out by adoption, foster children in homes, and to submit to the laws of this state and report to the board regarding the children.

The board is required to inspect all such institutions and agencies, and of this character has ever been previously undertaken and it is not known how many such institutions there are. In the state not how many children are annually given away by them.

"The law is very comprehensive and legitimate," said Mr. Murray, "and we do not propose to attempt to enforce it, but we do propose to see to it that such children are safeguarded and their welfare looked after. There have come to my notice a number of advertisements of fright look ghoulish offering to find homes for children born there, and I know of one or two cases which will bear investigation."

A list of all these institutions will be procured and then an investigation started with a view to ascertaining about a thorough enforcement of the law.

Will Inspect Hospitals.

Attorney General Kuhn holds that the state board of correction and charities has supervision over refuge hospitals for unfortunate women where these homes are duly incorporated under the laws of Michigan.

The opinion of Secretary Murray of the state board has endeavored to learn whether the law would permit an official inspection of such homes. Now that the authority has been granted a number will be visited at once.

Examinations for Postmasters.

Civil service examination will be held July 30 for fourth class postmasters, as follows: Bellaire, Ashland; Prudenville; Bridgman, held at St. Joseph; Lyon Manor, held at Roscommon.

Won't Pay Fletcher's Bill.

Commissioner of Labor Richard Fletcher has asked Attorney General Kuhn for an interpretation of the law relative to the payment of charges for sending annual reports from the office of the state labor commissioner. This year the express charges on the books amounted to $1,000 and Mr. Fletcher presented a bill to Auditor General Fuller to secure the money. Fuller refused to draw a warrant, claiming that the money should be taken from the appropriation granted the state labor commission.

Fire Insurance Cost Lower.

Despite an increase in loss ratio in fire insurance business in Michigan during 1909 there has been a decrease in the cost of insurance, according to the report of Insurance Commissioner Barry. "The loss ratio for the year shows an increase over the previous year of 3.9 per cent," he states. "The average rate of premium per $100 of insurance written was $1.15, the lowest in three years. As compared with 1908 this average shows a decrease of seven cents per $100 insurance written."

UNDEFEATED CHAMPION OF THE NORTHWEST.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit nor lie down for days at a time, and he was so nervous that he was a fright. He would irritate spots by scratching until his nails had dried and only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that was troubled with eczema and found I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone." (Signed) Mrs. Anna L. Cochran, 1323 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 27, 1910.

A Teacher in the Making.

She was a popular young normal student, who had been to a party the night before, and as a result experience, she was "absent" in the geography class.

The woman instructor, true to her method of drawing upon the general knowledge of a student, rather than to permit a failure, after eliciting two or three inconsequential "yahs" from the fair but jaded disciple, asked for the products of China.

The girl brightened. "Tea," she asserted, preparing to sit down.

"Yes, and what else?" persisted the instructor.

The young woman smiled with sweet hopelessness.

"Now you can answer others, I am sure, you know about it."

"Tea," drawled the fluent-the voice of the party, 187, "and," hesitating her forehead with an intellectual tout de force, "and laundry work."—Youth's Companion.

A Hibernian Verdict.

A New Yorker is the happy employer of an aged Irishman, who grows eloquent over the woes of the Emerald Isle. Said the boss: "Pat, the king of England is dead."

The old man was silent for a moment. Then he took off his hat.

"Well," he said slowly, "as man he was a fine bit of a boy. As King Iaihma go, he was as good as yez can make them. As a king, there was nobody on earth as could best him. But still, I'll keep me eye on George."

Oh, Mr. Wright!

Wilbur Wright was talking to a Dayton reporter about the Daily Mail's $50,000 aerial race from London to Manchester.

"It was shocking, though," said the reporter, "that Graham White, an English flying man, let himself be beaten by a Frenchman."

Mr. Wright smiled.

"Shocking?" he said. "It was more than that. It was a shame."

FLOWERS ON LAMP POSTS

Kansas City Bank Follows a European Custom of Decoration of Streets.

Kansas City, Mo.—Every one who passes the corner of Ninth and Walnut notices the flowers and vines in the urns on the street lamp posts in front of the Fidelity Trust building. There are eight of the posts, four on the Walnut street side of the building and four on the Ninth street side. The urns are just underneath the lamps. Blooming geraniums, lantanas, arbutus and hibiscus fill the urns, and a trailing fringe of green and white leafed vines, vine drapes down a foot or more around the edges of each.

The flowers and vines are planned in wire baskets, semi-circular in shape, so that two just fill each urn. When the flowers in one lose their fragrance it is to be replaced immediately by another. A sufficient number of baskets are being tended by a gardener so that fresh flowers always will be in the urns. The flowers were chosen because of their ability to withstand the sun and wind, and it is not expected to be necessary to replace the baskets oftener than four times in the summer. The insides of the iron urns are lined with moss to prevent the roots from the heat of the metal.

The idea to have the flowers on the poles was obtained from public buildings in Europe by Brent C. Flower, president of the Fidelity Trust company.

Fish Answer to Names.

Boston. — Superintendent Leonard W. Rotch of Mt. Hope cemetery, possesses one of the most marvelous aquariums in the world. It is the boast in the country. The fish are kept in a small pool in the greenhouse within the cemetery grounds. Each man answers to a name. There are 20 in the school, all told, and they are as well acquainted with Mr. Rose as are his human cows or his horses. As soon as he whistles the fish come to the surface and stick their heads out, hoping he may have some delicious morsel for them. Mr. Rotch's aquarium is unique in the world, brighter—to lovers.

BIG CLASS IS GIVEN SHEEPSKINS

Nearly 900 Are Graduated at Ann Arbor.

SIXTY-FIFTH COMMENCEMENT

Presidents Faunce of Brown University Delivers Helpful and Encouraging Address—Many Given Honorary Degrees.

Lansing.—Nearly 900 diplomas were granted at the sixty-fifth annual commencement at the University of Michigan. President William H. Faunce of Brown university gave some helpful and encouraging advice to those about to start out in life.

Mr. Faunce took for his subject "New Callings and Old Duties," and he spoke of the professions open to the graduates today that were unknown a few years ago.

Honorary degrees were conferred as follows:

Doctor of Laws—Dr. Robert Hall Babcock of Chicago, James Aaron V. McAlvay of the Michigan supreme court, Orrell Judge Lucius Lamoreaux of Detroit and Irig. Gen. James Harvey Kidd of Iowa.

Bachelor of Science—William Henry Roscoscran, Chicago, and Karl Edward Harrington, Chicago.

Master of Arts—Frank Ward Fletcher, a regent of the university; Miss Alice Hamilton, Chicago; Joseph Villiers Denny, Columbia, S. C., and Frank May, Detroit.

Master of Laws—Edward Sidney Rogers, Chicago.

Would Issue $500,000 Bonds.

Representatives made that the Supreme court had decided that the companies had a franchise for 50 years instead of the correspondents sent dispatches. "The companies win." Two or three correspondents were in their seats by a cautionary word from a veteran who had done long service in the Supreme court. Hold! Wait!"

In a few minutes, as the reading went on, it became apparent that the court had decided that the companies had a franchise for 100 years while the companies had a franchise for 100 years practically no rights under it, that the strength of the mistake which was made in sending out some of the first dispatches on that day stocks went up and then when the truth came they tumbled so fast that they hurt their heads.

When the justices fled by the clerk and the chief justice enter the Supreme courtroom everybody stands. When the judges have taken their seats the court crier, after the manner of court criers above the time of the patriarchs, declares that the black and honorable court is in session and that justice is to be dispensed. Just before taking their seats the justices bow to the assembled throng and the throng bows back. When the court crier's voice has died away everybody takes his seat and the proceedings begin.

The Supreme court sits in the old senate chamber of the capitol. It is the room where Webster, Hayne, Clay, Calhoun and others fought their battles. The gallery is a busy affair capable of seating only about thirty people and the wonder is how when Webster delivered his great oration in reply to Hayne there could have been present the great crowd of which history tells us.

It was in the Supreme courtroom that the federal commission which decided the Hayes-Tilden contest held its sessions. The fifteen members of that commission occupied the seats of the justices and it is said that during the progress of the hearing the little room was crowded literally to suffocation and that many people were overcome. It is an historic chamber and it is one of the places to which visitors to Washington have access.

In the membership of the Supreme court there are two veterans of the bench and two veterans of the Confederate army. Mr. Murray, "said Harlan, who is a Republican, raised the Tenth Kentucky regiment and served in Gen. George H. Thomas' division. He rose to the rank of colonel and his name was before the senate for confirmation as a brigadier general at a time late in the war when his father's desire was that he should remain at home to raise a regiment. Colonel Harlan's father was a Democrat and a Unionist and was a member of congress from the Louisville district. Horace Harmon Lurton, who was appointed to the place left by the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Peckham, entered the Confederate service when he was only seventeen years old and he served three years in the army of Tennessee under Hardee. Lurton was Grant's captive and it is not at all improbable that he remembers with any conception that this youthful prisoner was one day to be appointed to the Supreme court of the United States by a Republican president.

CITY MAN AS A "COME ON."

The average city man thinks the farmer who buys a "gold brick" in need of a guardian. Yet thousands of those same city men have paid for "bricks" which any farmer would have known were the commonest kind of brass. There are all sorts of them nicely prepared for the gull.

Now it is a scheme to buy fruit land on the Pacific coast. Our city friend is held out make $1,000 an acre from the start. A few days ago I found a young man about this way in the office of a real estate firm. He had a guarantee in the Metropolitan. He had a guarantee that he was sure to make $1,000 a year and that he was sure to be "cleaning up" nicely from his farm." Next is some co-operative scheme for growing potatoes on an enormous scale. You do not work. You simply buy stock in the enterprise, pay for it, of course, and then sit in the shade and draw your dividends. You sit in the shade—no doubt of that—and the dividends draw like the money of evil deeds.

MELVILLE WESTON FULLER

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER DEAD

Aged Jurist Passes Away Suddenly at Sorrento, Maine.

Bar Harbor, Me.—Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller of the United states Supreme court died from heart failure at his summer home in Sorrento at six o'clock Monday morning.

The death of the chief magistrate was unexpected, as he had been in fairly good health lately, and there had been no premonitory symptoms of any kind of trouble. Sunday he attended church as usual, and when he retired at night he was to all appearances in his customary health.

Death came about six o'clock Monday morning. His daughter, Mrs. Natchaniel Pearson, and Rev. James E. Freeman, who was a guest of Justice Fuller's at his Sorrento cottage, "Main Stay," were with the jurist when he died.

The funeral services will be held at Sorrento and the interment will be at Chicago.

For many years the chief justice had spent his summers at Sorrento, a summer colony located on Frenchman's bay, five miles from Bar Harbor.

A Great American.

To Chief Justice Fuller fell the honor of third rank for length of service as presiding justice in the highest tribunal of the American government.

For 22 years he was chief justice of the Supreme court of the United states. Chief Justice Marshall presided over the court for 34 years and Chief Justice Taney for 28 years. With the future rests the determination of the place in the law of this jurist that such choice go safeguard and their welfare looked after. There have come to my notice a number of advertisements of fright look ghoulish offering to find homes for children born there, and I know of one or two cases which will bear investigation."

A list of all these institutions will be procured and then an investigation started with a view to ascertaining about a thorough enforcement of the law.

About New Rural High Schools.

Lansing.—Attorney General Kuhn has handed down some opinions in regard to the new tuition law in the rural school districts which goes into effect this year. The opinions are of general public interest, not only to the school officers and directors, but also to the patrons.

The annual school meeting is held in all the school districts on Monday evening, July 10. At this meeting the districts must vote the tuition to be paid during the year. All children who have completed the eighth grade examination and have a diploma or who have completed the work and receive a certificate from the teacher may have their tuition paid to a high school in the district in which they reside. If there are over 160 pupils in the district the school may be graded. A grade school cannot be compelled to pay the tuition. The attorney general holds that a district once organized under the graded school law remains a graded school district no matter how the census list falls. If it seems best for the district to return to the primary organization they would take action specified in section 4751 of the school laws of 1905. Until such action is taken the district is a graded school district and is therefore a high school and cannot be compelled to pay the tuition of its pupils to other high schools.

The law does not define a high school and for the purposes of the free tuition law it has been ruled by the department of public instruction to make a ruling on the question. The department holds that a high school is a regular graded school district organized under graded school law with five members of the census list, 160 or more children on the school roll, and during more than eight grades of work.

The question has also been asked in regard to what money will be used to pay the tuition. If the money is ordered raised on July 10 it cannot be collected until tax time in December. The attorney general says: "If there is any money in the general school funds at the beginning of the school year the board may use this to pay tuition if the tuition is to be paid from voted tax. Of course if there is any surplus tuition money on hand they can use that for paying the tuition."

The law says that the district "may" also pay the transportation of the students if it does not say "must" pay it. This matter is optional to a vote of the annual school meeting.

Michigan Pensions.

The following Michigan pensions have been granted: Arthur E. Briggs, $14; William A. Goodrich, $15; Mary Harris, $12; Edward Hawkins, $12; Isabell Jackson, $12; Hannah S. Janowski, $12; Samuel P. Lockwood, $14; Jacob H. Miller, $12; Albert B. Montcalm, $12 (special act); August Pfeifer, $12 (special act); Edwin M. Richards, $20; Giddings L. Richardson, $30; John Sinninger, $30; Walter E. Spencer, $15; Peter E. Whedon, $17; Peter Yoxtimer, $15; Alonzo D. Austin, $15; Peter P. Weaver, $12; Herbert P. DeLano, $12 (special act); Eliza Jane Pavitt, $12; Robert H. Foster, $12; Charles K. Rabideau, $12; Charles Shoff, $15; Jacob Stoll, $12; William Stull, $15; Sarah Strahn, $12; Oliver Swanson, $12; Richard W. Tuffs, $14; Anna J. Van Valkenburgh, $12; Robert Wallace, $15; Ira Wilson, $15; Rolland Wilson, $15; Ira Wilson, $15; Fred W. Conley, $12; Lucy Ann Dunham, $12; Lucinda E. Sophie M. Guard, $25 (special act); Henry C. Helms, $12; James H. Maxwell, $12; Charles W. Sherman, $12; Richard W. Tuffs, $14; Anna J. Van Valkenburgh, $12; Robert Wallace, $15; Ira Wilson, $15; Ira Wilson, $15; James Woodley, $12.

Question on Nomination of Judges.

How three circuit judges shall be nominated this fall to stand for the election next year is the question that is perplexing the state legal department. Judge Collingwood of Lansing, Flanigan of Marquette and Wilbur of Genesee are all appointed in 1910 to fill vacancies and have made that an election shall be held this fall to fill their places. The primary law provides, however, that circuit judges shall be nominated in the March, 1911, and elected in April, and makes no provision for nominations for the office that office. It is presumed that the convention system will govern, but the question has not been determined.

Seeks to Issue Bonds.

The Saginaw Power company has filed an application with the state railroad commission for authority to issue bonds, which brings into the total of the terms of similar petitions of the other power companies listed in the original power merger plan. The mission was asked to issue bonds to the extent of $10,000 in new bonds for take up outstanding in new bonds for $9,000 of old. Steps will be taken to separate the property of the companies.

Industries Incorporate.

The following articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state: Huron River Manufacturing company, Ann Arbor, $50,000; Tecumseh Lumber company, Detroit, $60,000; Kirkwood Hardwood Lumber company, Lansing, Leo M. Butzel and Sanford Kirkwood, $10,000; Detroit Brass company, St. Clair, $5,000; Roberts Hardware company, Detroit, $50,000, principal stockholders Purdom Lynch and Frank B. Roberts and Herman Lieberman, Detroit.

Supreme Court Admits New Lawyers.

One hundred and twenty-three graduates of the law department at the University of Michigan were present at the supreme court to be admitted to the bar. Justice McAlvay in a brief address to the class said he believed in the democracy of education and in the hope of the nation, the young men to always keep in mind the benefits they had secured from the university and resolved them that work, patience and honor are the qualities of a successful career at the bar.

The judiciary committee, with its Republican majority, to which the nomination was sent April 20, held the nomination over until July 20. Then the committee reported it to the senate "without recommendation."

For three hours that body debated the executive session whether to confirm or reject the nomination. The attack on Mr. Fuller was led by Senators Edmunds, Evarts and Maxwell, Senators Collum and Farwell defended him.

The reports that he had been a "compromise" during the Civil war and that he did not possess the requisite ability as a lawyer were gone over.

His Great Victory.

Finally, by a vote of 41 to 20, his nomination was confirmed.

Since that day the entire court, as it then existed, has passed away with the single exception of Justice Harlan. Of those prominent in the fight over his confirmation only Senator Cullom remains, and President Cleveland, who thus honored the illinois lawyer, has likewise gone to his grave.

Throughout his service Chief Justice Fuller was noted for the dignity with which he filled the position. He preserved that manner on the bench or off.

Although small of stature, not more than five feet seven inches in height, he was a striking and classic features made him a commanding figure where ever he appeared.

Chief Justice Fuller leaves an impressive record in the laws of his country. Among his most famous opinions are the following:

Some of Famous Decisions.

The income tax decision, in which the income tax law was held to be unconstitutional.

The Danbury hat case, by which labor unions were held to be amenable to the Sherman anti-trust law.

The Western Union Telegraph company versus the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in which the state was denied the right to tax telegraph messages every when interstate.

The Bank of Washington versus Texas in which the insurable interest of the wife and children in the life of the husband and father was recognized as distinguished from the claims of creditors.

Intoxicating versus South Carolina Railway company, in which the railroad was denied the power to exempt itself from liability for its negligence in the shipment of goods.

Moore versus Crawford, in which married women were made to bear liabilities, such as those growing out of the fraudulent sale of land, as well as the very rights.

Lelay versus Hagdin, in which the state was denied rights over original packages of liquor in interstate commerce, an opinion which led to the passage of the Wilson liquor law.

Climatic Differences.

On the coast of northeastern Alaska the average annual precipitation is about ninety inches and trees grow to a large size; in the central plateau, the precipitation is less than fifteen inches, including the melted snow, and the average size of trees is small. Farther to the south, north of Rocky mountains, climatic conditions make forest growth altogether impossible, and those vast tundras are covered with moss, sedges and a few small shrubs.

Valuable Pointer.

In commenting upon the fact that Kansas stands at the head in raising mules, we wish to add that is the only place to stand. It also is best to keep an eye the head as possible when putting the harness on.

Ways of the Wise Rat.

Careful experiments have proved the truth of the ancient belief that by letting down its tail and licking the end the rat secrets oil, milk, wine, molasses, etc., from deep or narrow-necked vessels.

Get After the Flies.

With the warm days flies multiply amazingly. Now is the time to attack them and prevent the breeding of millions from the few hundreds that already exist.

Perhaps the most effective method of destroying flies is by burning pyrethrum in each room. This stuns the flies and they can be swept up and burned.

Flies are dangerous carriers of disease and an enemy of humanity. Do your part toward keeping down the pest and improving the health of your community.

HIS AUNTIE JULIA.

She Is Really a Wonderful Woman In Her Own Way.

A GREAT HAND WITH YARBS.

She Can Brew Them Into a Medicine That Hits the Spot Every Time and Is Better Than a Doctor's Visit, How She Made Old Pulsifer Jump.

"My Aunt Julia is really a wonderful woman," exclaimed the low browed man, placing his feet on the manager's desk. "She hasn't any diplomas from medical colleges, but when it comes to curing a sick man she can give the ordinary doctor a start of ten years and beat him around a mile. Aunt Julia has firm faith in yarbs"—

"You mean herbs," interrupted the professor.

"I don't mean anything of the kind, I mean yarbs. You go over to Aunt Julia and mention yarbs, and her eyes will brighten up and she'll ask you to sit down and set a piece of pie, but if you begin talking about herbs she'll pinch you one of the best trusty mottos you ever knew off a mirror of your soul. Aunt Julia is pretty touchy about some things.

"One day old Mrs. Doolittle blew into the house to spend the afternoon, and Aunt Julia happened to say that something happened in Aprile. Mrs. Doolittle thinks she knows more than Webster's unabridged dictionary because she taught school about 150 years ago, when she was a young woman, and she told my aunt Julia sta and said that there was no such word as Aprile.

"You mean April, my dear," says she.

"I don't mean any such doggone thing," says my aunt. "I mean Aprile, and if you don't like it, Mrs. Doolittle, you can lump it, and be blamed to you."

"Well, they flounced away for five minutes or so, and their language in the area outside the shingles fall off the roof, and I was thinking of sending in a party call for the doctor, when Mrs. Doolittle left the house by way of the front door and jumped three pieces off our hitching posts in her haste to get home. A lot of sensitive and delicate household troupes witnessed that her ears and seemed to stimulate her.

"That's the sort of woman Aunt Julia is. Now, if you want to go over and talk to her about herbs I won't interfere.

"If there's anything my aunt delights in it is doctoring people. She hasn't a bit of use for drug store medicines. She brews her own remedies, and she doesn't think anything will help a sick person unless it tastes like the yarbs she prescribes. A dose of her old medicine will make a man's hackles feel as though he had swallowed a porcupine.

"I had a case like that summer, and the medicine she made for me had spoke on it. I was sick, and I felt miserable. I dream that Aunt Julia is handing me a spoonful of her pale medicine, and then I always wake with a yell. She is an old fashioned woman. She gathers her yarbs in the early part of the moon, and when she is brewing her medicines she mutters incantations and makes passes with her hands and does a lot of rocks that make your blood run cold. But her remedies hit the spot.

"Old man Pulsifer, you know, was a hopeless invalid for a year. He sat in a wheeled chair, and his wife fed him with the fine dishes, and all the members of the family were kept so busy waiting on him that they hadn't time to wind the clock or prime the pump. He said he had paralysis of the worst kind, and everybody believed him. Aunt Julia went over there one day and insisted in his old man's tongue and poked him in the ribs and tapped him with a cane, but he said he was a cured cure him up so quick it would make his head swim.

"If you can cure that man so he'll be of some use in the world," said Mrs. Pulsifer, "I'll give you the best crazy quilt my grandmother gave me when she was dying."

"Aunt Julia gathered a lot of yarbs at the dark of the moon in the south end orchard of the graveyard and stewed them over a slow fire, and the brew was made from them would have warped off the armor plate of a battleship. I knew by the smell of it that it was the real stuff, and you can't imagine how glad I was that I didn't have to take it. When she went over to dope old Pulsifer she insisted on my going down to help hold him down.

"The old man didn't want to take it. Anybody could see that. He got a smell of the stuff when Aunt Julia took the cork from the bottle, and a pale green sweat broke out on his brow. But I seized him by the top of his head and pulled his mouth open, and my aunt poured down about forty tablespoons of her rocket dope, and when it had started into his stomach he let out one wahoo and streaked out of doors like a professional Marathon runner. When we found him a couple of hours later he was standing in the creek, which was full of ice water, trying to get his rhythm cooled off.

A BROKEN DRIVING ROD.

The Disaster Most Dreaded by the Locomotive Engineer.

The clang calls that whiten the engineer's hair are mostly due to some one else's error or oversight which he cannot foresee or prevent. That many of them close calls do not result fatally is due to the excellent swift and skillful meeting of the emergency.

The great driving wheels on which most of the enormous weight on the locomotive rests are connected by massive jointed bars of forged steel. The ends of these are attached to the wheels about halfway between the axle and circumference. It is through these bars, called driving rods, that the wheels receive their impulse from the impressed steam. These rods weigh thousands of pounds each. Occasionally one of their fastenings will break, and then every revolution of the wheel to which the other end is attached will send the rod swinging like a mace full, beating down 300 strokes a minute. Nothing can withstand these awful blows. They tear up the track below and shatter the engine above, especially the cab where ride the engineer. No disaster comes so unexpectedly and is so much dreaded as this. Almost invariably it happens when the engine is running at high speed. When a driver breaks it is a miracle if the men in the cab escape with their lives. If they do survive they will be their heroes ever after. Jumping the track and rolling a wreck despite the rule of blows from this huge bar of steel that not infrequently a greater measure of praise than almost any other form of bravery that the railroad knows.

Only the other day one of the driving rods of a fast passenger locomotive broke while the train was running more than sixty miles an hour down the steep grades of Pickerel mountain. It is instant the whirling bar of steel and smashed the cab and broken the controlling mechanism, so that it was impossible to bring the train to a stop by ordinary means. The great locomotive lunged forward like a runaway mine that had thrown its rider. In some way, however, Lotz, the engineer, had escaped injury. He knew the opposite side of the cab and climbed out through the little window upon the scorching boiler when embedded in the engine stood a man, which it took a terrific sweat. The shock half threw the engineer from his perilous position, but he saved himself by grasping the bell rope. Then he worked himself down along the unlagged side of the swaying locomotive to where he could open one of the principal steam valves. A cloud of vapor rushed forth with a tremendous roar. Although robbed of its power, the locomotive did not slacken speed until it reached the bottom of the grade. Then little by little the throttling of the never driving rod, which was pounding the upper part of the engine to pieces, grew slower, and finally it stopped. No one was killed or injured, and not a passenger in the train knew until it was over of the danger that had been avoided so narrowly.—Theodore S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

TOO GOOD A SHAVE.

It Lulled Dudd to Sleep While the Price of Stocks Tumbled.

One of the anecdotes in Joseph L. King's "History of the San Francisco Stock Exchange Board" is as follows:

While stocks were quite low during a spell in 1873 a discovery of ore was made in Quincy the week following inclusive. It was the policy of those interested in a Comstock mine to never any improvement until they could secure for themselves a good quantity of the stock.

Dudd heard of this Quincy discovery and bought some stock, and, the price advanced from $16 to $80 the profits on the purchase of his mine enabled him to buy more stocks. Being quite a plunger, he purchased 10,000 shares. As the stock still advanced to higher figures he sold about 1,000 shares, leaving him a balance of 9,000 shares when the stock reached $82, which would have given him quite a large profit if all were sold at that figure.

During the recess that day he determined to sell the remainder, which would give him quite a profit. The afternoon session was devoted to the calling of outside stocks, occupying half an hour, after which the members would call up, through the chairman, any of the Comstock shares. Dudd, thinking he had thus sufficient during less first half hour to get shaved, sat down to a barber's chair and, being quite fresh, gave the barber $5, directing him to give him a good shave. It turned out to be too good a shave, as Dudd went to sleep, and the barber, being well paid, devoted quite a time in making his customer appear respectable. Dudd woke up, looked at his watch and made a rush for the board. He ascertained that Ophir has been called and had broken so badly that when his stock was sold he only obtained $10 a share for it.

He always claimed that that shave cost him just $40,000.

Getting into a Life Buoy.

The average person in danger of drowning usually attempts to lift a life buoy over his head, with the result that he immediately slipped deeper into the water. A good swimmer can do this with a sudden upward jerk, but with the nonswimmer it is more or impossible feat. What he should do when he has seized the buoy is to place both hands, palms downward, on the top as the part nearest the body, pressing it downward and slightly away, when the farther part of the buoy will rise out of the water and actually fall over the head. The arms can then be put through easily, "and there you are."

Just the Same.

"Try one of these fight biscuits," the little sergeant. "I thought they might be a welcome change from bread."

"Fine!" exclaimed the young bon bonne. "Just the same as bread and the injury when I was living at home."

"That's where I got them," she said.—Buffalo Express.

ROSE TO THE OCCASION.

It Was the Chance of a Lifetime, and She Made the Most of It.

The burglar hesitated. Back of him was a sheer drop of twenty-five feet to the ground. In front of him was a determined woman, grasping in her hand a huge revolver. She ceased him standily.

"I won't shoot," she said. "If you will remain still."

She advanced upon him and, poking the muzzle of the gun in his face, reached into his pocket and pulled out his revolver.

"Come in."

The burglar obediently stepped inside the room. All his courage was gone.

"Sit down," said the woman.

He sat down.

She got a huge ball of heavy cord from her bureau and spent the next twenty minutes in tying him up.

Then she pulned out of the window, "is that your wagon out there behind the hitch?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Thought you would carry away my silver in it?"

"Yes, ma'am."

The woman called her husband, who had been hiding behind the baby's crib in the next room.

"Here, John," she said, "take some of this furniture out."

John came in and got to work. The burglar watched with curious eyes. Suddenly the face blanched. He looked out of the window and saw in the light of the moon what John was carrying.

"What are you doing to me?" he asked.

The woman began cutting his cords. "I'm going to lend you up with all of the old eyesores that we have had in the house for three many years," she said merrily—"all the furniture presented to us at Christmas by kind hearted relatives, all the prizes we have taken at card parties, all the fourpenny-ornaments that we have been simply dying to get rid of."—Life.

CURE FOR LOSS OF MEMORY.

Case of an American Woman Married Abroad and an Accent.

"Nothing disgusts me more," said a woman who goes abroad every summer, "than to meet in Europe Americans who seem to be ashamed of their own language. I have often come across them, but a woman I met in Portland last year took the palm.

"She was introduced to me as the Countess Kossofsky or some name that sounded like that. She married a Russian or a Pole about three years before, and so far as I can gather she had hardly been any nearer Europe than a New York ferry boat before that time. She looked American, but her English was all broken into bits. She did not even say 'the,' but pronounced it 'ze.' She had great difficulty in enunciating phrases, and the result at times was a lot of French. We met morning I was breakfasting in the Kalsertuh, with a party of short cropped Americans who had drank the requisite number of glasses from the Republic or the Marktstrauss and had worked out according to prescription, one at three at the table had a New York physician who is some the less popular because he is frank in speech almost inclusively and will not stand for affectation. The countess came along and was invited to join the party. The doctor, it turned out, had known her since she was a child.

"Somebody asked her a question, and she started in reply with that accent of hers. I saw the doctor fidget. Then she made another remark in half French. The doctor said something that sounded like a swear. Then he blurted out:

"'For heaven's sake, Mary Smith, you don't mean to say that three years in Europe have made you forget your native tongue?'

"There was a hush, and then some of the women in the party smiled, but when the countess at next spoke it was in purest United States.—New York Sun.

A Rare Old Book.

The second book printed in the English language was "The Game and Playe of the Chess," which the title page says was "Fynysshd the last day of March, the yer of our lord god a thousand foure hundred and LXXVII." Only twelve copies of the work are now known to exist. In 1813 an Englishman of the name of Ambrose sold his copy for a sum equal to $270 in United States currency. Fifty-six years later, in 1869, the same volume (an imperfect copy) was sold for $2,120. The British museum has refused an offer of $10,000 for its copy, which is imperfect to the extent of having seven leaves missing.

The Making of Words.

Dean Swift protested against "speculations, operations, preliminaries, ambassador, pettifoggers, communication, circumvolution, battalions," as newfangled expressions brought into common use by the war of his day. Today nearly all these are the most ordinary English. In his time "molesteem commonly to have been written "modes," and "pshaw" also had the doubled consonant. Hence his complaint that "we cram one syllable and cut off the rest as the owl fattened her mice after she had bit off their legs to prevent them from running away."

"WHEN OUR SHIP COMES IN"

A Phrase That Is Common to More Lands Than Ours.

"I was born in New England," said Mr. Yankleton, "and not born rich. We were not what you call poor folks. We were comfortable, too—a decent old open house for our supper, and while we did live comfortably we did not have many luxuries. Those we were going to have, as we used to say, when our ship came in, to which coming we always looked forward cheerfully and hopefully.

"The other day, walking past a toy store which had many pretty things displayed in its window, I encountered a mother and her little daughter, a little girl of maybe eight. They were comfortably and nicely dressed people, but they were not rich, their means, I should say, were about my own, and though their speech was as clear, good English their accent showed that they came from some foreign land.

"There's what I would like to have," said the small girl as they passed, looking up at something in the toy store window; and looking up at the object that the little girl had indicated and then looking down at her, the mother said mildly:

"Wait till the ship comes in."

"It interested me greatly to hear this little girl, who was, from an other country, for somehow this phrase, familiar as it has always been to me, had always seemed to me peculiar to my own land and region, and at first it did surprise me. But then, to be sure, human hopes and aspirations are the same in all lands, and though around the world they may be voiced in many tongues there are many sayings that we may think peculiar to us, but really are ancient and common; and of those expressing a hope that is universal, 'when our ship comes in,' is one."

Tit for Tat.

The lady of the house was a handsome woman of a mature order of beauty, and when she had completed her toilet she gazed fondly at herself in the glass and remarked to the new maid:

"You'd give a good deal to be as handsome as I am, wouldn't you, now?" Maid—Yes, ma'am, I do, indeed, "almost as much as you'll give to be my size."

Teach Children to Whistle.

Whistling is a very valuable physical exercise when properly employed. It develops the muscles used in whistling, and they should be encouraged. The habit of whistling develops the full breath control. To whistle properly one must take a deep breath through the nostrils and in whistling, keep the lungs well inflated. Remember with right breathing comes a good circulation and from that follows most digestion.

Prevention of Cruelty to Men.

The dinner test in Siberia is a good custom. A fellow, on coming to his husband's house, gives a dinner prepared with her own hands as a test of the education she has received. If she succeeds in gratifying her guests, it is taken as a proof not only of the young woman's good education, but also as a recommendation of her whole family by whom she was so attracted.

Gossiping.

Tale-bearing and idle gossiping is, under all circumstances, and by whomsoever indulged in, a most unpleasant and disreputable business; but when it assumes the form of malicious slander it at once becomes a crime—even though the poisonous darts are so shaped that the strong arm of Lee himself may be unable to protect or remove the wrongs of the once thus injured.

Not Much.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

The expected has happened. A bill for old-age pensions has been introduced in the house of representatives. The introducer is William Hawkins Wilson of Illinoiburg, Pa., former president, senior international secretary of the United Mine Workers of America, who now makes a living for his five children on a farm, when he is not lucky enough to be drawing a congressman's salary, says Pittsburgh Eagle. The provisions of the bill give $120 a year to each man or woman over the age of sixty-five who has neither property worth $1,500 nor an income of over $400 a year. Modest! It is to be expected of an author of a bill that Wilson's measure is modest by half. This is a rich country. How can it expect a person over sixty-five years old to live comfortably on $120 a year? It can do no such thing. It can't even keep alive on that. Nobody can live on $2.40 a week, anyhow, and we would have a twelve for seeking longevity. Nobody would be silly enough to nurse thrift for a pension. Industry and further thrift would be needed to keep life going till the age of sixty-five should be reached. For that matter, why not make the age forty? This is an era of humanitarian experimentation.

The mosquito season is at hand, and New Jersey, always the most formidable insect most abounds, is moving in the matter of destroying the pests. Dragonflies are being used in this work with energetic and organized action has been taken. Interested sections are to be called and notified, and it is believed that by the methods employed millions of larvae will be killed and thus grave consequences will be averted. It has been shown that combined and systematic effort, using the most scientific means of killing the evil, can be very effective, and New Jersey, which has been a great sufferer from the ravages of the mosquito, may add vastly to health and comfort by general war almost at exterminating the mosquito.

In Cuba to furnish the means of safeguarding the forests and protecting game is a novel idea, yet it is an innovation from that island that experiments in manufacturing paper from sugar cane have been carried entirely successful, and that the product can be turned out at small cost, it is said, to compete with it. Of course the cane is what is left after the sugar has been extracted, and this is another by-product comes into play. It has also been suggested that the bagasse, which is to be converted into paper. As there is practically an unlimited supply of such material, making paper of the assertion should be a very important step in conservation.

Crossing the English channel in an airplane seems to be become almost a habit. Louis Paulhan, who was the world's a year ago and was followed by Jacques de Lesseps in May 21 last. Both those aviators were Frenchmen, and they flew from France to England. Now Charles Stewart Rolls, an Englishman, has made the trip from England to France and back again without a stop, and therefore holds the record in this particular line of achievement. And he did the trick in a Wright aeroplane, so America gets at least part of the credit.

Dispatches from Seattle report an almost unprecedented rush to the gold fields of Alaska. This does not look as though there was any general acceptance of the story that a Scranton alchemist has discovered a method of transmuting baseball into gold and silver, which, if actually done, would ironically minimize the value of the yellow and white metals. In short, the modern prospector or speculator has no use for the philosopher's stone, so eagerly sought by the ancients.

The movement for the delivery of sanitary rules for all passenger trains and railroad stations is now aimed at the carrying operations, because it originated among them, and was suggested by W. A. Applegate, chief surgeon of the southern railway. The railroads have always been leaders in promoting the safety and comfort of the traveling public, and they will cooperate cheerfully with the United States public health and marine hospital service in combating germ diseases.

How will coming generations get their pleasure from the outdoor recreations? The motorcycle has placed hob with the bicycle, and the power boat has the canoe and skiff in the estimation of the young men on the run. A day motor now pushes the light Indian canoe over the shallow lakes and streams, and for some the paddle is too strenuous or too slow. Shell on wheels is the proposition took a motor in his pocket and got over the ground without the labor of moving his feet!

Down in Connecticut recently a woman died leaving a fortune had been left to her. People who are waiting for rich uncles to pass away will appreciate that this action was wholly unfortunate.

A Boston gentleman has succeeded in breeding a blue rabbit. In other words, certain men have been able to produce polka-dotted cows, without having a single Burbank up their sleeves.

19 KILLED, 20 HURT

MISTAKE IN ORDERS CAUSE

Cars Are Telescoped and Hardly a Person on Train Escapes Injury—Coach Filled With Women and Children Crushed by Engine.

CINCINNATI SECTION OF TWENTIETH CENTURY LIMITED CRASHES INTO FREIGHT.

Middletown, O.—Nineteen persons were killed outright and at least 20 hurt, 14 fatally, when the New York bound Big Four passenger train from St. the Cincinnati section of the Twentieth Century Limited, collided head-on with a Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton freight train near here Monday afternoon.

The engines are a mass of ruins, the passenger coaches were telescoped to a pulp, splintered, while the smoker went over the baggage car and headed in a cornfield.

The big Four people had asked the right of way over the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton tracks because of a freight wreck at Sharon, O. and the train was heading about at upward speed of 50 miles an hour. It is said that the engineers of two trains had not seen each other's engine until too close for the accident. Orders had been given it was said for "clear track for the Big Four train," which the Dayton two minutes before, but that about one o'clock and which was trying to make up the lost time.

The two engines crashed with terrific impact. The massive engines reared up like living things then crashed into and through the cars of the Dayton train. The force of the collision was received in Cincinnati. Officials of the Big Four and C. H. & D. officials sent a train to the scene with Cincinnati physicians and surgeons. Trafford officials of both roads also went to the scene from Dayton and Middletown and Dayton rushed assistance and the people of Middletown turned out almost en masse to render what assistance they could.

When the engines crashed into one of the steel smokers crushed through the combination baggage and smoker and all cars, which was large, filled with women and children. A few some minutes hence a fire at once took hold and spread, as the crews as well as passengers were tossed about. When those too able reached the upturned cars they found men and injured persons lying near by pinned under the heavy wreckage. Within a few minutes the injured had been removed. Some of them were frantic, for the coach was what is known as the ladies' car reserved especially for the women and children.

While the dead were being removed willing hands were working with might and under distressing circumstances. The shrieks of injured, some of whom were dying, the din and shouting the noise of escaping steam as it blew from burst steam pipes, made the affair most distressing.

The bodies of the dead were conveyed to the station at Hamilton and Dayton, where an undertaker from here, the scene was scene of wailing. Crowds of men and women thronged around the building, many in search of relatives or friends they knew were on the train.

The Twentieth Century train was in charge of Conductor Weyer. Mr. Weyer is thought the fact that the Twentieth Century Limited left late was the main cause of the accident with having left Dayton ten minutes the first was being made it regain that lost time. The engineer of the freight, Hamilton to Dayton siding and it seems had orders for a clear track at 1:17 p. m. When that time arrived, she pulled out on the main line but was scarcely under headway when the flyer flashed into view and crashed into it. There was practically no warning given the engineer to reverse levers before the crash came.

The dead: A. S. Garrigan, Columbus; Thomas Dunlevy and Wildman Dunlevy, brothers, Dayton; Richard Van Horn, Dayton; Charles W. Molton, Dayton; J. Smith Iden, Dayton; H. E. Smith, Dayton; George Pulley, Dayton; H. P. Baker, Cincinnati; Roy T. Sunter, London; Frank Golden, Urakenan, Delaware; Kieng Yen Liu, Chinaman, Columbus; C. W. Grant, Springfield; John W. Conley, McCondersville; Fay A. Tou Pelmer, Pleasantville; Jesse J. Body, Patriot, Ind.; three unidentified men.

Seriously injured: William Weisner, pilot; W. M. Lamb, fireman; Robert Wall, pilot; William A. Schulhoff, Cincinnati; A. B. Menke, Columbus; John Hankin, Will Hinkle, Thomas Metlee, Gary Ferguson, Carrie Ferguson, William Haller, all of Dayton.

NEW YORK PRIMARY LAW LSOT

SENATE FOLLOWS ACTION TAKEN BY ASSEMBLY.

Republicans Join With Democrats in Defeating Bill Indorsed by Roosevelt.

Albany.—Swiftly and emphatically Monday fell in line with the assembly Friday and sent the Cobb direct nomination bill down to defeat.

The final vote was 25 ayes to 19 noes, seven Republicans combining with the Democrats against the bill. Twenty-six votes were necessary to pass the bill.

The measure was killed after the amendment proposed by Lloyd C. Griscom, chairman of the New York corporation committee, and indorsed by Theodore Roosevelt, had been incorporated in the measure by a vote of 24 to 21.

The progressive inheritance amendment also passed by the assembly was enacted by a vote of 38 to 4 and the bill providing for an appropriation of $25,000 for the expenses of the extraordinary session was passed in both houses.

The result of the fight in the senate was even a more positive refusal to accept Theodore Roosevelt's leadership in the matter than that of the assembly.

The direct tax bill failed of enactment.

MANY DIE IN CLOUDBURST

Three Kentucky Counties Are Swept by Storm and Flood—Deaths Reach Forty.

Saylersville, Ky.—Fifteen people are known to be dead, fifteen adults are reported as having died and fifty forty are missing as the result of a cloudburst in Magoffin, Floyd and Knott counties, Ky. late Tuesday. In one of the towns of the Knott county have been secured by the workmen in Saylersville and the towns affected by the cloudburst. Communication with the outside with the exception of a single telegraph wire. Portions are surrounded by fires and no word can be got from the stricken town.

MRS. PHEDUM'S GUESTS DISCUSS THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME

ROOSEVELT AND TAFT MEET

FORMER EXECUTIVE CALLS ON PRESIDENT AT BEVERLY.

Mission Secrecy Concerning What Passed Between Them—Cordiality Marked With Cordiality.

Beverly, Mass.—A sudden spread over the face of President Taft on Tuesday afternoon as he hurriedly left his work in the library of the Burgess Point cottage and rushed to the veranda when the Lodge limousine drove up, was the first sign of which was announcing the arrival of former President Roosevelt.

They met just outside the door and simultaneously Taft clasped a hand on the Roosevelt shoulder as Roosevelt seized the president's hand in a strong grip.

"Mr. President," said one and one, and "Theodore," cried the other.

"Hy George," continued Roosevelt, "this is fine. I am mighty glad to see you, Mr. President."

Thus, after a separation of sixteen months, Taft and Roosevelt met again at the Taft cottage here in Beverly, with only Senator Lodge and Secretary Norton present, all the rest of the world being barred out.

Those who witnessed the meeting say it was characterized by all the cordiality of relations between the two—that there was the most of feeling disparaged—and that the hearty bursts of laughter that prevailed first from the president and then from Roosevelt as they sat on the veranda and chatted over old times and old jokes was strongly reminiscent of the old White House days.

Secretary Knox and Chairman Lodge of the republican national committee, in the days of the greatest intimacy between the two men, were conspicuous in the measure by a vote of 24 to 21.

The progressive inheritance amendment also passed by the assembly was enacted by a vote of 38 to 4 and the bill providing for an appropriation of $25,000 for the expenses of the extraordinary session was passed in both houses.

The result of the fight in the senate was even a more positive refusal to accept Theodore Roosevelt's leadership in the matter than that of the assembly.

The direct tax bill failed of enactment.

FOREST FIRES PERIL TOWNS

Terrible Havoc is Wrought in Rainy River District, Manitoba—Loss is Heavy.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—Forest fires have during the past few days wrought terrible havoc in the Rainy River district, destroying timber and property variously estimated at from three to six million dollars. The town of Emo is seriously threatened and is practically cut off from communication with the outside with the exception of a single telegraph wire. Portions are surrounded by fires and no word can be got from the stricken town.

Six Children Disappear.

Terre Haute.—Six children disappeared Sunday from the children's home at Hadley. The officials of the home are unable to explain how children had been in the neighborhood and offered to take the children to Terre Haute.

Four Drown in Cloudburst.

Lexington, Ky.—One man and three children were drowned near Hindman, Ky., Monday, when a cloudburst caused $50,000 damage. Many buildings were swept away.

Dixie Population Grows.

Washington.—That the census of 1910 will show the southern states, including Missouri and Oklahoma, to have made a gain in population of 21 per cent, since 1909, is the estimate given out by the Southern Commercial congress.

No Increase on Buffington.

Chicago.—A report that the Buffington case, in contemplating an increase in the pay of its unorganized employes, was emphatically denied by President Miller Thursday.

BALLINGER TO STAY

Secretary Has Conference With Taft. Will Remain in Cabinet.

DECLARES HE'S NO QUITTER

Carrying Out of Legislation Adopted by Recent Session of Congress is Subject of Discussion.

Beverly, Mass.—Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, and President Taft conferred here Tuesday that he will remain in the office. No matter what the verdict of the congressional investigating committee the secretary decided that he will not resign.

Secretary Ballinger declared that the attitude toward public domain would retain the spirit of conservation, but would also conserve the privileges of development. When some one referred to it "and the Ballinger policy," he said:

"You may call it what you like, but I will tell you that one thing—it will live the lines of the law."

Earlier in the day, before seeing Mr. Taft, Mr. Ballinger said that he "stand in nature." he would not decline a reorganization. After his talk with the president, Mr. Ballinger spoke more positively that he would not quit.

"I am going to see things through," he added, referring to the reorganization of the department.

The discussion with Mr. Taft was confined to matters of the interior department, the president Saturday, and on carrying out legislation of the recent session of congress.

The ten-day seclusion of the president at his summer home, Beverly, Wyoming, got as far as Boston and telephones to the Massachusetts capital that no engagement would be made with any one for ten days.

The president, Mr. Taft, met up Beckman Winthrop, assistant secretary of the navy, and Representative John Dwight of New York, Republican whip of the house of representatives, at the cottage, each accompanied by his wife.

HUGHES FOR CHIEF JUSTICE

Governor Will Probably Succeed Melville W. Fuller As Head of Supreme Court.

Washington.—With the death of Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller and the probable retirement of Associate Justice William H. Moody of the Supreme court, President Taft will have two vacancies in that court to fill within the next few months.

It is generally believed that Gov. Charles E. Hughes of New York, who is a Republican, will be appointed to succeed Fuller, will be promoted to chief justice, and that Lloyd W. Bowers of Chicago, solicitor general of the department of justice, will be promoted to the place of Mr. Hughes. The other vacancy suggested is that Mr. Bowers will be the chief justice of the new court, and that he

SAW VISIONS OF DISASTER

Strange Tales of Premonition That Are Absolutely Known to Be True.

Whether one believes in the occult or not, he frequently hears or reads tales of a premonition of disaster by a person closely related by ties of blood or friendship to those in the catastrophe. A gentleman was out serving one evening with his two young children. The horse became frightened at a train and in the excitement the younger child was thrown out of the buggy, narrowly escaping the plunging hoofs. The mother, who had been at home all the while, startled her husband by relating the incident and narrow escape immediately upon their return.

A traveling salesman recently wired his firm for permission to return to his home immediately—a distance of a thousand miles. The evening before he sent his request he saw himself in a dream giving medicine to his child. His request was granted and he took the first train home. His child died a day after his arrival and the scene at the bedside and those present were identical with the dream that forewarned him of the catastrophe.

If will be readily recalled that Dewey's wife, Cuipbumia, had a dream the night before he was slain that so affected her that she almost prevailed upon him not to go to the senate that day.

On the night the great Alexander was born the temple of Diana at Ephesus was burned. The soothsayers predicted then that the "scourge of Asia" had been born. That their prophecy was fulfilled is a matter of history.

A Sailor Drowned

Mick McCauley, a quartermaster on the U. S. lighthouse tender Sumac, was drowned near the buoy station in this city Saturday afternoon.

McCauley, with other sailors from the Sumac, were returning from the channel bank. He went too far over the steep bank without knowing it, and not being a swimmer, he went down. His companions made attempts to rescue him, but when he was reached he had been down fifteen minutes. The life saving crew was summoned and Capt. Kent and his men worked over the man for an hour. But their efforts were fruitless.

Deceased had only recently come over from Ireland. He had relatives and many friends on Beaver Island, having shipped on the Sumac from St. James. He also has a brother in Philadelphia, who arrived yesterday in response to a telegram. He was 23 years old and unmarried.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, July 8th, '10

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met at an adjourned meeting on the above date—Mayor Hampton presiding. Aldermen present—Swinton, Paddock, Hachow, Webster and Gelken.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Moved by Alderman Hachow and seconded by Alderman Webster that the recommendation of the street committee to pave Allen street from the south line of Belvedere Ave., south to the north line of Smith street be accepted and approved. Motion prevailed.

RESOLVED by the common council for the City of Charlevoix that the roll of special assessments for the paving of Allen street, as authorized by the resolution of the council of the city of Charlevoix adopted on the 11th day of June, 1910, and a well and proper paving, between the Charlevoix Boat Landing and the Charlevoix Hotel Association next to the south line of Allen Street with crushed rock thirty feet wide in accordance with specifications for said work on file in the office of the City Clerk, and approved by the Common Council of said City of Charlevoix, be received and placed on file and a copy thereof certified by the City Clerk, and published in the official city paper.

RESOLVED further that the Common Council of said City of Charlevoix will meet at the office of the City Clerk in said City of Charlevoix on the 8th day of August, 1910, at 8 o'clock p. m. of said day, to review said special assessment roll in the office of the city clerk and the time of the meeting of the board of review of assessments as above provided for in said resolution of the Common Council of said City of Charlevoix, a copy of which city clerk is directed by section 12 of chapter 74 of Act No. 215, as amended, "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities" approved June 4th, 1895, and all acts and amendatory thereof, and published in the official city paper of said city on the 21st day of July, A. D. 1910, by a jury and by the notice.

WILL E. HAMPTON, Mayor
O. ELLSWORTH DUTTON, City Clerk

Moved by Alderman Hachow and seconded by Alderman Webster that the report of the street committee regarding the over-plus on Michigan and Petoskey avenues be taken from the table. Motion prevailed.

Moved by Alderman Hachow and seconded by Alderman Paddock that the report of the street committee submitting a total cost of paving District No. 7 showing $913.12 to be borne by the property owners over and above original estimate of cost be accepted and that the city attorney be instructed to draft proper resolution to provide for re-assessment for said amount. Motion prevailed by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes, Paddock, Swinton, Hachow, Webster and Gelken. Nays none.

The common council of the City of Charlevoix having under consideration the question of paving that part of Allen Street from the south line of Belvedere Avenue south to the north line of Smith street, pursuant to the petition of the property owners whose property abuts on said portion of said Allen Street, and the same being a new street.

RESOLVED by the common council of the City of Charlevoix, that the cost and expense of said paving be assessed upon the property abutting on said portion of said Allen street and paving together with the estimate of the cost of said paving, specifications, diagrams and estimate of cost to be made and filed in the office of the City Clerk, be and the same is hereby approved and adopted.

Adopted by a yea and nay vote on the 8th day of July, A. D. 1910.

WILL E. HAMPTON, Mayor
O. ELLSWORTH DUTTON, City Clerk

Council Chambers, July 12, 1910.

The common council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date Mayor Hampton presiding.

Aldermen present Swinton, Hachow, Nordtvedt, Webster and Gelken.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Moved by Alderman Webster and seconded by Alderman Swinton that the resignation of Thomas Shawley as Street Commissioner and Policeman be accepted. Motion prevailed.

The matter of a request for cement sidewalk on Rose Street was referred to the Street Committee.

Alderman Webster offered the following resolution and moved its adoption.

RESOLVED by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix that the grading and paving of Belvedere Avenue from the south line of Allen street from the south line of Belvedere Avenue south to the north line of Smith street, including gutter, crosswalks, man holes, catch basins and approaches is a necessary public improvement.

RESOLVED that the plans, specifications, diagrams and estimates of the city surveyor for the grading and paving of said Avenue with crushed rock thirty feet in width, including gutter, crosswalks, man holes, catch basins and approaches, as above stated, be and the same is approved and adopted.

RESOLVED FURTHER, that it is the intention of said common council to make the improvement above described and to pay the cost thereof from the Highway Improvement Fund of said City of Charlevoix, and to pay the balance thereof from the general fund of said City of Charlevoix, and to pay the balance upon the property abutting on said Belvedere Avenue and fronting on either side thereof, and to assess such portion of said improvement to be assessed against the lots and lands adjacent to said Belvedere Avenue and fronting on either side thereof, and to be specially benefited by said improvement, to be assessed according to the benefits received by said lots, lands and premises, and to be assessed upon the property to be specially benefited by said improvement.

RESOLVED that the whole amount levied by said resolution upon the property fronting on said Avenue for said improvement shall not exceed twenty five per centum of the value of said premises as valued in the last preceding tax roll of said City of Charlevoix, and that the balance of said cost and expense of said improvement, together with the interest on said bonds, shall be paid from the general fund of said City of Charlevoix.

RESOLVED FURTHER, that Tuesday the 9th day of July at 7:00 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, at the council room in said City of Charlevoix, be and the same is hereby fixed and appointed as the time and place when and where the common council will meet to review the assessment roll, diagram and estimate of cost of said improvement, and that the City Clerk be and he is hereby instructed to publish and post a notice of the time and place when the common council will meet for said purpose, and to publish the same, two weeks in Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper published and circulating in said City of Charlevoix.

Passed July 12th, A. D. 1910.

INFANTILE PARALYS'S.

At various points throughout the country there are vivid recollections of the deaths due to the mysterious outbreak of infantile paralysis. Not only children, but elderly people were among its victims. At New York those who died from the malady included a prominent business man and a priest, who had visited young members of his flock afflicted with infantile paralysis and caught the illness from them. There were numerous cases in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Specialists in the Rockefeller laboratories at New York have been working on infantile paralysis for a year, using monkeys in experiments which have demonstrated that it is not due to an abnormal condition of the blood, but is an contagious disease of the spinal cord. Despite careful microscopic search for a diatomic microbe, so far none has been found. Experiments are now directed to the discovery of an antidote for infantile paralysis such as that which has been used with marked success in the treatment of diphtheria. The knowledge that has been gained of the nature of the disease is expected to facilitate the discovery of the cure.

It transpires that the recent report from Germany that a certificate of injection or importation of pork from America would be demanded was erroneous. The German government has not removed its interdict against the trade. Knowing that the special inspection for trichina has been abandoned in this country Germany will no longer accord special certificates to us that disease, because it is realized that no certificates can be produced. This, of course, leaves matters unchanged. But at present there is no indication of any operations of American pork because a short supply of hogs and an advance in prices have caused the prices to mount to heights at which exportation is unprofitable.

A New York yachting writer remarks that the schooner Shamrock, once a proud bearer of the New York Yacht club pennant, has been "tugged" by a steam tug into a fishing boat with a gasoline engine. The service may be humane in comparison with the royal service of a well-kept racing craft, but it is far from humble in comparison with the fate of the latest racers for the America's cup. The majority of them have come to the scrap yard with their first paint on their plates.

Ingenuity worthy of a better cause was that of a couple of Jersey robbers who, on calling at a house and being admitted, bound and gagged the inmates, after which one disguised himself in the plano to deceive the neighbors while the other gathered up the loot. This is how he whistled at the plan with a vengeance.

THE SONG OF THE COUNTRY

INDICTED AS JURY TAMPERER

CHICAGO GROCER CHARGED WITH TRYING TO CORRUPT.

Chicago.—A fresh sensation in connection with the legislative bribery scandal arose when State's Attorney Wayman Wednesday announced that an indictment had been voted charging John A. Mosley, a grocer, with attempting to corrupt Owen T. Morford, a juror in the recent trial of Lee O'Neil Browne.

Morford, his wife and his father, Thorough Morford, testified before the grand jury. Mrs. Morford testified that shortly after the broken jury had been sworn, she went to Mosley's grocery within the neighborhood in which the Morfords live. Mosley, she said, gave her two cigars, which he asked her to give to her husband, who had been accepted on the jury. Mosley asked her to use her influence to persuade her husband to vote for the acquittal of Browne, holding out as a reward of doing so that Morford would not have to work for a railroad any more as he would get a heap of money.

By agreement between counsel the trial of the case of Lee O'Neil Browne, charged with bribing Representative Charles A. White to vote for Lorimer for United States senator, was continued to July 29.

DEATH IN TORNADO'S PATH

Hills Circus and Shatters Tent, Killing One—Levels Crops—Wires Are Down.

Watertown, S. D.—One dead and a score injured, the main tent and menagerie tent of Hinglians' circus in ruins and two horses killed is the result of a tornado here.

The spectators had barely left the tent when the first blast ripped the canvas into ribbons. The canvas came from the lungs and was carried blazing into the air by the gale.

It was the heaviest hailstorm ever witnessed in the Red river valley.

It extended over the northern part of Grand Forks county and across Polk county, Minnesota.

In some sections the crops were pounded down to the ground and the leaves were stripped from the trees.

Details are meager, as all wires are down west.

Reports received from Brecken-ridge, Minn., Grand Forks, N. D., Sioux Falls and Brookings, in South Dakota, tell of hail stones and much damage made by the storm belt, but details are lacking.

SLAYER IS LYNCHED

MOB STORMS NEWARK (O.) JAIL AND HANGS "DRY" DETECTIVE.

HAD KILLED A SALOONIST

Officers of Anti-Rum League Rails "Near Beer" Saloons by Which Man is Shot and Dies Later—Then Trouble Begins.

Newark, O.—Battering down the doors of the jail, a mob of women and children Friday dragged Charles Etherington, an anti-saloon detective, who confessed to having killed a saloonkeeper, and lynched him in the public square.

The mob which had been increasing all evening at the jail became frenzied and refused to listen to pleadings for preservation of order.

They broke all the jail windows and rammed in the outer door, using the keys from the jailer. They quickly found the prisoner's cell on the second floor and then, dragged by a rope, the man was taken up third street to the square and across the park to the southeast corner, where he was strung up over the arm of a telephone pole.

Gov. Harmon arrived in the city Sunday and began an investigation which may lead to the arrest of the sheriff and Mayor.

The shooting of Howard and the lynching of Etherington is the culination of long standing trouble between the "wets" and "drys" here.

Etherington and twenty others, all said to be "dry" detectives, came here from Cleveland and other places to get evidence against "near beer" joints. At the time of their arrival there were about 1,000 men, many of them armed, in the city, and they were handcuffed for over an hour. At the third place visited a big trouble started.

A mob of 2,000 gathered and threatened the detectives.

Twenty-five mounted league officers rescued a friend. The police then rushed the detectives to the jail.

At the police station, where they were searched, revolvers, black jacks and cartridge belts were taken from them.

The remaining twelve detectives broke and ran, pursued by the howling mob. Half a dozen were caught and beaten. The pursuers rounded up the men in a downtown crowd fell on Jim Jenderson of Columbus, and John Hess of Newark, and they were taken to the Newark hospital. Hess died, also, in the park, being trampled in his flight and the crowd not upon him. Howard, the proprietor of a "near beer" saloon, the last place visited by the detectives, was in front of Etherington when the latter drew a revolver and fired.

Etherington was hurried to the jail with a rolling mob at the heels of the officers who were protecting him. All the officers crowd barricaded themselves and were threatening to lynch the detective.

The crisis came when word was flashed from the Newark hospital that Howard, who was a former city councilman, had died there of his wound. Up to this time there had been blame apparently had the situation well in hand. When it became known that Howard was dead an immense crowd gathered in front of the jail, the windows were smashed, the door battered in and Etherington dragged out and strung up.

Newark, which over a year ago was voted "dry," has "near beer" saloons while the Anti-Saloon league officials have in the past said they suspected some of them to be violators of the law. To-day, against the Anti-Saloon leaguers for a long time.

TAFT TO TAKE YACHT CRUISE

President Will Extend Vacation Ten Days and Make Trip Along Maine Coast.

Beverly, Mass.—President Taft decided Thursday that at the end of his ten days' vacation he will take a ten days' cruise in the naval yacht Mayflower for the purpose of visiting the Maine coast. The cruise will start on July 18, on which date, denoting the uniform of commander-in-chief of the army and navy, the president, Mr. Taft, accompanied by his family, will board the Mayflower at Gloucester for Bar Harbor and other summer ports of call on the Maine coast.

Bar Harbor will be the base from which short trips will be made to nearby points. The party will sleep on board the yacht at night, but will take their meals on shore at various places where the golfing links are.

A convoy will probably follow the Mayflower, as it is regarded as too great a risk to have the president to sea without assistance being in easy reach in case of accident.

Madrid Removes American.

The offense of Mr. Rosenberg is not known. The action had resulted Mr. Moffatt, the United States minister, to Nicaragua, has been handed over an hour. At the third place visited a big trouble started.

FALLS FAR WITH AEROPLANE

Baroness De La Roche Loses Head at Approach of Other Aeronauts—Is Fatally Hurt.

Bethany Plain, Rheims.—Baroness De la Roche, the first French woman aeronaut, was injured probably fatally here Friday by falling from a height of more than 150 feet.

Baroness De la Roche had flown around the field once at a height of 150 meters (492 feet), when suddenly in front of the applauding spectators she appeared to become frightened and confused at the approach of two other aeroplanes. She began to descend, but while still 50 meters from the ground her control of the machine over the aeroplane turned over and fell like a log.

The baroness' legs and arms were broken, her mangled body was removed from the wreckage and taken to the hospital, where she is said to be dying. It was found that her skull was fractured.

While momentarily conscious the baroness said that the rush of air when a other passed by her head had frightened her, whereupon she cut the ignition and lost control of her machine.

TRAIN ROBBERS ARE FOILED

THREE YOUTHS HOLD UP THE "KATY" FLYER.

Crew Opens Fire Under Muzzles of Revolvers, Regains Cash and Flash Away.

St. Louis. — Cleverness on the part of the engineer prevented three youthful and apparently inexperienced bandits from robbing the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Southwestern flyer, No. 2, near Lathrop, about fifteen miles from St. Louis.

The young men were arrested as suspects and are in jail pending investigation. The police do not believe they are the men wanted and are searching for three others.

The bandits compelled the engineer and fireman, at the points of revolvers, to descend from the cab and go with them to the baggage car to assist them in uncoupling it.

While listening about the coupling the engineer and fireman in the dark saw an opportunity to slide away from the bandits. The two started on a run for the cab. The bandits soon became aware that the crew was dashing for the cab and opened fire.

The engineer and fireman sprang into the cab, the engineer threw the throttle wide open and dashed away with the train.

The bandits were fired during the attempted hold-up, and the passengers, who filled five coaches, were thrown into a panic. Conductor Walker, who also displayed great coolness in the crisis, helped the crew in calming the passengers.

The train was in the hands of the bandits 10 minutes. For half an hour they tried to get their own accord to use the baggage car. It was not until they found themselves able to do so the work into their first the engineer and fireman.

Officials of the railroad officials here there were thousands of dollars in the baggage car in addition to the mail.

RAIL LINES ARE PROSPEROUS

Roads Are Placing Enormous Orders for Equipment—Dividends Show Big Increase.

New York.—Continued evidences of the great prosperity that is surging all over the country are given in the enormous orders placed within the few days by the large railroads of the country for additional equipment.

Not merely in money spent for improvements of facilities, but in the declaring of dividends by the railroads lies the proof that the good times which returned a year or more ago have to be way. Unfinished. Since January 1 eighty-six railroads and industrial corporations in this country have increased their disbursements or declared initial or resumed dividends to the extent of $77,675,000 a year. Twenty-three of these corporations are railroads, their increase alone representing $15,000,000. Up to June 1 of this year the aggregate dividend payments from the eighty-six corporations in question have amounted to about $258,000,000, which is an increase of about $44,200,000 over the first five months of last year. No better proof could be given, it is argued, that the country still enjoys throughout 1910 almost unexampled prosperity.

Persons not complying will be "regarded as revolutionists and treated as such." That is, if General Salinas thinks fit he may shoot them or starve them into submission. The people of this ridge are anti-Madrid and they are to be crushed in the most barbarous manner.

ESTRADANS WIN NAVAL FIGHT

Repulse Surprise Attack by Two Madrid Gunboats on Town on Pearl Lagoon.

Bluefields—The combined defense of a force of American planters and merchants and the Estrada soldiery successfully baked an attack against Pearl Lagoon Saturday when the Madrid gunboat San Jacinto, backed up by the gunboat Venus, directed a heavy fire into the center of the town.

Concealed guns set upon the coast slice the last Madrid invasion were directed against the San Jacinto. Captain Solis of the gunboat and a score of their crew were killed outright, while forty or fifty more of the men were wounded. The attacking gunboat was practically disabled.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale-people look good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.
A remedy that makes the strongest strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease which fastens itself upon the weak, indifferent multitude of diseases.
Cure yourself of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great Stomach Bactoretics, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.
You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, and is a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, attesting its marvelous curative properties.

CHAPTER XIII.—(Continued.)

He was a little fellow and he was anxious to please. Pollock, who was watching that Rodney Merriam was resting on the bridge and toward the end of the bridge, who had thrust his hands into his pockets and was leaning and looking as idyllic as it is possible for a young man to look, said:

"Squah Pollock" he blurted out, suddenly, "I haven't a dime! I guess I'm telling the truth. I don't care whose son you are, I'm telling the truth. I haven't a dime. He hands from his pockets he held them out to us, showing an arm's length blackness, "Will you shake hands with me?"

"Certainly, Mr. Merriam."

A few hours later, the usual crowd assembled in the smoking-room of the Tippecanoe Club, when Rodney Merriam appeared in the doorway and stood a moment, his head thrust upon the Hill, returning their greetings and smiling at them from the corners of his eyes and from their seats.

"Gentlemen," he said, standing by his chair, "I wish to say that I am the luckiest fellow in the world. I have no misunderstanding, the world is not my enemy, I'm not a fool, I'm not a coward, I'm not a fool, I'm not a coward, I'm not a fool, I'm not a coward

A SQUARE DEAL.

Osborn's Record, Life and Acts Bear the Light.

The Daily Herald-Leader, of Menominee, makes the following interesting comment on the gubernatorial situation:

Depending upon ignorance and prejudice, an effort is being made up the part of those newspapers which are supporting Lieutenant Governor Kelley to injure the gubernatorial candidacy of Chase S. Osborn, because of his residence, north of the Straits of Mackinaw. The success of this move depends upon two things: first, political ignorance of upper peninsula geography, and second, lack of acquaintance with Mr. Osborn and his record. Both these occasions for opposition to Osborn will have disappeared before this campaign is over.

Chippewa county, Chase Osborn's home, is an agricultural county. It has a larger acreage of stable agriculture, only in the state save one. It is removed from the nearest mills by over two hundred miles. It is as reasonable to say that the people of Berrien county or southwestern Michigan would be governed by influences which directly affected the city of Detroit as to say that a resident of Chippewa county was governed by what affected conditions on the iron or copper ranges. Chippewa county is not only wholly an agricultural county, but its population is largely rural. There are two men engaged in agricultural pursuits to one engaged in any other line of business. There are more grangers in Chippewa county than in many counties below the straits. So much for argument that mining influence controls in Chase Osborn's home.

As to Mr. Osborn personally, he owns not a dollar's interest in a mine in the state of Michigan and while if elected governor, he will treat all upper square treatment for mining interests, he will insist upon this and upon square vigor than he will upon square treatment for the farmer in Clinton county, or the manufacturer in Detroit or Grand Rapids.

Now as to Mr. Osborn's record. The greatest and most significant fight ever made in Michigan for equal taxation was that led by the late Governor Hazen S. Pingree. It was because of Pingree's efforts that the system of specific taxation, so prolific of abuse, was given its quietus in Michigan and the ad valorem system put into general use. Where was Chase Osborn in that fight?

At that time Chase Osborn owned and published a newspaper, the Soo News. The News was the first paper in the state to come out for Hazen S. Pingree for governor. It announced his candidacy. Chase Osborn led the fight for Pingree in the upper peninsula. Chippewa county sent a representative to the legislature pledged to the Pingree taxation ideas. It was the bill introduced by Chippewa county's representative, William Chandler, that finally became a law, putting the fight for Pingree in the upper peninsula. Chippewa county sent a representative to the legislature pledged to the Pingree taxation ideas. It was the bill introduced by Chippewa county's representative, William Chandler, that finally became a law, putting the ad valorem system in that fight, the mining corporations of upper Michigan were uniformly to the Pingree proposals and opposed the Pingree candidacy.

After Pingree became governor he called Chase Osborn to Lansing as his railroad commissioner, thus giving him the best and most powerful place in his official family. As railroad commissioner, Chase Osborn served the state and his chief with courage and vigor. His administration of the office was such as to commend Governor Pingree's warm and often expressed approval.

Intimately as Chase Osborn will in coming years counts in the state before this campaign is done and inasmuch as his record is daily becoming more widely known, this campaign against him will fail of its purpose completely. For the people when they see and hear Osborn will instinctively recognize him for what he is, a man without sectional prejudice, a man who loves and practices square dealing and in whose hands the interests of the whole state and all the people will be safe and secure.

Sincerity Impresses.

One of the first stops made by Mr. Osborn on his campaign tour through the lower peninsula was at Pinnigle. H. H. Whitney, editor of the News makes the following comment on Mr. Osborn's visit:

Hon. Chase S. Osborn, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, stepped unostentatiously from the train last Friday afternoon and in his short stay of two hours had won the united friendship and support of our community.

While his coming had been known only a day ahead and suitable arrangements for his reception were impossible on such short notice, nevertheless a considerable number gretted him and listened to a fine address on good citizenship. Mr. Osborn has that magnetic personality which enables him to win the favor of his audience and carry them with him to the end.

He impresses everyone with his sincere good sincerity. He does not allure matters. He defines his position every question in such a way as leaves no doubt as to just where he stands. He does not endeavor to give an answer that will please both sides.

His brilliant intellectual talents and his steady and oratorical ability mark him at once as a gentleman who would give to the governor's chair an atmosphere of culture which would be most fitting. The office would be an honor to the man and the man would be an honor to the office.

Sensible View.

THE REAL RACE.

This Picture Shows Who Is Who Of Strong Contrest.

The Ludington Chronicle, one of the ably edited papers of northern Michigan, comes in a late issue the gubernatorial situation in the following language:

"The merry three-cornered race for the Republican nomination for governor of Michigan is now on in earnest, and all over the state the people are beginning to take a lively interest in the contest. Candidate Musselman, of Grand Rapids is putting up a clean and energetic campaign, but everywhere the closest political observers agree that the fight is between Lieut-Governor Patrick H. Kelley and Chase S. Osborn, of the Soo.

"A few months ago Mr. Kelley, who represents Gov. Warner and the state machine was conceded to hold the position in the race, and everything was running his way. Of late Osborn's friends have changed and the trend of popular opinion seems to be great Osborn's way in such a manner as to thoroughly alarm the Warner faction. Mr. Osborn's style of campaign has been something of a revelation to the old wheel horses who have dependedlargely on stand, rebat and carry Kelley through. Somehow or other the people have got the notion into their heads that the old state has had about enough of Warner for one time, extravagant regime, and accordingly the Warner G. R. ring which is responsible for such sentiment has proved a political nuisance, which returns to plague the inventor.

"Besides this the people don't exactly like the monstrous idea of handing the governorship job down from one generation to another as if it were the family heirloom of a royal house. Indeed, if this is to be done they may, why hold an election for governor anyway. In this way the affable but ambitious Pat Kelley has fallen foul of a wide discrepute and the tide of popular sentiment has turned toward Osborn with unmistakable force.

"Meanwhile the versatile gentleman from the north has gone on campaigning with an energy quite astonishing. Everybody he sees and he goes everywhere, the people like him. They like his speeches, they like his style, they like his candor. He makes more speeches, shakes more hands, imparts more information, hands out more ideas than any man who has stumped Michigan since the days of the immortal Pingree. With a voice that seems as tireless as a grasshopper and with all the force and power of a Zach Chandler he goes rumbling over the state telling folks what he thinks and what he thinks is. He meets Kelley wherever at a face to face at the banquets and calls the turn on them, whether he can be sure, but never, they say, he means to and they all know it.

"Osborn hasn't struck Mason county yet in his wanderings, but he's due here before the campaign is over and it's a good guess that he'll get a great hand. Kelley and Musselman have both been here but their smoke faded away after than much as one wave swallows another. When Osborn comes there may not be such loud noise, but it's a safe hazard that the gentleman will at least be conscious that someone is looking at him."—June 22.

NO TRUCKLING.

Mr. Osborn's Sound Views Are Plainly Expressed.

Perry P. Powers, of Cadillac, is one of the most ardent and prominent Osborn men in Michigan. Powers is widely known all over Michigan, and the Pioneer made an intelligent study of state affairs. He believes Mr. Osborn will be the next governor of Michigan, and will give the state an administration of which every citizen will be proud.

Commenting upon Mr. Osborn's fearless, independent and clearly expressed views upon the subject of taxation, recently, Mr. Powers says:

There may be difference of opinion touching questions of state taxation and as to just what procedure in that direction will produce fairest and most satisfactory results. But there is not a voter in the state who does not admire frankness and sincerity on the part of men who are seeking positions of responsibility and power. In his reply to the questions suggested to him by the Michigan State Grange, Chase Osborn said: "I am in favor of ten mill county, million pay ing their just share of taxation, and I agree with you in the most blatant on that subject that it is absolutely important and desirable that they should do so." In a further reference to the Grange questions Mr. Osborn said he did not believe it would be wise or best to abandon the advalorem tax system at this time. This evening had been stopped in Michigan after several years of legislative condition and statewide effort and its results were quite satisfactory. Whatever was necessary to be done in order to resolve the iron and copper mines to pay their just share of taxation could be accomplished. Mr. Osborn believes and says without departing from Michigan's present policy of state taxation. There was not a word or a line in Mr. Osborn's reply which sought to evade or cover up or to dodge. He frankly tells the voters of the state through his letter to the Grange just what he will desire to do. In view of looking upon equal taxation, and the people of Michigan know that he will fulfill every promise he makes. There is more value in such a course of procedure than in any combination of ability produced by whole hours of pleasing oratory and many other and suitable and repolished statements intended to meet all sorts of conditions requirements and to convert all things to all men no matter how far apart their sympathies and desires may be.

Easy Victory.

"Life," suggests Blunkit, "should be a generous rivalry in kindness and self-sacrifice." "Yes," replied Mr. Blunkit; "but is that kind of a contest there are too many people willing to let you win hands down."

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

A Pleasant Run Is Not a Branch of the Poultry Business.

"A Plain Assertion in England," by Charles T. Wilbrecht, is a highly amusing thrusting on the gentle art of British entertainment. It appears in the American Magazine, and in the course of some descriptions of English customs the author relates the following incident, which happened at a pleasant run:

"A friend for whom I have a great admiration took me to see a pleasant run. The place looked just like a big chicken yard such as we have at home. There were hundreds of the birds feeding on scraps and grain thrown to them by the keeper. I had seen strings of these birds hanging up in the omelettes for sale at low prices, but bought their eggs in the swell restaurants at high prices, and I naturally supposed that this game was conducted like any other branch of the poultry business. When you have been in England a short time you realize that you must suppress the subject of trade or business with some delicacy, but I longed to know the modus operandi of poultry packing among the swells. I wondered if they could reach our Chicago stockyards anything. So I asked the keeper in my broadest English:

"How do you collect and ship these birds?

"Collect 'em, sir?

"Yes, I said, how do you kill them and get them to market?

"We don't kill 'em. We send in bearers and, and 'ounds, 'ere, 'ere, sir."

"This seemed to me a disgusting proposition—to feed a flock of tame, harmless pets to hounds and shoot them bodies—and I remarked:

"Why don't you simply wring their necks with a twist of the wrist, insuring a rapid and painless death, and then—

"My friend grabbed me violently by the arm and drew men abruptly away. I felt badly about it, because this good and valuable host said it would be at least many years before he could look that gamekeeper in the face with tranquility."

Sermons at All Prices.

"Brethren," said the shifting preacher, "I'm got a right dollar sermon, an' I'm got a four bit sermon, an' I'm got a five dollar one an' a three dollar one, an' den I's got one I kin let you have for jus' one dollar. Now, I want you for to take up the proposition right now, an' we'll see which one we does sermons you want."—Exchange.

Not in the Agreement.

"My main objection," he said as he thoughtfully traced with his cane, "is that I get no moving picture royalties."—Puck.

Easily Said.

"Some of these tonsorial twisters are pretty cool in their methods. I assure ye, ah—saw cowards and it air fleech ye."

"Dat! Ah cotchy dem!" thoughtfully chuckled Mitch Ellinbeech. "Yon thinkyo' dat I'm—The—The—Dat! Ah sud it thumbfinch mb."—Life.

Drink That Goes to the Spirit.

On the subject of life-giving drinks, his experiences of thirst on the road to Khartoum and the ways of quenching it, left the late George Steevens in no doubt. He pronounced unhesitatingly for the "Abu Hamed"—gin, vermouth, angostura, lime juice, and soda—especially soda. Steevens' description of the effects reaches the climax of lyrical enthusiasm. "This is to drink, indeed. * * * It ascends blessedly through body and spirit—not writing through, like the Athens, but irrigating, like the Nile. It is soil in the sand, entrance in the wind, life in death. Your sap runs again, your withered muscles take an elasticity, your mummy bones toughen. Your self has sprung up alive, and you almost think you know how it feels to rise from the dead."

Education.

Education is the training of a human being with a view to make him all he may become. The proper meaning of the word education is not drawing out, but a training up, as vines are trained to lay hold of and rise by means of what is stronger than themselves.—Spalding.

IN VALAIS

BY LOUISE MURRAY

PEOPOS of all the present talk about woman suffrage, let us take a glance at the inhabitants of a small village in Switzerland, or more accurately, the dwellers on the mountain slopes about Champery, in the canton of Valais, that sequestered and charming bailiwick which lies constantly at the foot of its famous neighbor, the Dent du Midi.

There the sturdy peasant women have solved the "woman rights" matter to their own satisfaction. Votes were never a factor in the question, but consorts were, and have generally appreciated for their own sex, so it is, that in freedom of movement and action, I hear, that the feminine half of the community includes, not boy on the street perpendicular ladders, and clambers up and down the stony and tissue paths leading to their mountain homes.

If A—and there are as yet in remote nooks and crannies of this little spot, successfully hidden for years to the extreme end of the lovely Val d'Illiez, it is to be means unknowed, and, owing to the recent landslide, rendered more difficult than the occasional other have because as why are the proverbial chamois, and one must seek them upon their own heights during the summer season, when the new electric tramway which has completed the additional stimulus to the village almost too accessible to the ever-growing tourists area?

En route from Italy, one leaves the Simplon line at Saint Maurice, rides for a few minutes in a shabby train of doubtful comfort, and, arriving at Monthey, takes the tram, which immediately commences an ascent of the fertile valley. Through vineyard and chestnut grove, over roaring mountain streams and past various hamlets, the little train wends its way, ever upward.

Leaving the heat of the plain below, one gradually emerges into an atmosphere of crystalline coolness. Champery, the end of the railway and the last village in the valley, then 3,200 feet above the sea. Except its bracing air, one is unconscious of the altitude, as all about lower the infinitely greater heights of the Dents du Midi and the Dents Blanches, their white "teeth" so dazzling in the sunlight that one welcomes the almost ever-present curtain of cloud which veils their fairness. Below, far down below the village the rapid and noisy Viese, home of that delectable fish, the "salmon trout," flows down the bed of the valley from its source in the Val de Cons, another mountain, at whose summit lies the frontier of Switzerland, France, and from whence one may continue one's walk in France to Chamonix.

The country abounds in walks and drives to suit the most correct or inexperienced mountaineer. First and foremost of these is the ascent of the Dent du Midi, more than 10,000 feet in height. Of its seven peaks, the Dame Blanche is the most popular and less dangerous. Parties usually leave Champery in the afternoon, sup at Barmaz, march a few hours of sleep, and are off before dawn in order to reach the summit for a fascinating panorama of the sun-kissed Alps peeking from their sleep.

It was at this little chalet of Barmaz that one party, finding their hopes of an early start thwarted by torrential rain, resolved to play bridge and amuse themselves as best they could until the wee sma' hours; but "English as she is spoke" and accompanying bridge are totally barred upon the impatient heaven, for in the morning their modest bill was exploded with the strange item, "Extra four tout fait pendant la nuit (for whole night) 4 francs."

To return to the village, its one street lined by chalets with gayly flowering window boxes and neat gardens, hotels, pensions, and little shops, let us accompany ourselves with the cosmopolitan throng that wanders back and forth on any August day.

The Hotel Dent du Midi, Champery's largest and most modern hostelry, is the best point of vantage for such a survey. Choosing a comfortable chair from beneath its striped awnings, we quit a scene warring one of the typical scenes of Switzerland, the "Kurhaus" in miniature. Seated in her hood in brings us tea. While waiting we may listen to the orchestra and marvel at the many varieties of tree the world represented in this small corner of it. The English and French element predominate, and as yet the Teutonic is in the minority, but electricity, steam boat and all the commodities of modern life that especially recommend a place to his lazy-loving heart are fast doing away with its former simplicity. When the time which to study human nature, national characteristics, and that intangible something which stands behind the types of each country for its own.

There goes a former prime minister of Austria off for a walk with his beautiful wife, his fox terriers bounding in ecstasy at his heels. A distinguished Roman and his two sons are returning from an all-day climb, their arms filled with alpine roses. Here comes an English army officer, pack on back and slippered feet, a pipe with his guide for "the first." A little Italian princess tosses a tit of cake to her acquaintance and satisfactory shekelhood. Out in the garden four hilarious Parisiennes are settling their accounts at tables. A Greek counters flicks the ashes from her cigarette, as she eyes her tea in amazement at the Swiss waitress, who, she thinks, he intends to go there some day. BRITAIN'S FIRST BOY

Eldest Son of King George, Aged Sixteen Years, Is Highly Popular—Much Like Other Eng-lish Lads.

London.—Prince Edward of Wales, who has been "the first boy of England" for 16 years, is now to join his ship at Dartmouth, and take his place as Cadet Edward of Wales. During the funeral ceremonies of his grandfather, King Edward, he was a prominent figure not only because he is heir to the throne but because he is highly popular.

A typical Anglo-Saxon lad is Prince Edward, now called the duke of Cornwall, and soon to be formally named the prince of Wales. He is fair haired, blue eyed and sturdy of limb; the picture of health, strength and good temper.

From babyhood he has been popular. His dress and manners have been chronicled, and half the mothers of England put their sons into white collar suits the moment they chosen by the princess of Wales for her son. Yet attention does not seem to have spoiled him at all. He is still a frank, simple English boy with a bright smile, a pleasant manner and an infectious laugh.

Not only is Prince Edde a public favorite but he is a hero in his own family. His three small brothers are now sister look forward to his holidays as a festive occasion. His father and mother, king George and Queen Mary, although they are rather strict with their children as a rule, often relax discipline for their oldest son and are as proud of him as any other fond parents of their first born.

Even at school Prince Edward is popular, and one has to be more than a prince to be a favorite at an English school. One has to be an all-round expert at games and sports, a generous, manly, good fellow with plenty of courage and a love of fair play.

Prince Edward has always been a sportsman. He had a pony ride his pony when he was five and on his seventh birthday King Edward gave him a bicycle. Swimming lessons at the school quickly made him a good cricket, football and boxing, and winner in one of the games concerning runners of England.

Before he was ten he had handed over his entire savery toys to his younger brothers and was giving all the time he could spare from lessons and exercises to a fleet of model ships, which he had built for him by his father. It was the time of the Dreadnought and other great fighting primes with model masts, forts and mass of the scene of the campaign was followed by model men and fighting navies battles with his fleet. Later his young ambition to command his navy's love of the sea, gave him a large model ship. This he kept at Windsor in a water in charge of an old sailor.

A story is told of his early days at Osborne which seems to prove that the prince is not without commercial instincts. He had sent home to his mother for extra pocket money, which she refused to send, and so he wrote a long letter to his grandmother begging her to help him out. Queen Alexandra wrote a long letter reproving him for extravagance.

To her surprise Prince Edward, who hates letter writing like a normal boy, immediately answered her letter and asked many questions. She answered them, only to receive another letter from her grandson. At last the truth came out. Had the bridge was selling the sports and autographs letters to his acquaintances for money to spend in the school.

In his lessons Prince Edward does not shine. He is not a "swot" and he would be called backward, except in the few branches of study which he likes.

Love of animals is a trait of all the Wales children, as they were born till very recently.

A Prophet.

Joe—Congratulate me, old man. I'm engaged to Miss Jane Kelly.

Fred—Things are coming out just as I predicted.

Joe—What do you mean?

Fred—I told her when she refused me that she would live to regret it.

A Gentle time.

Mother—Oh, I don't know. A young man with half a million, like yours, ought to make good as a separator.

A BAD THING TO NEGLECT.

Don't neglect the kidneys when you notice loss of control over the secretions. Diabetes becomes too frequent or scanty; urine is discolored and sediment appears. No medicine for such troubles like Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly remove kidney disorders.

Mrs. A. E. Fulton, 311 Skidmore St., Portland, Ore., says: "My limbs swelled terribly and I was bloated over the stomach and had puffy spots beneath my eyes. My kidneys were very unhealthy and the secretions were disordered. The dropsical swellings began to abate after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and soon I was cured."

It Is a Mistake

Many have laid to that anything will sell if advertised strong enough. This is a great mistake. The man who has an article that is deserving an absolutely worthless article but if he can get the article that is bought again and again that pays. An example of the big success of a worthy article is the enormous sale that has grown up for Cascarets Candy Cathartic. This wonderful record is the result of great merit successfully made known through persistent advertising and the unsolicited testimonials of users. Cascarets by five cents and cents.

Like all great successes, trade pirates prey on the unsuspecting public by marketing fake tablets similar in appearance to Cascarets. Care should always be exercised in purchasing well advertised goods, especially an article that has a national sale like Cascarets. Do not allow a substitute to be palmed off on you.

The Lost Chords.

"The village council was to be a great affair. They had the singers, they had the program sellers, they had the doorkeepers and they would doubtless have had the audience. All they needed was the piano, but that they lacked. Nor could they procure one anywhere.

At last the village organist learned that one was possessed by Parmer Hayseed, who lived "at the top o' the hill." Forthwith he set out with two men and a van.

"Take it, an' welcome," said Hayseed cordially. "I'm no objection long as you put Freyseer by Hayseed' on the program.

"They never heard it away.

"Ay! I wish 'em joy of it," murmured Mrs. Hayseed, as the van disappeared from sight.

"Wish 'em joy of it," repeated Hayseed.

"Well, I mean I only one thy'll all get out of it more than I do, poor old good woman. Cos, yo see, when I heard a piano I'd wire I allus went to the old pitmaer for it."

Cocaine Disturbing Europe.

The future of Monaco, the question of the succession, and the future of the little principality, is a matter in which other heads than subjects of the present prince are interested.

Prince Albert, who will be crowned in November, has decided that his only son, Prince Louis, shall not succeed him, but it is a secret Italian prince belonging to the French-Wurtemberg family. A German politic, reigning in Monaco would in the opinion of Prince Albert's subjects mean a German port on the Mediterranean. Such a possibility is of course distinctly displeasing to France, which is actively taking steps to keep the German prince out.

The matter resolves itself into coming to terms with Prince Albert, who is M. Blanc, the lessee of the Casino has learned, is a man with whom terms may be made—at a price.

HAY CROP GOOD, FRUIT IS SCANT

Wheat Above the Average According to Reports.

RYE ALSO SHOWING WELL

Buckwheat Was Sown Plentifully, and the Crop Is About an Average as Compared With the Past Five Years.

Lansing.—The wheat bins of the farmers of Michigan should be full this fall, from the reports filed with the secretary of state for June. Not only is the yield outlook excellent, but the quality this season bids fair to be above the average.

The average yield per acre for the northern counties of the state is estimated at 17 bushels, southern counties 16, central counties 15 and in the upper peninsula 18 bushels.

Rye is also showing up well according to the estimates, which give an estimated yield per acre in the state at from 15 to 22 bushels. Corn is reported as being fair. Buckwheat was sown plentifully, and the condition is about an average as compared with the past five years. The acreage of beans is also well up with other years and the condition of the crop is excellent. The average condition of potatoes is 85 per cent. Sugar beets are reported fine, and with rain the yield will be up to the general average.

Hay, which has been worrying many farmers, is shown to be in excellent condition.

The prospects for fruit is not encouraging, owing to severe frosts early in the season. The prospect for a crop of apples is reported as included in the Michigan fruit belt, as gathered from reports received, as follows:

Alleghan, 50 per cent, of a crop; Berrien, 65; Ionia, 55; Kent, 45; Ottawa, 55; Van Buren, 25; Muskegon, 28; Newaygo, 40; Oceana, 50; Mason, 55; Leelanau, 50; Manistee, 56; Missaukee, 55; average for Michigan fruit belt 49 per cent; average for Michigan fruit belt for 1909 was 77 per cent, of a crop.

Apples are estimated as being about 42 per cent. of a crop in the state.

Resignation of Beth Are Accepted.

Acting Warden Jean C. Wenger of Jackson prison tendered his resignation to the board of control and asking to be relieved promptly. It was accepted to take effect upon the appointment of his successor.

Mrs. Wenger, who occupies the official position of matron, and who is charged with bringing order into the prison for control Frank Salt-gen, also tendered her resignation to take immediate effect, and it was accepted. The probability is that Mrs. Wenger will be promoted.

For three hours the members of the board were busy with the question of selecting a new warden, but could not break the deadlock which existed, and finally adjourned until next Saturday afternoon.

Night before last Adam, Gov. Warner, T. J. Navin of Detroit, voted for W. T. McGrath of Grand Rapids, who is now adjutant general of the National Guard; George Morrison voted every time for Wesley J. Thomas of Paw Paw, while Judge Adams of Kalamazoo voted six times for Joseph Weber of Saginaw, and twice for E. W. Vosburg of the same city.

The exposé of Mrs. Wenger's relations with Charles Sullivan is the biggest sensation Jackson has had since the Armstrong grafting scandal.

The statement that Mrs. Wenger confessed that she was addicted to the use of opium for the last two years cannot be substantiated.

Complaints Warranted.

Lansing.—Governor Warner has called a meeting of the board of control of Jackson prison, and a vigorous investigation will be conducted into the alleged action of Mrs. Wenger, wife of Warden John C. Wenger, in which it is said that for some time she has been furnishing opium to inmates of the prison through the medium of Frank Saltgen, a reputed parole violator.

It is declared that Saltgen directed an investigator to a downtown store, where it was learned that opium in small lots had been sold to the wife of the warden.

Saltgen was taken to the prison from Clinton county in 1903 to serve from three to fifteen years for burglary. He was paroled June 15, 1907, and recaptured January 14, 1908. He was returned from Benton Harbor by Warden Wenger, who was acting on orders of Warden Allan Armstrong. Saltgen told Warden Wenger at that time that he would get even with him for bringing him back.

Michigan Pensions.

The following Michigan pensions were granted: Eliza E. Balue, $12; Joseph Barnhouse, $15; Merry E. Orbin, $12; Dennis Cole, $12; Jacob Dunham, $20; Louisa Dowdle, $12; Joseph Grant, $100; William Hoover, $15; Samuel Puller, $17; Henry D. Irving, $15; Ellen Kuhn, $12; James Kettleton, $12; Bristine Lewis, $12; John McCaslin, $20; Alexander McMillan, $15; Mary Ann Mills, $12; Ira Magoonough, $15; William A. Miller, $8; Hiram Barber, $12; Joseph Reynolds, $15; George A. Steele, $12.

Fight Passage of Tonnage Tax Bill.

Practically the entire northern Michigan delegation in the state legislature will be returned this fall. Senator Charles Shalli of Hubbell, representing the Thirty-second senatorial district, rolling into his home and announcing he would be a candidate. Moriarity of Crystal Falls, Mayor of L'Anse and Duke of Lakeland will again be candidates, although some time ago they announced they would not look for offices this year. All are assured of nomination and reelection.

Ne Michigan Law Against Pictures.

Lansing.—Although a telegram was received at the executive office from William Shaw of Boston, Mass. general secretary of the United Christian Endeavor society, asking Governor Warner to prevent the exhibition of the moving pictures of the Johnson-Jeffries fight, it is highly probable that the matter will be left to the local authorities, as there is no statute making it unlawful to show such films in theaters.

When the pictures of the Ketchel-Johnson battle were exhibited in Michigan last winter, numerous complaints were received to stop the exhibition of the films. The matter was referred to the attorney general, who held that it was a matter which rested solely with local authorities. If there is a city ordinance preventing the exhibition of prize fight films, it comes within the authority of the sheriff.

At that time Attorney General Bird held that in many aided theaters pictures are often presented which are very demoralizing than films showing little encounters.

Mayor Bennett has not announced his stand on the question of barring the fight pictures from Lansing. However, he stated to a reporter that he did not believe the pictures to be conducive to high morals and their display in this city might be an occasion for an outbreak similar to those feared in other cities.

"I am considering the advisability of stopping the exhibition of the pictures should an attempt to made to display them in Lansing," said the mayor. "The matter was first brought to my attention and I have not had time to look up the law governing in such cases. I will consult at once with the city attorney that I may be prepared to publicly declare my position."

Tax Valuations Will Increase.

Lansing.—As a result of the work already done and what we have on hand to do, the assessed valuation of general property of the state of Michigan will be increased from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 over what it was last year," stated Secretary George Lord, of the state tax commission.

The state tax commissioners held a meeting here, at which time complaints which had been received up to the last meeting a few weeks ago were passed over, and the decisions were selected to act upon at once.

As a result of the meeting, the board ordered a general review of the assessments in the township of Ludington, Mason county. This decision came as a result of an investigation made after the board had received a letter from one member of the board of review of that township, in which he stated that the entire township was not assessed at over 20 to 30 per cent. of its true valuation, and in his opinion the entire county should be reassessed. He stated further, that he was powerless himself, as the other members of the board refused to take action.

The commission will send a force of men into the township at once to make an entire reappraisal.

In order to determine whether a general review is warranted the commission decided at the meeting to make investigations into tax affairs at the following places: South Haven, Crawford county; Sullivan township, Muskegon county; Port Huron township, St. Clair county; Alpena; Hatton township, Clare county; Clayton township, Arenac county; Union township, Isabella county; Detour township, Chippewa county.

A peculiar situation developes in the Sullivan township, Muskegon County. Assessors of that township have reported that a small island, in fact, forms a great part of the township. The complaint was received from a resident there who claimed that a ball used for dancing purposes and other entertainments was placed on the island as a church, and thus no taxes were levied against it. Another complaint was that the island is not included now most this spring and no chance was given the taxpayers to review their assessments.

Secretary Lord of the state commission wrote the supervisor of the township, and has received a letter stating that he would not do so, for the reason that one member was ill and the other was going sailing. All the complaints received the commission state that nowhere in the broad state of Michigan has a like occurrence been reported to them, that of a board of review not meeting for the purpose of reviewing assessments.

Canvass Primary Vote on Sept. 28.

The state board of canvassers announced that it will meet September 26 to canvass the primary election vote. This early announcement is made to advise the state central committee of the several political parties what dates they may select for their state conventions. The primary law requires the conventions to be held within ten days after the board meets.

Agrees to Discuss Rates.

As a result of the appeal of the railway commissions of Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, the railroads have agreed to postpone the taking effect of the proposed new freight rates. The commissions of Michigan railroads asked the state attorney general to intervene in the matter. The commission has granted the request and will confer with the railway officials. Many Michigan shippers have filed protests against the proposed new rates, claiming they are exorbitant.

Reduced the Valuation.

The state tax commission has called upon the board of review of Excelsior township, Kalamazoo county, to explain why the valuation of property in that township was reduced this year by the board to $186,000, when the commission last year placed the valuation at $274,165. Attention is called to the law making it a misdemeanor for assessing officers to willfully assess property above or below its cash value. It is intimated that the prosecutor may be asked to remove the supervisor.

SEEN AND HEARD IN MICHIGAN

Flint.—Howard Wilbur was drowned while trying to swim across the Flint river. He and a companion, Will J. Hesson of Alpena, both of whom are employed at the Buick plant, were in bathing, and before Hesson could get to Wilbur's assistance when he became exhausted in mildness. With her sank. Wilbur was nineteen years old and a graduate of the Fortis institute in Big Rapids last month. His home is in Athens, Mich.

Sault Ste. Marie.—The steamer Pere Marquette No. 5, downbound Chicago & Duluth Transportation company, grounded at Six-Mile point in a dense fog. The boat had 200 passengers aboard. The tug Boynton released her without injury, and is expected to tug grounded and last to call for help from the Soo before she could be released.

Owosso.—Alleging fraud, James Taylor, aged eighty-one years, of Owosso, has applied to the circuit court to have his marriage of a month ago annulled. He says he was summoned hastily to an attorney's office where, under false representations and threats, he was induced to wed.

Chelsea.—Crossing down hill on his bicycle, Milton, the twelve-year-old son of W. J. Van Riper, ran into a buggy and received internal injuries that caused his death an hour later. Spectators say the accident was unavoidable. He was the only child of the Van Ripers and they are inconsolable.

Jackson.—William Cook narrowly escaped death at Michigan Center while he was at work in a field. He was standing near a telephone pole when lightning struck a pole, threw him to the ground. His right side is paralyzed.

Hancock.—The Chapman flouring mill, erected in the early fortties, was bought by a stock company formed of local business men this week. The mill property comprises the water rights and dam.

Owosso.—Jonh Desko, a middle aged farm farmer, dropped dead at heart failure while watching a neighbor excavate in a field. He leaves a family.

Ypsilanti.—While driving home the Wednesday night Herbert Hibbell, a farmer near town, dropped dead, presumably from the heat.

Sault Ste. Marie.—After refloating lightered ore in the steamer La Salle Owens, the steamer Black Rock and the steamer Black Rock. While coming up Little Rapids below the Soo, the steamer John A. Donaldson's stern chains parted. The tow cable then was driven hard on a pile of rocks in the side of the channel. She is set about five feet and her entire bottom forward is badly torn. She is full of water forward. The foundation is loaded with coal. It may be three or four days before wrecking operations can be started on account of the only lighter in the section being in use on the Black Rock.

Saginaw.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Lake Erie coal, held here, the following officers were reelected: President, W. Berger, Saginaw; first vice-president, W. M. Fromm, Cleveland; secretary, Emil Lohse, Erie, Pa.; treasurer, J. W. Koek, Detroit; district delegate to international sacagoutter, Ernest Hinber Waterloo, Ont.

South Haven.—Fire, originating in the drying room of the Silver Lake Fruit company, caused a loss of $6,000. The loss is covered by insurance. The owner, owner of building, $3,000, with $1,000 insurance; Max Shlowitz, stock, $2,000, with $1,000 insurance; Jacob Greenman, barber, $300; Combs' restaurant, $100.

Shepherd.—Creech's drug store was entirely destroyed by fire, consuming loss of $5,000, with insurance of $2,500. Origin of the fire is unknown.

South Haven.—Fire of unknown origin caused a loss of $10,000 to the hardware store of W. A. Newcomb, J. H. Johnson, J. A. Combs and Max Shlowitz.

Flint.—Assistant Fire Chief George B. Taylor has been dismissed from duty by the fire commissioner. The dismissal is the result of a fight which recently occurred between two members of the department.

Jackson.—A check for $200, with the name of J. W. Lane, secretary of the Jackson Cold Storage company, forged, was received by the Peoples' National bank here from a Detroit bank, which got it from a Lansing bank. The forgery is thought to be the work of a gang that has been operating in Michigan recently.

AFIRE IN MID-OCEAN

CREW OF BRITISH STEAMER WAGES FIERCE BATTLE AGAINST FLAMES.

THREE OFFICERS ARE HEROES

San Francisco—Blackened and charred, with decks warped by a six days' fire in the hold, the British steamer St. Michaels arrived Monday from Antwerp, from which point the vessel sailed May 5 with a general cargo.

When 1,250 miles off the South American coast in latitude 14.51 south longitude 86.59 west, Capt. George Allkin at daybreak, June 22, discovered smoke pouring from the ventilators.

When hatch No. 3 was opened smoke and flames shot up and it was discovered that the cargo in the shifter deck was a seething mass of fire which it seemed impossible to combat.

Chief Officer J. W. Dickson, Second Officer Arthur Marriot and Third Officer Walter Chevner volunteered to go below with the hose passed along by the crew.

With mouths and nostrils covered by cloth, the volunteers were alternately lowered. Owing to the intense heat and the suffocating smoke, each man could remain below only a few moments.

All that day and the following night the fight to save the ship continued. In despair the capitals ordered the lifeboats provisioned and ruffled astern.

Early on the morning of June 24 the fire in the shifter deck was completely stamped out and the crew again ordered to the decks for a brief rest. Almost at once fire broke out in lower hold No. 2. Two hundred tons of merchandise were thrown overboard before the blaze could be reached. The cargo stowed above the hole and after first aid of fight fighting the flames were finally subdued.

The total loss to the vessel is at $250,000, mostly covered by insurance.

TRAINMEN SLAIN IN WRECK

New York.—Three men were killed and a train load of passengers badly shaken up when north-bound train 59 on the New York Central, known as the Northern and Western Express, was wrecked Monday near Newton Hook, nine miles north of Hudson.

Brakes and wagons on passed the track and toppled over. The six other cars of the train stuck to the rails, but remained upright and no injuries were serious but. The railroad officials report that all the passengers were able to continue their journey.

Engineer Tyndall was caught under his engine and was fatally crushed, dying shortly afterward. The other trainmen were instantly killed.

A report received by the public service commission at Albany said the wreck was caused by the engine striking a door of a freight car that had fallen on the track.

RIVER STEAMER GOES DOWN

Cape Girardeau Strikes Snag in Mississippi and Sinks—All Passengers Safely Landed.

St. Louis.—The river steamer Cape Girardeau struck a snag and sank to the bottom of the Mississippi river at Tarky Island, 50 miles south of here Monday. Ninety passengers were aboard, and all were taken ashore safely.

The boat was returning from Cairo, Ill., to Memphis, Tenn. Many of the passengers were women and children. They were taken to the boat lift at construction. The passengers crowded on the deck and members of the crew quieted them. They walked ashore in the gangplank. Later they were brought to St. Louis by train.

URGES LOEB FOR GOVERNOR

Taft Favors Collector New York Port for Gubernatorial Candidate in Empire State.

Beverly, Mass.—President Taft Monday urged William Loeb, Jr., to accept the Republican gubernatorial nomination in New York this fall. Mr. Loeb is averse to taking up the task and would prefer to complete the work that he has undertaken as collector of the port, but before he left Burgess Point he assured the president that if the demand was made he would accept the duty.

Finds Riches in Attic.

Crooksville, O.—In the attic of the house on his farm known as the Lewis homestead, west of this city, Noah Brown Monday found an old jug that contained $1,500 in gold and old coins. The Lewis heirs will attempt to wrest it from him.

Preaches in Dark Church.

New Castle, Pa.—Rev. R. N. Merrill of the Methodist church at Mahoning advertised that Sunday he would preach in the dark because of the heat. The church was crowded. More than 2,500 members of the congregation were worshiping.

Myron C. Wick is dead.

Youngstown, O.—Myron C. Wick, one of the most prominent iron and steel manufacturers in the Mahoning valley, died Monday. Death was due to anemia. He was 67 years old.

Controlled Newspapers.

The Atchison Globe says that no advertiser has ever tried to control its editorial policy, the remark being occasioned by the charge often made nowadays, that the big advertisers direct the editorial policy of newspapers.

The experience of the Globe is the experience of most newspapers. The merchant who does a great deal of advertising is more interested in the circulation department of a newspaper than in the editorial department. If a daily paper goes to the house of the people, and is read by them, he is satisfied, and it may chance after any theory or fad, for all he cares. He has troubles of his own, and he isn't trying to shoulder those of the editorial brethren.

There are newspapers controlled by people outside of the editorial rooms, and a good many of them, more's the pity, but the people exercising that control are not the business men who pay their money for advertising space. The newspapers which are established for political purposes are often controlled by chronic officeseekers, whose first concern is their own interests. There are newspapers controlled by great corporations, and the voice of such newspapers is always raised in protest against any genuine reform.

The average western newspaper usually is controlled by its owner, and he is supposed to be in duty bound to make all sorts of sacrifices at all sorts of times; there are people who consider it his duty to insult his advertisers, just to show that he is free and independent. If he shows a decent respect for his patrons, who pay him their money, and make it possible for him to carry on the business, he is "subsidized" or "controlled." The newspaper owner is a business man, like the dry goods man or the grocer. The merchants are expected to have considerations for their customers, and they are not supposed to be subsidized by the man who spends five dollars with them, but the publisher is expected to demonstrate his courage by showing that he is ungraded for the sake of his friends. It is a funny combination when you think it over.—Emporia Gazette.

What's the Answer?

We're ready to quit! After sending two perfectly rhymed, carefully scanned, pleasantly meditative, Parnassian poems to seventeen magazines and having them returned seventeen times, we turn to the current issue of a new monthly and find a "poem" modeled after Kipling's "Vampire," and in which bone is supposed to rhyme with alone, run on page eleven and the end sentence collapsed in surrounding a piece of real art. If poetizing is a gift we are convinced it is, this poet's must have been. As far as, we are on our way to the woodsied to study the psychology of the ax or any other old thing that longs to do with selling poetry to magazines.

Osborn a Big Man

Ludington Chronicle: Chase S. Osborn, the republican candidate for governor who visited Mason county today, is one of the big men of Michigan. He is a man of superb training, phenomenal poise and splendid equipment. He possesses the courage and energy of a Pingree and has all the fire and patriotism of a Zach Chandler. Aside from these conspicuous traits of character he possesses a personality that inspires confidence and begets friends. He is truth a big man.

Mr. Osborn is out for the nomination for governor on the republican ticket. He is now out seeing the people and telling them what he thinks of this and that issue, of politics in general and the Warner-Kelley machine in particular. He is asking for a "square deal" and a "square deal" in Michigan.

Just now Mr. Osborn is making a swing through the state that is little short of Sherman's triumphant march to the sea. He is meeting thousands of voters and is making thousands of friends. The people seem to like Osborn; they like his earnest speech, his simple democratic manners and they universally experience an indescribably joyous thrill of quickened pulse beat as they listen to his ringing words. The son man is no mean orator and men who refuse to be swayed by mere words are well rewarded for their trouble. But the keynote of this remarkable man's wonderful success lies in his fearless candor, his wholesome moral tone and his complete covertancy with the affairs of state. Mr. Osborn does not attempt to shield his party from the blame of the costly and sadly misdirected Warner administrations. He says the extravagance of six years of big rule and misrule can and should be corrected by the party which is responsible for them. He contends that the republican party is big enough, honest enough and wise enough to correct its own faults and do its own house cleaning, and this is the contract Chase S. Osborn has undertaken. He asks for the moral and political support to these republicans who want to do something for Michigan, who believe that the dear old "machine" at Lansing should be unceremoniously "canned."

Mr. Osborn's tour through Mason county, though all too brief, is social opportune. He comes here at a time when republican sentiment on the gubernatorial matter is just crystallizing. He comes to the county of time to save the county from tumbling mechanically into the "machine" band wagon. Not that the republicans of Mason county endorse the Warner administrations, of which Candidate Kelley is such an integral part, but therefore they have not known where to turn. The Mason man cause offers little hope of success, but after seeing and hearing Osborn the majority of republican voters will feel that here is a man to whom they can pin their faith. Unless he proves himself the imposter of the age he is all and for the people.

The Chronicle is interested in the republican gubernatorial contest in the name of cleaner politics and better government. We know that Patrick Kelley offers no hope for the people because he is an integral part of the very machine whose downfall is at this time so essential to republican success. Mr. Musselman's candidacy is really not of sufficient scope to warrant serious consideration. Mr. Osborn is by far preferable, as his life, place of form action and past record constitute a combination of qualifications that leaves but little to be desired.

No one can doubt that the Soo could date made a host of friends in Mason county today. Everywhere he went it was apparent that he struck a popular chord. Men liked him personally and for the most part they endorsed his doctrine. He dodged no issues, made no extravagant statements, and proclaimed no false pretenses. He surely made friends and unless there is a wonderful change of sentiment, we predict that when primary election day comes around September 6, Chas S. Osborn will be given a substantial majority vote in Mason county.

FRANK D. SCOTT

Prospects Excellent for State Senator from Alpena County.

Alpena News.

Frank D. Scott has returned from a preliminary trip about the 29th Senatorial District and in an interview today stated that he had definitely decided to enter the race for State Senator.

The 29th Senatorial District consists the seven counties of Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego, Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Montmorency and Alpena, and if not in population certainly in area is the largest district in the state. Every county excepting Montmorency and Otsego has water frontage. In fact the district extends along Lake Huron north to the Straits of Mackinac and south to Charlevoix county on Lake Michigan.

Mr. Scott is highly pleased with the prospects. He found numerous friends in every county favoring his candidacy. In fact he encountered practically no opposition. His assurance of support are binding and he has decided to enter the race and to secure Alpena county representation in the State Senate which we have not had since James D. Turnbull was State Senator in 1893-4. Alpena county is now justly entitled to represent the district and Mr. Scott is our candidate.

In speaking of Charlevoix county Mr. Scott stated that this was his first visit there and he was delighted with the reception accorded him. He says he never met a finer lot of gentlemen. Charlevoix is directly across the state from Alpena and has beautiful and picturesque surroundings. Charlevoix county was the last one tobacco added to this district. In fact, Charlevoix county has been in the 29th district only about a year.

Local Option Meeting.

The friends of local option, residing in the City of Charlevoix, are invited and requested to gather at Van Pelt Hall, Tuesday evening, July 26, at 8 o'clock for the purpose, among other things of effecting a permanent local organization and the appointment of its representatives on the county committee, as well as to consider any matter of importance to the cause of local option which may be presented.

The value of thorough organization as a producer of results cannot be overestimated. It is hoped that every friend of local option will manifest his interests by being present.

This meeting is called at the request of the Executive Committee of the local organization.

ALLEN M. WILKINSON,
Chairman Local Organization

The Boyne Journal man was shown a letter today written to a business man in this city by a Cadillac merchant, which said that the conditions which exist in Cadillac are deplorable, that they are ruinet worse now than they were under local option and constantly worse than they were just previously, under saloon rule. He predicts that at next time local option is voted upon, Wexford county will go dry to stay dry.

Melvin, the five-year-old son of Truman Lozier, who lives two and one-half miles east of Williamsburg, was strangled to death in an unusual manner Wednesday evening. He was playing in the pasture among the cattle and he tied a rope to a cow's tail and then tied the other end around his neck and started the cow up for a run. The cow started at a lively clip and being scared the little fellow could not keep up and falling was dragged and strangled to death. The rope tightening about his neck and choking him to death. The body was found a short time afterwards by his parents.

Russia has not figured extensively as a cotton-producing country. But it seems to have information in that direction. Reports from Tiflis are to the effect that the area sown to cotton last year is double that of 1909. In one district 15,000 acres are devoted to the staple. That is a tiny fraction of the total in the United States, but the prices have stimulated cotton growing wherever practicable, and the aggregate result may be a substantial gain in the foreign output.

The latest government report is additionally favorable to a big winter wheat crop, estimates as interpreted by the skilled statisticians at the New York produce exchange. Indicate a total harvest of 462,000,000 bushels, which are labelled for the same time last year of 452,351,000 bushels. The estimate for two fall before the final result, for the total yield last year was 437,150,000 bushels. Should there be other excess this year there will be a good chance for a record breaking crop.

It is stated that the recent intestis test against the cam Rotabills has demonstrated that the theory as to the glorious power of big projectiles fired against modern battleships' range is wrong—that the smaller rents from the big trajectory at so sharp an angle that it delivers a glancing blow and therefore does not penetrate armor plate of only moderate thickness. If this be true, the fighting will have to be at closer range, and the guns of smaller caliber than the big 15-inch rifles will come into greater favor.

CANNON COLLAPSES

SPEAKER'S MIND CLOUDS NEAR THE CLOSE OF KANSAS ADDRESS.

REVIVES, THANKS AUDITORS

Defends Tariff, Attacks Press and Takes Fling at "Insurgents"—Heat Overcomes "Uncle Joe," But Recovers and Makes Second Address.

Winfield, Kan.—Speaker Joseph G. Cannon collapsed Saturday afternoon while delivering a speech which he had prepared, attacking the insurgents in congress before the Winfield chautauqua.

Prompt aid prevented him from fainting, but he was unable to continue his address, and, speaking with the greatest difficulty, he begged the audience to excuse him.

The intense heat affected him, and brought on the sudden sinking spell. Ice water and fresh air partially revived him, and he haltingly thanked the audience for listening to him for so great a length of time. Then he was led away by his friends and taken to the home of J. T. Lafferty, where he was a guest.

Accompanied by Congressman Philip Campbell, and declaring he was "not a bit sick," Mr. Cannon departed later for Arkansas City, where Saturday evening he delivered a brief speech. The speaker had recovered from the effects of the collapse and spoke making the trip.

Mr. L. A. Taylor, renominated Mr. Cannon's heart action good and said he probably would suffer no further ill effects.

Speaker Cannon's physicians urged him not to attempt the Kansas speaking tour. The speaker, however, is determined to continue it in the face that the collapse was due only to the extraordinary warm weather.

Mr. Cannon said that after speaking at Emporia he would go to Colorado for a few days, after which the condition of the weather and his health would determine his future plans.

"Discontent of people," said Speaker Cannon, in his address here, "is not measured by complaints in the press. It is measured in a more significant manner and makes more loud debate impressive than that of a penny paper bought, perused, thrown away and forgotten.

"The pocket nerve is one of the most sensitive nerves in our clothing. Touch and that nerve always is the first affected by any general discontent or want of contentment.

"The pocket nerve was never so better condition than it is today, and that is the real evidence of confidence on the part of the American people in the economic policies of the government."

Speaker Cannon declared the opponents of protection have misrepresented the tariff, lied about its whole purpose and effect, and about incredible things in connection therewith.

Revises, Thanks Auditors

Speaker Cannon, after the "loud yelp out from here and there and yet that there are no high tariff laws to be tested by all its provisions and not by an isolated item here and there."

Mr. Cannon denounced the insurgents in connection with his remarks to Senator Brisbin, declaring the latter was seeking notoriety.

Somewhat in the way of a reply to an address made by Senator Brisbin in Wichita a week ago, Speaker Cannon disputed the statements made by the Kansas senatorial candidate. Mr. Brisbin had made sensational charges concerning the rubber schedule of the tariff bill.

WOMAN SLAYS GAMBLER

Confesses She Killed John O'Connor Because He Tried to Break Up Her Home.

Springfield, Ill.—Mrs. Frank Stout confessed that she had fired the shot which resulted in the death of Deputy Sheriff Warden Gamm John O'Connor.

Mrs. Stout is in jail here and will be held to await the action of the grand jury without bond. The woman appeared before the coroner's jury Sunday at her own request.

O'Connor was shot Friday night at his home by some one who came through an open door. In an informal statement he declared that Frank Stout had threatened to kill him, but Stout, when arrested, proved an alibi. Later Mrs. Stout was arrested and, in her confession, declared O'Connor had annoyed her and "had tried to break up her home."

The woman admitted while on the witness stand that her telephone to O'Connor a few days before his death and asked him if he intended to quit pestering her at her home. This admission is taken by authorities to mean that the woman was in love with O'Connor and that jealousy may have prompted her in her act.

PRESIDENT ON YACHT CRUISE

WILL MAKE SEVERAL SPEECHES IN MAINE CAMPAIGN.

Is Expected to Sound Administration Keynote in His Utterances—Accompanied by Family.

Beverly, Mass.—President Taft, his family and other members of his household, boarded the yacht Mayflower Monday afternoon and at three o'clock the vessel weighed anchor and steamed away for a cruise up the coast of Maine that will last eight days. Included in the party are Mrs. Taft and her sister, Mrs. Louise More of Cincinnati, Miss Helen Taft, Charlie Taft, Secretary Norton and Mr. Norton and Capt. A. W. Butte.

Former Governor Hill of Maine, who is also the nominal head of the Republican national committee, in company with Hiram Lloyd of Augusta, had a conference with the president at Burlington Point prior to his departure, at which they indicated his to make a few brief speeches on the trip. The first will be made at Eastport, where the president spent an hour on Tuesday afternoon. Wednesday will find him at Bar Harbor, where he will remain a couple of days, but on Saturday he will resume his travels again and will speak in Bangor. That night he will return to Ellsworth and spend the night at the home of Senator Hale.

On Sunday the May flower will again be under way, sailing to Islesboro and cruising in Casco bay until time to make Portland pool on the 29th, where Mrs. Louise More, sister of Mrs. Taft, will go ashore.

In his speeches the president is expected to sound the keynote for the congressional campaign. He will not speak in advocacy of any particular candidate. His remarks will be general in their nature and confined to an explanation of the good work of the Republican party in the congressional session which recently came to an end.

From these speeches the party orators throughout the country will get their inspiration for the weeks and months of talking that are to come between now and the November elections.

Before leaving Beverly President Taft dispatched a message to the emperor of Japan expressive of his appreciation of the welcome that has been accorded Secretary of War Dickinson in the island empire and heartily seconding the sentiments of Japanese statesmen regarding friendly relations between Japan and the United States.

PITTMAN IS FOUND STARVING

Nicaragua President Reported to Have Been Mistreated American Prisoner—Creates Reign of Terror.

Washington.—The United States must soon intervene in Nicaragua or allow peace to be effected there by England and Germany.

Unmistakable significance attaches to important reports from its diplomatic representatives in Nicaragua to the state department. Thursday showing that Madriz has produced intensely a reign of terror in the western half of Nicaragua, in which footfifthe of the white people of that republic fled.

The dispatches show that William Pittman, an American prisoner in the hands of Madriz, was inhumanly treated by starvation and other privations since he left Greytown on July 4 on his way to Managua.

When he was put in prison in Managua it was in a "filthy cell." He was by so and there again he was starved. A prompt protest from Consul Ollivave at Managua secured the release of Pittman to a better cell and the United States is furnishing the money to feed him properly, and is also furnishing the money to bring one of the relatives in Nicaragua of the murdered Grace.

The more serious aspect of the general situation is that citizens of Germany and Great Britain are protesting against the reign of terror in western Nicaragua. Nicaraguans openly make threats against the lives of American citizens and there is nothing to prevent an immediate outbreak of street fighting, murders, arson, robberies, etc., which would be off foreign residents in Nicaragua.

COL. GUFFEY EMBARRASSED

Business Affairs of Democratic Leader of Pennsylvania Are Placed in Hands of Receiver.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The business affairs of Col. James M. Guffey, Democratic leader of Pennsylvania, member of the Democratic national committee and one of the best known oil and coal men of the entire country, were placed in the hands of a receiver Friday day.

The assets of Colonel Guffey are estimated at $17,000,000, his liabilities at less than $7,000,000. Inability to realize on his assets, which consist largely of coal lands in West Virginia, is said to be the reason for Mr. Guffey's embarrassment.

THE JESSE JAMES OF THE NEAR FUTURE

PLOT TO KILL AMERICANS

OFFICIALS SLY UPON BY RENEGADE MORONS.

Three of Outlaws Are Slain and Five Wounded in Fusillade.

Managua.—Dean C. Worcester, American secretary of interior for the Philippines, was set upon by renegade Moros, on the island of Palawan Monday and escaped assassination only through the alertness of his bodyguard, who shot down the outlaws, killing three of them outright.

Secretary Worcester was touring the island, which is the most westerly of the larger Philippine group, lounging the Sulu sea on the west, and was present at the installation of the new governor.

In anticipation of his coming a band of Moros planned his death.

Armed with bolos carefully concealed, they laid a trap for the secretary, who suddenly found himself the object of a savage rush.

Captain Moynihan of the scouts was the first to recognize the hostile movement and but to the side of time he ordered the scouts to fire.

At the fusillade three Moros who led the attack dropped dead in their tracks, while several others doubled up, with more or less serious wounds.

The rest of them took to their heels. Investigation showed that the attack by the renegade Moros also was a part of a plot against Provincial Governor Evans.

Governor Evans and Mr. Worcester had landed on the island and visited to take a boat for a river trip. A Moro leader objected and a quarrel resulted. Then a group of warriors rushed from ambush, attacking the party. Mr. Worcester was in front.

At the crucial moment the guards, commanded by Captain Moynihan of the scouts, opened fire.

Five of the wounded were captured and placed under arrest. Others escaped in the jungle, but a detail of scouts was sent after them.

BLAZE IN JOLIET PRISON

Joliet, Ill.—Fire that broke out in the shirt factory at the Illinois state prison Monday morning caused the building and equipment, causing a damage estimated at $25,000. The convicts are blamed for the outbreak of street fighting. The commission composed of "trusties" failed to check the flames and the Joliet city department was called. Guards were dispatched through the corridors as the prisoners filled the bars of the convicts and there was no disorder.

GRAND TRUNK STRIKE

MINOR OFFICIALS MOVE FEW PASSENGER TRAINS, BUT NO FREIGHT.

CANADA OFFERS TO MEDIATE

Union Heads Refuse to Arbitrate—Montreal Threatened With Milk Famine—Only One Instance of Disorder.

New York.—The strike of the employes of the Grand Trunk railroad, which went into effect Monday night has thrown 10,000 men out of employment. This is the latest estimate.

The officials have been swamped by 6,000 conductors and trainmen and the company Tuesday hired over 10,000 men in the shops in the hope that they would accept the positions deserted by the conductors and trainmen. The coup has not been successful.

Freight and passenger traffic on the entire Grand Trunk system is congested. Freight is piling up in immense quantities at the various transfer points, with no likelihood of being moved for a long time.

A few trains were run by minor officials of the road, with office clerks at take the tickets, but this method has proven a failure. Passengers will not purchase tickets because of the inability of the company to guarantee a throughout trip to any point.

A milk famine is threatened in Montreal, as the milk producers refuse to deliver any part of the usual supply to the Montreal condensed milking points. Also there is a marked scarcity of other necessities usually consumed in the city.

Thursday was nothing approaching disorder attended the strikers at stops along the system, excepting in one instance. A train was stopped on the Grand Trunk trunk at Pilot, Mich., was attacked by the strikers and saved by the timely arrival of a commissioned the strikers into retreat.

The commissioner of labor of Canada offered to arbitrate the grievances of the strikers, declaring that the Canadian government would pay all expenses incurred by both, but the officials of the union declined the offer, saying that the strike had gone too far for arbitration.

MADRIZ ORDERS REBELS SHOT

Nicaraguan President Instructs His Commander to Shoot Down Prisoners Without Trial.

New Orleans.—An intercepted telegram to Jose Madriz, president of the Nicaraguan presidency, to Gen. Robert O. Conzale, commander of the insurgent forces at San Ubaldo, Nicaragua, was sent to Consul General Sanders of this city by President Madriz, it was learned Tuesday.

It instructs General Gonzalez to shoot without trial all rebels and prisoners that are taken by him. The telegram, which caused a thrill of horror among the consular corps, was forwarded to the state department and will be referred to the peace conference at The Hague. The telegram was captured by Gen. Luis Mena of the insurgents, who reports on the day it was received by Gonzalez two revolutionists were shot without trial. The same day 15 prisoners taken by Estrada were released.

JEWS DRIVEN OUT OF KIEV

Expulsion by Russia of Israelites at Rate of 45 Individuals Each Day.

Kiev, Russia.—The expulsion of Jews from Kiev continues at the rate of 45 individuals a day. From July 1 until July 15 197 were expelled from the city. During the year would be what is, they were forced actually to leave the city. In the month of June 1,321 persons were expelled by the first method, which, in effect, is a forced departure, but permits them time for a settlement of affairs. During the first 15 days of each the latter method proved ineffectual, as the Jews in shut outsiders are prohibited from returning to Kiev after temporary absence.

During the 12 days mentioned there were 165 expulsions from Solomenka and 151 from Demiefka.

Zelda Dameron

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

They began retracing their steps, Zelda talking beside Balcomb, whom she talked with unusual vivacity. Dick and not much Balcomb's mood, and the two young men said good-night at the veranda.

"What did you treat him that way for? Jealous, Dick?" Zelda asked in the hall as soon as the door closed.

"What do you talking about? The moon must have——"

"It wasn't the moon! You said something similar to Mr. Leighton. He walked back to the house with us without saying a word. You shouldn't treat a man that way, even if you are my cousin—a fine, splendid fellow like Harry Leighton!"

"You foolish, sentimental young thing, what on earth do you know about Mr. Leighton talked to me about Wagner? He said it was Wagner, and he didn't interest me a bit. I'm going to bed."

She went to her room and closed and locked the door. Then she drew back the curtains and looked out upon the night. Presently an opening in the wood she saw Pollock and Leighton standing together in the highway outside the gate. Pollock had walked out leading his horse and he stood there a moment in talking to Leighton. The men were clearly excited for it was a bright night and dim. Suddenly they shook hands; then the horse "got" hate to make up, and Pollock mounted his horse and rode off rapidly countryward and Leighton turned toward the interurban station.

It was Leighton's manner that set Zelda's eyes followed. She saw his pause just at the gate, stop and wondering, glance toward the house, and then cast furtively away, as if he was still rested on the spot where she had seen him talk.

It was a sweet thing to know that Morris Leighton was jealous. It was felt that it would come some time; it was one of the possibilities that had his reference in her sinning to the Brown, but Leighton was so quiet, so quiete detail. Any woman might be proud of a lover who had so far crossed it lightly, almost insolently, and a person might not feel that he thrus aside the love of a good man.

She was still gazing with sombre eyes upon the moonlit world when Oliver came to the door, rather a dim figure it looked.

"Thread, Cousin Zee, I came to beg forgiveness. I didn't mean to scold you—honest I didn't. I'm sorry."

"Why, what's the matter, my lad?"

"Nothing, only I was a little cross. Mr. Leighton, that's all. He's so fine and strong and good—and so empty and so dejected, or I thought he did."

"Why, he looked happy to me. I guess that I hate" cried Zelda. "Please don't bother about it. I'm tired and she thrust Olive into the hall and closed the door.

CHAPTER XV.

Ezra Dameron had never been happier than during this summer. His life was full of the simple pleasures which his interests had been small and he had been content to forget. But since the gambler's passion had fired his veins years before he had not changed being. He walked with a quicker step, his face fresh and grew erect; he was a new man, living in a new world. Nothing was too great struting for him. He enjoyed the farm greatly, taking pains to direct the work of his laborers. He permitted Zelda to drive the horses, accompanied to the interurban station—a concession in truth that showed his deference to the comfort and ease of Zelda.

Jack Balcomb's fat schemes had hung fire, and he was still at work upon the stock of the Patoka Land and Improvement company, which he had hoped had taken it up again, determined to carry it through. Dameron, however, insisted, when Balcomb approached him, that he did not care for other years. Ezra on the creek which the promoter carried, but he never refuelled Balcomb actively. It had occurred to Dameron that Balcomb was a fine fellow, and The young man was, moreover, a new acquaintance, and Dameron was in an intimate way that fell in well with Dameron's mood. Balcomb was to be accepted Balcomb at as high a value as he was ever prepared to place on Balcomb called one day at the dingy office in the Dameron block.

"Good morning, Mr. Dameron," he said, and he was cordial to see you. I sought to advertise it—the crowd plays up the game, I find—but I can do it by half."

He eyed a decrepit chair by Dameron's desk, sat down in it with misgiving, and, finding it firm, leaned back, a straw hat, whose blue ribbon, it may be said, was a bit sophisticated, on his right and sneeks.

"You are prompt, Mr. Balcomb. I trust my chance word of the other night leaves you no cause to remove."

"Don't worry about me! I matter myself that I know when to go and when to come, and a word from a man of your standing is enough for a friend like me. There's a disposition all along the line to crowd me out, but I'm not for you, Mr. Dameron, we've got a lot to tear down, and I'm the man to do it. I have that I have among my friends Dameron, and I'm proud of it."

"It is worthy possession, I very sincerely, Mr. Balcomb."

"I remember, Mr. Dameron, that sincerity may be able to do for you in to my credits. I'm ready to do anything for a friend, and I'm ready to do it. I'm ready to go anywhere, but the offer of the Patoka Land and Improvement company, I find, is not to be withdrawn. Boston is Boston, and I'm proud of it."

"Yes, I understand that very well, sentiment

HE GREETED THE CZAR.

Experience of Nicholas II. With a Parisian Street Arab.

On one of his visits to Paris Nicholas II. was left alone for a moment in his carriage. The czar was delighted at the feeling of freedom and ease. Looking out of the window with all the zest of a schoolboy playing truant, he saw before him one of those picturesque street scenes who seem to sprout between the paving stones of Paris. This particular specimen, seated against the railings, with his nose in the air, was unloading the refuse of the Russian national hymn. Suddenly their eyes met. The street boy sprang to his feet. He had never seen the emperor, but he had seen his photograph, and the likeness was striking.

"Suppose it is Nicholas?" he said to himself, greatly puzzled.

He resolved to make sure without delay. Walking up to within a yard of the carriage and hobbling his head, he shouted in a hoarse voice to the unknown foreigner:

"How's the emperor?"

Picture his astonishment—for, in fact, he thought that it was only a good joke—when the stranger replied, with a smile:

"Thank you, the empress is very well and is delighted with her journey."

The boy lost his tongue. He stared at the speaker in dismay and then, raising his cap, walked away slowly, very slowly, to mark his dignity.

Nicholas II. afterward often amused himself by accentuating the formal set around him with the story of this private interview with a true Parisian.—McClure's Magazine.

A SERIOUS PLAY.

The Author Was Willing, Though, to Turn It Into a Comedy.

The gallery gods, no less than the patron of the pedled coat, aspires to write for the stage. I have a vivid remembrance of the first of all the plays submitted for production at the New Theater in New York. It was from an employee in a local railroad station, probably a baggage master, and I shall never be confidence in recording that the author's name was Murphy.

Though Mr. Murphy called his work a play, it was in reality only a sketch. It was entitled "Jim's Wife." The plot was as follows: In the first act Jim had a wife, but he took his girl to a dance. Action—They danced. In the second came the "great scene." The wife was caused by the fact that Jim's girl danced with another man. Jim felt impelled to kill him, but he refrained, reflecting that such things are not seemly in the best circles and would thus be socially supposing to his lady. The curtain fell on his act of self-sacrifice to not killing the other dancer. In act third there was still more action. Jim's girl rewarded him for his delicacy by marrying him. Final curtain.

Mr. Murphy seemed weighted down by a fear that his play was too serious for the New theater, in his letter he said: "If you would rather have it a comedy I will send you the jokes. I have a few jokes too."—Joris Corbin in World's Work.

Doubling Her Capacity.

"I want a nurse girl who is capable of taking care of twins," said a woman to the manager of an employment agency.

A dozen maids ranged against the wall were questioned as to their familiarity with twins. Finally one girl produced documentary evidence that for the five years most of her washing moments had been spent in the company of twins. She got the job. When she reported for work in the afternoon she was introduced to four one infant.

"Where is the other one?" she asked.

"Oh, there are no twins about this house," said her employer. "I just said twins so I would be sure to get a competent nurse. Any girl who is capable of handling two children can give extra good care to one. That is why I was always employ when I hire a nurse."—New York Times.

The Wolves and the Meat.

"I had thought that it was peculiar to human beings to regard that which one lets as of less value than that which one has not, but I had reason to change my opinion the other day," said a visitor to the zoo.

"A keeper tossed four pieces of meat into the den of two gray wolves. One piece landed on the roof of the shelter house, and a wolf with a lame fore leg passed over the pieces on the ground, and, standing on his hind legs, tried and tried to get that on the roof, which was just out of reach. The other hungry wolf gave his attention to the pieces on the ground and disposed of all three. Going over to the house, he sniffed for a moment and then sprang upon the roof, ate the fourth piece and stretched out for repose."—New York Sun.

A Mean Trick.

Algernon—What's this I hear about Miss Gibson agreeing to marry you and then going back on her word? Percy—That is the straw of it. I'm going to say, Algernon—Beastly trick, dont-cha. Why don't you sue her for nonsupport? You've got a clear case, doncher know.—Chicago News.

And Such is Fame.

Mrs. Blackbone—Your new boarder is literary, I am told. Mrs. Malaprop—Yes, indeed! Why, with his books and papers he fitters his room worse than any boarder I ever had.—Exchange.

Those Pies of Boyhood

How delicious were the pies of boyhood. No pies now ever taste so good. What's changed the pies? No, its you. You're lost the strong, healthy stomach, the vigorous liver, the active kidneys, the regular bowels of boyhood. Your digestion is poor and you blame the food. What's needed? A dose or two or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the original of digestion.—Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Bowels—Try them. They'll restore your boyhood appetite and assimilation of food and fairly saturate your body with new health, strength and vigor. 50c at F. G. Blanchard & Co.

INNS OF CHINA.

A Knock That Wracked a Door and Raised a Row.

Some of the inns of northern China are "only built. The correspondent of the Lancet Times in traveling across the country recently had this experience. "At only one village had I any difficulty. We were marching late in the dark, and I had sent my groom on ahead to find me an inn, so he had often done before. He entered the village, and, finding the large inn door closed, he called out to the people to open it. But his Pidjing speech is not easily understood in Kansu, and no one answered him. Then he knocked, and to his dismay the crazy door fell down. Immediately there was a row. The innkeeper and his vociferous spouse shouted out their wrongs.

"Every one come into the street to hear the whole village was roused. When I arrived it seemed like a demonstration in my honor. As is the custom, a dozen people together told me what had happened. I soon settled no every one by first examining the damage and then paying compensation in full. I paid 100 cash (rather more than twopence), and my generosity was approved.

"The structure thus damaged resembled one of the jerry built houses familiar to students in Edinburgh, where it is on record that a lodger once complained to his landlord that the ceiling in his room had fallen down. 'But how do you account for that?' asked the landlord. 'Somebody in the next flat sneezed,' replied the lodger."

A RECORD IN HITTING.

Delehanty's Four Homers and a Single in Five Times at Bat.

The baseball expert Hugh S. Fullerton, in an article on "Hitting" in the American Magazine, describes as follows the greatest hitting feat recently executed by Ed Delehanty, and which it was his good fortune to witness:

"Adonis Terry was pitching—a great pitcher with a wonderfully fast curve—and three of the home runs were made off the curve. The first time at bat Delehanty hit the ball high over the right field fence, perhaps seventy feet from the foul line, which would be 265 feet from the plate, and the fence was thirty-five feet high. The second time he hit over the centre fence, but farther toward center field. The third time he drove a single over short stop, a fine hit and perhaps the hard est hit of all. Batting, tempting, bunted the ball with both hands. They were torn apart and the ball caromed almost to the left fielders before it struck the ground. The next home run was straight to the center field between the clubhouses, nearly 400 feet away. The last time he came to the bat the crowd was cheering him on. Longo retired between the clubhouses, which were set at angles. Delehanty hit a curve ball. It alighted on the roof of one clubhouse, bounded to the roof of the other and rolled halfway back to the second bagman. And yet Chicago won the game—8 to 6.

In Doubt.

Editor—Look here, what sort of writing is this in your story?

Reporter—What's wrong with it, sir?

Editor—You say in your account of this party whose car had run into a bashful guest, "As his intended partner swung past gracefully the others brushed by to scour the place for the timid victim of the prance, who had lost courage and dassed." Say, are you writing about a social party or a homecoming exhibition?—New York Journal.

THE STOMACH.

Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions digesting the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that if a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living body. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an anesthetic condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary course of human events.—Lawrence Hodges in New York Tribune.

Hexis to Match Walk.

"In every literary authority there are critical persons who are prolific with suggestions for making the play more realistic," said a stage manager. "Some of these hints are worth considering too. In one play that was staged not long ago the biggest hit was made by a character across who had to wear down-at-the-heel shoes. On the third day of the New York run I received a letter from a shoemaker, who called my attention to the fact that the woman's gait and her shoes did not match. Her heels were run down on the outside, whereas the walk she assumed on the stage must inevitably cause her shoes to run over on the inside. That was a point that had escaped the notice of everybody in the company. Upon looking into the matter we found plenty of evidence to uphold our critic, and we secured a pair of property shoes with heels worn away on the inside."—New York Press.

The Gegenschein.

The Gegenschein is the name given to one of the most inexplicable objects known to astronomers. It is visible in the night sky under favorable conditions, is rounded in outline and is situated always exactly opposite the place of the sun. It has been termed by one eminent astronomer "a sort of counter or antarctic satellite" attending the earth. He supposes it to be composed of a cloud of meteors situated about a million miles from the earth and revolving around it in a period of just one year, so that the sun and the meteors are always on opposite sides of the earth. It is estimated that the size of this ghostly satellite may be nearly the same as that of the planet Jupiter—i. e., about 86,000 miles in diameter.—Harper's Weekly.

Caught Too Quick.

"On what grounds?" asked the judge.

"On dese grounds," replied the prisoner, "I stole de melons, but de sheriff didn't give me a chance ter eat 'em!"—Atlanta Constitution.

APOSTLE OF HIGH FINANCE

Sailor's Methods Surely Would Have Brought Him Much Money on Stock Exchange.

He was a jolly old tar of the first water, and what he didn't know about boating and boating parties wasn't worth considering. He was never at sea for an idea how to make more money or get the most out of those who patronized his boat; so when he rowed out a party of ladies to "the Smugglers' Retreat," as he pleased to call a small cave that you could hardly kick a little boy into, he passed on his oars and sulled affably at his fair customers.

"Now, ladies," he said, with a nautical smile, "we've reached 'Consideration point.'"

"How interesting," murmured the ladies.

"What does it mean?" asked one.

"Well, mum, it's just like this," said the old salt. "Darkness in cave and this boat we're in there's a lot of sunken rocks—big, jagged things that 'ud rip up this old craft like a bit of cotton if it touched 'em. This is 'Consideration point,' 'cos parties always stop and say whether they'll pay 50 cents to go into safe and long way round or whether they'll only give 25 cents each and risk being drowned. Which way shall it be, ladies?"

And once again the jolly old tar secured his 50 cents.

THE BLACK HAND.

Origin of the Name of This Group of Daring Criminals.

According to the United Press service, the Black Hand is a title assumed by innumerable gangs of criminals operating under the direction of some secret criminal government. These men are blackmailers, assassins, kidnapping and bomb throwing are combinations for those who will not submit to their impositions demands. Black Hand is, in short, a handy name for a band of crime experts. The organization is so successful in it because of the tanglement of the foreign immigrants, and their fear of and of the authorities. Whether the secret government which guides the Black Hand society is instituted in the United States or in Italy is uncertain, which either the Italian or American authorities can discover. United States officers say the crime of the American Black Hand emanated from Chicago about ten years ago. When one of the leaders of many minor thoms murders in the Italian quarter resulted unsolved. The victim of the murder had received a warning that death would follow his failure to comply with a specified sum of money. The letter was embellished with a crude drawing of a coffin and a dagger and dagger. The coffin and dagger gave the name to the society. Blackmailers have thoroughly familiar to every child of the country. Some years ago it was a source of terror to all big stopping Hotels—Wide World Magazine.

A SAMOAN FISHING BEE.

A Samoan fishing bee is a unique affair. It is a communal affair, and the interest is simultaneous and sustained. Imagine a stream about 100 feet long, a little rippling creek, noted for its purity, and about four feet in depth. There are no rapids, but there are often waves up a length of half a mile. When the tide is high the fishermen of this particular village turn the stream with their backs, the Samoan canoes.

When the tide is high the chief of the village gives the signal, and the assembled fishermen, gathered in the place, supported by natives in their boats, drive the fish before them. The shallowness will permit. The canoes are then drawn up and the fishermen closely formed shoreward, the pitiably pitiable fish being driven before them. When the tide is reached where the fish can not repass the fishermen and participants are invited to a feast of the natives after securing the ends to the bamboo rattle and the fish are left to recede, leaving the fish high and dry.

It is often found that large fish are driven and entangle in the manner that other fish are not. Sometimes the further they are driven and with the strength of Samoan canoes and the fishermen are sometimes enormous and often number thousands.—Los Angeles Times.

The Flag of Denmark.

In the year 1219 King Waldemar of Denmark when marching his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a cross of fire in a form of a cross in the sky. He held this sign to be a special mark of divine and sent present forward to the army. From this time the red cross pattern on a white ground was adopted by the country and called it the Dannebrog that is the strength of Denmark. Some have argued there is no doubt that this flag with the cross was adopted in the thirteenth century and that at about the same time the order known as the order of Dannebrog was instituted to watch only soldiers and sailors who were distinguished for courage were allowed to wear. The flag of Denmark is a red flag with a bearing on it a white cross, in the old, the flag is said to extend. For the country is found together with Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag.—Household.

The truth is always the strongest argument—Sophocles.

Social Distinctions.

Are we born saints, do we achieve greatness, or do we have saddled upon us those things we do? If we achieve we can congratulate ourselves. The other day I heard Beatrice, a little nine year one, expounding to a visitor of great heredity. Beatrice, impressively, "Now don't play with Sarah Ann. We found out that her father has only a menial job. Our papa, you know, holds a minor position"—Woman's Home Companion.

An Effective Threat.

A certain Missouri editor is ready to take a fine high mettle. He got into a scrapping threatening to publish the name of the young man seen with his sweetheart's hand "in his sassoon" if he didn't come across with a dollar on subscription. Fifty-seven young princes slipped the money good enough. The editor says he has letters from several men threatening him they will hand him a dollar the next time they are in town.—Kansas City Star.

Losing Their Charm.

View a Longhorn—I suppose the HARDEST OF ALL WOODS

TWO of the greatest industries in the world are railway building and the preparation of hides and skins into leather. For the former the sleepers on which the rails are laid are essential and costly factors; for the latter nothing can take the place of some vegetable extract which is the tanning substance of the tride. Sleepers can be made of glass and metal, but these do not give the satisfaction of those made of wood. The oak and the beechuck have for ages supplied tannin by which leather is cured; in fact, the very word tann implies by its derivation its relation to the oak, by which name the tree was called in old Indian language. Railway sleepers have been made from the oak, but the expense grows higher year by year. No wonder, therefore, that the search is resumed for trees to furnish either the one or the other or both of the substances. No wonder also that manufacturers and builders killed with delight the announcement a few years ago of the availability for both purposes of the South American tree called "Quebracho."

Quebracho is a contraction of the colloquial Spanish and Portuguese term quebra-hacha, originally applied to many trees in Latin America. It means "axe breaker," and the character is implied in this meaning. The wood is hard, fine grained, and tough and has been used by the native for ages in their primitive construction work. Of recent years, however, quebracho is recognized in the arid and indoor cities to a particular tree found only in South America, and even here only within lowed limits of the drainage basin of the River Plate. In Cuba there is a "quebracho," so called locally, which is a member of the Copaifa family, and probably in other parts of Latin America the name is indiscriminately given to any hard wood that has tested the metal of the native's axe. No such indefinite use of the word, however, can be permitted today, because the tree of the South American Chaco has become so commercially significant that it must be understood to signify only that one tree and nothing else.

The genuine quebracho tree is found in Paraguay, Argentine and Argentine Republic. There are two important varieties and a third has been distinguished, although it has no great significance botanically or value commercially. Locally and in the trade the names given are Quebracho colorado (red), and Quebracho blanco (white). Quebracho colorado has the scientific designation of Loxopterygium Lorentzii, and belongs to the order of Anacardiales. This is the particular tree from which both the tannin and the best quality of tanning extract are derived. The other, Quebracho blanco, is neither so straight nor so serviceable as the red variety, but is nevertheless of definite commercial value, as its heavy sawdust and chips from the logs can be used for fence posts and poles. Prom it is taken also a drug extensively used for bronchial diseases. In fact, as a plant it was studied for this purpose long before its other advantages were exploited. The scientific name is Aspidosperma quebracho.

Railways must have sleepers on which to lay their rails. In some instances wooden ones are imposed at great expense, or substitutes therefor are used if climatic conditions are favorable. As a rule, however, it is preferred to take supplies from nature, which is cheaper and more permanent. This was the case in the Argentine Republic when railway building away from the coast had begun, and no more fitting wood could be discovered than that recommended by the natives, both by the guess and by the experience of those who had used it. The quebracho wood proved by far the most serviceable material for sleepers on South American railways, and its reputation grew so steadily that today many miles of European rails are supported by sleepers brought from the River Plate.

In one respect quebracho resembles rather mahogany than oak or pine. The trees do not grow in clumps or groves, but are dispersed through the forests and the less dense woods, single or in groups seldom more than four or five to the acre. The tree itself is tall, about two or three feet in diameter, and is crowned by a rather thin, oval, dense head of branches and leaves. The color of the heartwood is somewhat darker than the red, and begins to branch lower to the ground, so that it is not hard to distinguish them from each other. The leaves are oval, or lanceolate, shaped, somewhat shining and leathery; they do not fall completely in the winter, but cling to the branches in company with the fruit. The tree seems to thrive best on a sandy soil, where the atmospheric moisture is not very great, but where abundant water is provided for the roots either by dews or sufficient rain. It is neither a monarch nor a river growth, but lives best in the subtropical stretches between water courses. Although the age of the tree has been given as measured by hundreds of years, it is well enough established that at ten years from planting the first small shrubs are big enough for fence posts. The future problems, therefore, as opportunity for the utilization of quebracho, because, although savage forests have been made into the supposedly inexhaustible forests of the Chaco, it is not too late to restrict the cutting of the tree, or even to adopt modern forestry methods of planting and conservation for the benefit of coming generations. In fact, the Argentine Republic has already passed suitable laws in this direction, and it is more than probable that under the wise administration of that government there will be

MATERIAL FOR A BOOMERANG

Saliqueb is Excellent Because of Lightness, Hard Break and Certain Property Curved.

The material of which the boomerang is made is a feature which must be considered. It can be fashioned of ash or hickory, but can also be cut or stamped out of cellulose and hard rubber. Boomerangs are now being sold in two or three American cities, and Miss Ida Allen Willey, in St. Nicholas, reviews the history in this country, however, have fashioned their own boomerangs, but only of cellulose, or of heavy cardboard. If the cardboard does not get wet, it makes a serviceable missile. Strange to say, cellulose is excellent for the purpose, because it is light, very hard to break and can be worked into the peculiar curve and twist which are so essential to give the boomerang its force and direction.

Mountains of Death.

An exploration party recently ascended Mount Tuba, one of the loftiest in Formosa, 12,000 feet above the level.

When the party reached an encrusted village (the Puma tribe) halfway up the mountain, they employed 21 aborigines to accompany them and continued the ascent. This mountain is believed by the aborigines to be a mountain of death, and never has dared to ascend it before. Despite all rights, being in great fear, warned the party not to break branches of trees nor make loud noises nor throw stones, and finally they refused to proceed further. In spite of this the party proceeded and reached the summit at last. Seeing this, the aborigines were quite astonished at the bravery of the Japanese. The mountain is reported to abound in valuable trees.

LABOR JOURNAL ALIVE TO THE REAL SITUATION.

Commenting on Passage of Postal Savings Bank Bill, Assertion Made That Democratic Party Can not Be Trusted.

Newspaper readers are familiar with the bitter attacks made upon William H. Taft during his campaign for the presidency in the name of practically all of the large labor organizations. Hence the following clipping from the current issue of the Western Leader of Omaha, the oldest labor paper in the west, is especially interesting. It is displayed in bold black face type on the first page, covering two columns, of which the following is the opening:

"AT LAST! AT LAST!

"With all our heart we congratulate President Taft and the Republican administration on the passage of the postal savings bank law. We consider it the most important and most beneficial legislation of our time. Now the poorest, most humble, most ignorant and superstitious human beings in the country can bank his or her savings and rest assured that the money will be safe. That is a blessing. We don't care anything about the wabbling of the banks and politicians over the assigned dangerous faults of this law. The United States, for the first time in its history, has a place for the poorest people to deposit their money where it will be absolutely safe. The people are still despite their money in the postal banks will never know and never care about the wrap for the funds after it leaves their hands. The Democratic party failed to pass this law and it will never dare to do it. The Democratic party can not be trusted nationally."

New Party Talk.

"It is ridiculous to believe that Theodore Roosevelt would lend his support to a new party arising out of the Republican ranks or of any other political organization, for that matter. He is a Republican first, last and all the time. Although bound by no political affiliations as the present moment, it is inconceivable to us that the former president would desert the party that was the making and he is certainly not going to become a part of any organization built on Republican dissensions. Despite internal troubles the Republican party is still the best organization, and were it not, it is still believed that Col. Roosevelt would be more likely to lend it his influence using power than to desert it. New parties of late years have not been successful in the United States. The Democratic party has tried twice to establish distinct failure both times. Hearst tried it with the more radical wing of Democrats and the conservative forces of the Democrats at Denver made a new party on a gold standard platform in order to defeat Bryan. The Democratic party of Nebraska was quickly proven in all likelihood any new radical political organization from the left will be Republicans, as it were, would fail. The new party in Nebraska, however, and in Novice Roosevelt will it be nominal.—New Haven Palladium.

Panama Canal Figures.

The figures presented are what are known as the ordinary receipts and expenditures. The Panama canal is kept separately. Although having the power to issue bonds for the purpose for the construction of the canal, the issue of bonds has not been made in the year gone advanced the funds for the Panama canal work out of the treasury, and the receipts from the tolls are expected to be sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds. The expenditures on account of the canal during the year were about $16,000,000, and if this expenditure were included in the total of the year's expenditures, the deficit would be less than $25,000,000, as compared with $12,000,000 last year.

It is stated that the advances to the Panama department were only $95,000 for the fiscal year, as compared with $15,591,000 in the previous fiscal year.

In brief, the postoffice department was within and not a half million dollars of sustaining itself. It was estimated at the beginning of the year that the postoffice department would call on the treasury for grants amounting to $16,000,000. Mr. Hitchcock set this estimate in half.

What the country wants at the present time is not more tariff revision but more stability.—Pittsburg Press.

It appears the high cost of living has moved the German Kaiser to ask for an increased allowance. Will the Reichstag be able, by hook or by hook, to let American Grift?—Troy Times.

Germany does not book the administration down on the tariff question. Mr. Taft knew he had the cards and could stand any raise the kaiser might make.—Buffalo News.

Encourage Hygiene in Schools.

The last session of congress, which met the second week of June, in Denver, did good work in encouraging the teaching of hygiene in the schools. Mrs. Frederick Schoff, the president of the organization, says that numerous associations of mothers have been formed for teaching the proper care of children, and that where they have been formed for such work in Colorado under 5 years of age has been improved 40 per cent. Mrs. Schoff says a little more than a year ago the colleges which will give women the instruction that some of them need as much as women in the poorer districts of the city.

ASKS ONLY FOR FAIR TRIAL

Republican Party Perfectly Willing to Go to the Country on its Record.

"The Boston Herald thinks that an early start is necessary "if the Republican spellbinders expect to convince the people of Massachusetts that the Payne-Aldrich bill is satisfactory and for their interest." Inasmuch as the Democrats propose to make the tariff that center of their attack, it is incumbent on the Republican party to defend its position, and it is good policy for the party to anticipate the Democratic maneuvers. While this tariff bill is by no means perfect, it probably is as good a bill as it is possible to produce under political conditions. Each congressman endeavored to protect fully the industries and interests of his district, while the two senators from each state took pains to see that no one interest should be overlook anything. These efforts were participated in by Democrats as well as Republicans; indeed, Democratic senators and representatives proved themselves as fully entitled to good protectionists.

"If the tariff is the cause of higher prices on the necessaries, how do the Democrats explain away the fact that the Payne-Aldrich bill actually lowers the duties on most of these necessaries, and in no case increases them, but does derive additional revenue for the government by remaining the tax on luxuries? This is the cold, hard proposition that the Democrats must have to face, and their only hope lies in being able to fool the voters. The Republican party asks nothing more than a verdict based on the evidence.—Springfield Union.

It is possible to condemn the whole tariff system or to condemn this tariff in detail, but the charge that under the pretense of lowering it increased the tariff burden is not sustained by the facts that are now available.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

PROOF OF FALL IN PRICES

The recent fall in prices in the United States is conclusively illustrated by the bureau of statistics' figures covering domestic and foreign trade for the month of May, 1910, in comparison with earlier months of the current fiscal year. The bureau publishes each month a statement of the export prices of about fifty principal articles of the export trade, also the wholesale prices of certain important articles in the domestic trade. The export prices are those prevailing in the wholesale markets of the ports of exportation, since the custom regulations state that "all articles imported shall be valued at their actual cost, or the price which they shall bring at the time of exportation in the ports of the United States from which they are exported." The domestic prices quoted by the bureau are the wholesale prices at the markets named at certain great centers, chiefly New York. Its reports are thus authoritative and recognized and reliable authorities.

The bureau's figures show that practically lower prices in practically all the important articles forming the export trade.

In the domestic markets nearly all articles show a lower price in May and June, 1910, than in the corresponding months of the year before in May and June, 1910, than in the corresponding period of last year. Comparing the average figures of domestic prices come down to a later period than those of export prices.

If We Must Take the Dose.

As usual the possibility of Democratic success in November fall over the horizon is being discounted by manufacturers and business men generally. A change is being suggested in various branches of trade, with eventually of products consumed upon a decreased demand. The belief that "tariff legislation is coming" has built new world in the idea of the Democrats, does not assure the country, it would seem from the tone of the nauseous dose, of which most of the Republican party are forced, to it come now, so that those who want it may swallow their fill of it before the next presidential election.—Newton (N. J.) Register.

When, Oh, When?

The eliminating of the tariff taxes from partisan politics will be a boon to manufacturing interests of the United States.—Brooklyn Times.

Yes, yes; it will be a glorious day for American labor, industry and business when the tariff issue is taken from politics and left to politics. That will be when there is no longer such a thing as partisan politics, no longer any free trade doctrines, no longer any imposts of competitive merchandise, no longer any people with fixed incomes who want to get for their money the largest possible quantity of labor's products. Then shall we have tariff peace. But when, oh, when shall we have it? About the time, we think, when the sky falls and we can catch larks.

Do Millionaires Laugh?

A rather serious millionaire of considerable postprandial notoriety once said to a friend that rich men themselves seldom laugh. The statement was received with a sceptical smile, whereupon it is really a symbolical truth that goes to the root of all our economic and social evils. That millionaires habitually do not laugh is the most calamitous factor in modern civilisation.

It is admitted that there may be many significant millionaires who are still able to sound the clarion of laughter, among the larger multitudes, the great captains of finance and industry, who, perhaps upon the term, the springs of mirth are unquestionably dry. The writer has had the opportunity to meet and observe many of these gentlemen, but on only several occasions has he met a chuckle in the act of laughing. The millionaire in question was presiding at a dinner of the simplified spelling board, at the time, and the pronunciation was undoubtedly extraordinary. The instance does not affect the rule.—Everybody's Magazine.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had a bearing-down sensation, as if the inner parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me my nerves a great deal of good and the bearing-down. I recommended it to a sufferer last year and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. Mat McCullum, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was believed terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing-down pains and pains in lower parts. I begin taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanitary Wash and now I have no more trouble that way."—Mrs. A. L. Hudson, 3752 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, is no reason why you should continue to suffer without trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many women of the worst forms of inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, nervousness, sleeplessness, and utter prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

The Stomach Held.

Colonel H. N. Reenof, at the "Old Guard" banquet in Chicago's, emphasized the importance to an army of a well-filled stomach.

"It was a good dinner, and at its end a pretty maid-servant entered with a superb dessert.

"'Dessert, sergeant!' she said to the unshaven young soldier at the head of the table.

"'Dessert!' the sergeant answered. 'When I can get out like this for nothin'! Nixie! Not me!'"

ELIOT'S WORK WITH INDIANS

New Englander's Efforts Succeeded for a Time, but Conversion Was Not Permanent.

John Eliot was a clergyman who was identified with the early history of Boston. He was born in 1604 and died in 1690. His birthplace was Nasing, Essex, England. He was educated at Jesus college, Cambridge, and took orders in the Church of England.

As a pioneer in the work of the church in America, Eliot came to be known as "The Apostle to the Indians." He was a non-conformist in the church, and refused to believe that the only good Indian is a dead one.

"I will christianize the red brother and teach him the laws of civilization," said the sturdy clergyman, and he thereupon set out to accomplish his purpose at Nonanton, now Brighton, about five miles west of Boston. It may be said safely that there are no Indians there worth mentioning at this time.

Eliot made translations of the Bible into the Indian language, and his "Indian Grammar Begun," was printed in Cambridge in 1666. The only complete copy of his famous "Indian primer," which appeared the following year, is now in the library of the University of Edinburgh.

The pioneer clergyman made some progress toward the conversion of the tribes in Massachusetts after he had become proficient in their language. He organized his converts into what came to be called communities of "Praying Indians," the best known one of these settlements being at Natick. King Philip's war, in 1675, however, gave his work a setback from which it never recovered. His "Praying Indians" returned to the practice of taking colonial scalps with remarkable facility, and war paint and the dog tooth necklace once more became the fashion cushions among the tribes of Massachusetts.

Smiles and Suffers.

Her dearest friend sighed softly.

"And you are not worried about your husband?"

"Of course I'm horribly worried."

"You know now he attracts other women?"

"Yes, yes."

"Some of your best friends, too."

"I know, I know."

"And what are you going to do about it?"

"What can I do? If he wasn't considered attractive I'd feel hurt. If no woman except myself ever looked upon him admiringly I'd know I had drawn a matrimonial lemon. And while it drives me wild to see those women sidle upon him, it would be maddening if they coldly passed him by. I want him to be admired—and I hate it, too. So what can I do but smile and suffer?"

Japanese wrestlers are not to be confused with Japanese exponents of Jiu-Jitsu. The wrestlers belong to the older school, in which weight is a paramount quality. It is a remarkable thing that a race which is, on the average, four or five inches under the Russian standard in point of height, should have produced a special cult of wrestlers who are giants in nature and strength. The leading wrestlers of Tokyo or Osaka or Hiogo are all men at least six feet in height and weighing perhaps 300 pounds. They are a race apart; wrestling is an occupation which has been handed down from father to son for many generations. And the explanation of their prowess is that they have always been near eaters, while the rest of Japan, either from choice or necessity, have been in the main vegetarians.

Color Symbol in Moccasins.

The color symbolism of moccasins has passed the antiquarian stage a little. The arbitrary establishment of symbols seems never to have continued against any sort of universal color signification. Red in many tribes, for notes life, man, bravery and the male child. Yellow indicates the sun, green the verdant earth and white the wide plains. The Pawnee medicine man wears black moccasins to denote wisdom and power.

Grand Rapids special: Probably there is no more picturesque stretch of water in Michigan than the south arm of Pine Lake, at the base of which this city is situated. Until this season it was good fishing grounds for bass, pike and muskellunge, while a good trout streams flowed into it. One could dip up cool, pure drinking water anywhere along its eight miles. This season the water is yellow and turbid, dead fish line the shores, the trout streams are empty, and the nauseous odor of creosote pollutes the air. This condition is due to the fact that the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, in operation of the state law, is dumping the refuse from its turpentine refinery into the lake. There are several resorts on Pine lake, the largest being at Charlevoix and Sequonia, near Bradton. There are half a dozen summer hotels and hundreds of cottages at Charlevoix and other places on the shore, and it is feared that the contamination of the water will extend throughout the lake, ruining the region for resort purposes. Appeal has made to the state game, fish and forestry warden, but no alleviation of conditions followed. Now the Charlevoix Summer Home association is resolved to bring about an enforcement of the law. Legal counsel has been obtained, and the matter will be carried first to the attorney general and then into the courts, if necessary to prevent Pine Lake from being transformed into a gelatinous stink.

Northern Michigan

East Jordan Enterprise: Henry D. Olney, one of the oldest and most highly respected pioneers of this region died at the home of his son, Herbert L. Olney, in this township, Monday morning. Deceased was in his 87th year and had been very feeble for some months from the infirmities of old age. The immediate cause of his death was dropsy and heart failure, the end coming to him peacefully as he sat in his chair. Henry D. Olney came here from Iowa about forty years ago and was one of the band of sturdy pioneers to whom we owe the rapid advancement of this region.

Petoskey News: On July 5th about $700 worth of rubies and diamonds were stolen from the suit case of Louis Busch of St. Louis, supposedly while he was in this city to take a G. H. & L. train to St. Louis from his summer home in Charlevoix. A young newsboy, by the name of Anderson, of Grand Rapids, carried Mr. Busch's suitcase from the P. M. station to the G. H. & L. train and was suspected of the crime. He was captured near Grand Rapids a few days ago by Detective Robert Logan, but was let go after a third degree examination because of lack of evidence. Mr. Logan is on a still hunt for another party toward whom suspicion points as the guilty one and will have something to report within a few days.

Bellaire Independent: Bet wen Williamstong and Rapid City Tuesday, about 10 a. m., on a grade and a sharp curve, a freight train northbound and a shoe train southbound collided, killing Walter Beeman, fireman, of Elk Rapids, and injuring Edward Egan, conductor, Elk Rapids; Geo. Jackson, fireman, Traverse City; John Zimmerman, conductor, Traverse City, all slightly. Beeman was riding on engine and one of his legs was cut off and he was badly mangled, but was alive when found alongside the track. He was thirty years old and left a wife and two small children. The engines were telescoped, several cars badly wrecked and the road badly torn up. Cause of disaster unknown.

Traverse City Eagle: Frank Bunce, champion lightweight wrestler of Michigan, was a city visitor Friday night, leaving this morning with his trainer, A. Jorgenson, for southern Michigan. Mr. Bunce has been spending the past few weeks at his fruit farm at Pine Lake, about eight miles from East Jordan, where he also has been training with Mr. Jorgensen as a parner for the coming season. Frank did very well financially in his matches last winter, and is now the possessor of one of the finest fruit farms in the northern region, Mrs. Bunce takes charge while Frank is on his trips. This wrestler will go west this fall, leaving Michigan for a larger field. He will wrestle at the same weight he carried while in this city, and will return to this city intending to remain in the west all winter. He was greeted here by a large number of followers who have been watching his record since leaving the city with much interest. Frank looks the picture of health, with no stripes on him, and seems to be in great fettle.

Traverse City Eagle: Charles H. Dickson, who has charge of the paying off of the Indians with the money awarded them by the government, received notice this morning from the department at Washington to pay twelve hundred Indians the money which would have been paid to them, upon the written testimony of the leading men of the tribe, as to those who do not receive the money. This will do away with the necessity of the Indians securing letters of administration which would have cost them in the neighborhood of $5. Fully a hundred or more Indians were left in the city Thursday evening with no place to shelter for the night. They piled up in the alleys and in the corridors of the business buildings, giving considerable trouble to the police. Rooms were secured for a large number of them in the Kroupa block, where they took up all the available space. This morning many were sleeping in, some of them talking it in a jolly manner, while others had a grouch that would have boiled till for their enemy in war time. Chief of Police Ashton said this morning that it is his opinion that it would be far better for many of them from a financial point of view if they had never been wended west, as the money jolly have spent more while in the city than the amount will cose to. It will require fully 10 days to pay off the entire crowd.

THE BOOTH FISHERIES CO.

Charlevoix Northern Michigan Headquarters—An Establishment of Large Proportions

The Booth Fisheries Co. is the most extensive house of its kind in the United States, and its heaviest producing territory on fresh water is the field over which Mr. Olaf Nordrum, of this city presides as manager. The territory takes in everything from and including Frankfort on the south to Detour and Manitique on the north and Rogers City on Lake Huron. The shipments which go into the books of the Charlevoix office aggregate 2,000 tons per annum. Of this grand total Charlevoix ships and packs more than any other one point, the Beaver Island output, largely, entering into the total.

The Charlevoix office force consists of five men besides the manager, and the packing room keeps three men busy. But when we contemplate the swarm of fishing boats and large force of men that are employed in direct connection with headquarters we can fully realize the extensive character of the Round Lake plant. As an evidence of the importance and permanence of the plant we refer to the large freezer that is now being built here. It will contain 40 stoves and stores 125,000 pounds of fish, and the perfection of detail with which it is constructed renders it possible to preserve stock in a perfectly edible condition for an indefinite period. It is, in fact, a mammoth refrigerator.

At the various branch points men are employed as follows: At St. James, 2 men; Frankfort, 1; Manitique, 1; Mackinac City, 3; Cheboygan, 5; Detour, 1; Naubinway, 1. Shipments from all these points are directed and controlled by the Charlevoix office.

Mr. Nordrum is not only manager of this extensive territory, but is frequently sent to other distant points to inspect plants. He has made trips to Nova Scotia, Georgian Bay and Winnipeg.

To the People of Charlevoix County

At the primary election to be held the sixth day of September 1910, I will be a candidate for nomination for prosecuting attorney on the Republican ticket.

I graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan in 1903, and have practiced law in Boyne City for nearly six years.

I believe I am qualified to fill the office of prosecuting attorney and if nominated and am subsequently elected I will carefully investigate all complaints and will at the same time conduct the office as economically as possible.

Yours for a square deal,

ARTHUR G. URQUHART.

Political Notice

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of county treasurer at the primary election to be held Sept. 6th 1910. RICHARD LEWIS.

Alderman Webster offered the following resolution and moved its adoption.

Resolved by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix

That whereas Common Council did by the affirmative votes of two-thirds of all the aldermen elect, resolve to make the following public improvement, viz: Lots 1 and 2 of block 10 ($200.00) dollars being the portion of the assessment which would be levied against lots paid from the general funds of the City of Charlevoix, Lots 3 and 4 of block 10 (two hundred dollars) and lots four and five in Double Colors ($413.1) shall be paid by special assessment upon the lots and premises benefited, to wit: Lots 1 and 2 in block 10 and the following lands and premises deemed to be benefited by said public improvement, viz: lots, part of lots, lands and premises abutting on Dixon avenue, and lots one and two in block four in Belvidere Canal Bank in the north line of Smith street.

Now, therefore, be it Resolved, by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, as follows:

That the following sums be and the same are hereby directed to be assessed upon the lots and premises above mentioned, viz: Lots 1 and 2 in block 10 (two hundred dollars) and lots four and five in Double Colors ($413.1) shall be paid by special assessment upon the lots and premises above mentioned, viz: Lots 1 and 2 in block 10 and the following lands and premises deemed to be benefited by said public improvement, viz: lots, part of lots, lands and premises abutting on Dixon avenue, and lots one and two in block four in Belvidere Canal Bank in the north line of Smith street.

And Whereas, the said common council did by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the aldermen elect, resolve to make the said improvement—aside from the sum of two hundred and $1100 ($200.00) dollars being the portion of the assessed cost of said improvement which would be levied against the lots paid from the general funds of the City of Charlevoix—to be assessed upon the lots and premises benefited above and ninety-four (94) dollars and ninety-five (95) cents, to be paid by the City of Charlevoix, and that the sum of four hundred eleven and ninety-four (411.94) dollars be assessed upon the lots and premises benefited in the following manner, viz:

Resolved by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, that the sum of four hundred eleven and ninety-four (411.94) dollars be and the same is hereby assessed upon the lots and premises benefited in said public improvement, viz: Lots 1 and 2 in block 10 and the following lands and premises deemed to be benefited by said public improvement, viz: lots, part of lots, lands and premises abutting on Dixon avenue, and lots one and two in block four in Belvidere Canal Bank in the north line of Smith street.

Now, therefore, be it Resolved, by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, as follows:

That the following sums be and the same are hereby directed to be assessed upon the lots and premises above mentioned, viz: Lots 1 and 2 in block 10 (two hundred dollars) and lots four and five in Double Colors ($413.1) shall be paid by special assessment upon the lots and premises above mentioned

HASTE KILLS TASTE.

Everywhere haste—mars are among us. What is the reason for so prevalent a failure as the congressional library at Washington? Simply haste, prevalent in a thinking nation of the general scheme and prevented the moral painters either from laboriously their work with the whole or even doing their individual best. Why is the average tall building, in spite of the imagination, a poor thing to look at? Simply because the architect has hurriedly applied irrelevant ornament to the work of the engineer. Under commercial conditions these makeshifts may seem inevitable. Hence the vice of precipitancy runs through our whole social structure. Academy and Parnassus suffer violence, and the models take them by force. How many university chairs have been occupied by fifty young scholars whose achievement was mostly verbal, while sound learning languished in obscure poverty? How many an actress has rolled her pretty eyes at an audience, to be encored promptly as a star of magnitude?

New York and New England are taking steps to improve their agricultural conditions, and, curiously enough, the leadership in the movement is taken by railroad presidents and merchants. The other day a meeting was held at the Produce Exchange of New York and a permanent organization was effected to preach and illustrate the gospel of intelligent, intensive farming. Among the able addresses delivered to the point striking was that of President Ripley of the New York Central. He gave August first, South American and Canadian statistics pointing the moral that we have surrendered our place as the first of the food-exporting nations; that food production has not kept pace with consumption, and that in a few years we shall be compelled to import grain. It seems that we have in the country about 300,000 acres of practically abandoned farm land, while the land that is cultivated is tilled, sown and merely scratched there.

To the other favorable crop prospects must be added the prediction that cotton is likely to show the largest yield on record. There is general agreement by experts as to the outlook for a big supply, the estimates pitching the figures between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 bales. Should the latter total be touched a new "high water mark" will be reached. The great cotton crops heretofore were 12,550,000 bales in 1903, 13,510,000 bales in 1907 and 13,428,846 bales in 1909. Notwithstanding reports of ravages by the boll weevil and of attempts at restricting the output cotton appears to be on the gain—and America furnishes the chief supply for the world.

Two sailing ships, in coastal parlance "windjammers," have just gone to sea from Seattle provided with wireless telegraph equipment—the first craft of their character to be thus equipped. One of the ships was provided with the apparatus by her Japanese owner, who was formerly a member of the signal corps of his country's navy. This indicates that the installation of wireless telegraphy on sailing ships is neither complex nor costly, and forebodes quite general use of the valuable means of communication. Romance and mystery are being driven from the sea by steam and electricity.

The great Oxford dictionary that was begun by Dr. Murray in 1884 is now completed as far as "T." But it is debatable matter whether some of the English was spoken as far back as 1884.

Chauffeurs who find gasoline leaks by means of lighted matches must be based denominations of those who used to look for leaks in the gas pipe with lighted candles.

Indianapolis doctors made a man a new nose from a chunk of his leg. Perhaps now, and he can smell, but otherwise the operation was a success.

It is significant that it is the doctors who are the most free to criticise medical physicians and who would make it yet more difficult to become one.

Balloon pilots are careful to avoid alighting when the ship is in motion.

The term "athletic" is not libelous, decides a New York court. It is awful hard to insult a New Yorker, nowadays.

All persons who are affected by sea sickness will look forward hopefully to the development of a skilled transportation across the English channel.

Romance is not dead! Pretty soon our young people will begin eloping in aeroplanes.

A bill collector gets one cent damages because he was threatened with another's dog. What's the price of that dog?

Some of those who reformed just before the comet's tail was due to hit the earth have slid clear back again already.

The principal thing in aeroplanes now seems to be to get a machine that will carry more than two passengers.

STRIKERS IN RIOT

ORDER TROOPS TO BE READY

One Man Shot and Three Detectives Arrested—Attempt to Derail Train is Frustrated by Alertness of Engineer.

South Bend, Ind.—Governor Marshall Sunday night ordered Capt. Charles H. Calvert, Company F, Third Infantry of this city, to hold his troops in readiness to assemble at a moment's notice. The Grand Trunk goods rioting in the Grand Trunk yards all day by mobs of strikers and their sympathizers.

Grand Trunk officials announced that no attempt will be made to move any passenger trains through South Bend, orders having been issued to cancel all passenger service to or from the city. Advices from all along the Grand Trunk system in the effect that strikers are quiet at all points except at South Bend.

Strikers, or their sympathizers, attempted to derail east-bound passenger train No. 8 at Olivers, the first station at which Grand Trunk trains stop when entering South Bend. The engineer saw the throw switch just in time to bring his train to a stop and prevent heavy loss of life.

A Fred of South Bend was serious ly wounded by John Peck, a detective of Battle Creek, Mich., who with Eldridge Graham and William McReynolds, also of Battle Creek, are under arrest charged with shot in the back and in of Kilworth hospital. A quiet barrel two stationary engine was used to destroy several freight cars but the arrival of police and fire department foiled the plan.

A freight train of 50 cars was stalled for seven hours by some one cutting the air hose and taking the couplings, and it tied up five passenger trains. The police are authority for the statement that the stalling of the freight may not have been the work of strikers but of men in the employ of the company, the latter believing that the men may brought about as a part of a plan to get state troops in the field and thus break the backbone of the strike by turning public sympathy away from the strikers.

A crowd of 1,500 to 2,000 men and boys, sympathizers, made an effort Monday night to burn a refrigerator car that had been switched on a crossing west of Oliver's Station. The city fire department succeeded in quenching the flames after the car had burned for 30 minutes or more.

It was evident that the trouble was brewing early in the evening for the mob began to congregate at the Junction of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad and the Grand Trunk. As the crowd increased in size it moved west from Oliver's station and when a freight train of seven cars and a caboose appeared on the main track at 7 o'clock it was greeted with a shower of stones, spikes and coupling pins.

As soon as the train was stopped at the west end of the yards the engine crew was attacked by several foreigners, but the arrival of Assistant Chief of Police Chappel and a squad of policemen caused the assailants to flee in the direction of the city. Mayor Charles L. Goetz of South Bend and Sheriff Gilliard F. Kerr of St. Joseph county instructed Lieutenant Montreal, first assistant to Grand Trunk chief of transportation, who has been in this city, that all local police protection would be withdrawn from the railroad yards unless every Hinkerton detective was removed from the city. The private detectives were withdrawn.

Anticipating the possibility of trouble in the yards, Governor Marshall took line by the foreheads and ordered the four companies of the First Battalion, Third Infantry, Indiana National Guard, located at South Bend, Plymouth, Warsaw and Rochester, under command to Maj. George W. Freyermuth of South Bend to hold themselves in readiness to move on to South Bend at 30 minutes notice.

The governor ordered Gen. Will J. McKee, commander of the state militia, who is in the city, to remain in South Bend and keep in close touch with the strike situation. The battalion for the most part consists of experienced men, the officers with very few exceptions having been in the service for from five to ten years.

Mayor Goetz issued a proclamation urging all inhabitants to refrain from gathering in crowds on the streets and to assist in preserving order.

GEN. WOOD PRAISES HEROES

COMMENDS OFFICERS WHO AVERTED SECOND EXPLOSION.

Lieut. Hawes Fights Fire With Bare Hands and Stops Further Disaster.

Washington.—Stories of valor and sacrifice in time of suffering and confusion were declared to General Wood, chief of staff of the army, and other officials of the war department upon the return to Washington of officers who witnessed the explosion of the big gun in the first minute of battle practice at Fortress Monroe which required a second shot.

These personal reports were augmented by further telegraphic reports from Lieut. Col. C. P. Townsley of the coast artillery corps, commandant of the fort.

Lieutenant Hawes is praised by the commandant for having extinguished with his bare hands burning material that threatened to ignite the second charge, which was on its way to the emplacement.

Conspicuous in the group of those whose heroic conduct attracted attention was Lieutenant Van Heusen, who suffered a broken leg from the body of one of his men being hurled against him. His body also was bruised by gas. He was the timekeeper during the target practice.

Following the receipt of the reports General Wood sent a telegram to Fortress Monroe expressing his appreciation of the heroic conduct and his appreciation of the "excellent conduct" of the officers and enlisted men.

The war department has begun a rigid investigation to determine the cause and fix the responsibility for the explosion of the gun.

TOO HEMMED IN BY FLAMES

Towns of Bloomville and Heinemann, Wis., Surrounded by Forest Fires—Railroad Tracks Burned.

Merrill, Wis.—Seven hundred people of Bloomville and Heinemann were hemmed in Thursday by forest fires at the former town, with seemingly no hope of escape.

The fires have destroyed the railroad tracks for some distance between Bloomville and Merrill, making it impossible for the inhabitants of the doomed village to seek refuge in that direction.

The situation at Bloomville is critical. The 400 homeless of Heinemann fled to that village only to be confronted by a similar peril.

Gleason, north of Bloomville, is isolate! by the fire, and it has been impossible to get word from the village for several hours. This leaves Bloomville with its 600 persons cut off on every side. With the population nearly tripled, the question of feeding the people is a serious one. Reports from Bloomville tell of the flight of scores of people, some going on foot and others in wagons. The loss in buildings is over $200,000.

Several farmers' families have not been accounted for. Fields which were about to be thrashed and live stock and buildings were abandoned.

CAIRO CITIZENS NOT GUILTY

Twelve Men Charged With Aiding in Negro Lynching Are Acquitted by Jury.

Cairo, Ill.—Verdicts of not guilty were returned in the cases of 12 Cairo citizens charged in indictments with having been leaders of the mob which attempted the Alexander county jail and lynched the negro John Pratt, the night of February 19 last. The jury in each case was out two hours. The court had previously ordered a verdict of not guilty for W. C. Chaffee, on a request for a similar verdict for George H. Walker had been made by the state's attorney.

$80,000 IN BONDS STOLEN

CRIPPEN ARRESTED AT SEA

HIS COMPANION, MISS LENEVE, CONFESSES TO CAPTORS.

Private Cablegram Announces That Doctor Wanted on Charge of Slaying Wife is Taken.

London.—The Central News has a private telegram from Montreal stating that a wireless message has been secured there saying:

"Miss Leneve confesses."

It is said Miss Leneve denied all knowledge of the murder of Mrs. Crippen and threw herself on the captain's protection.

The Express says:

"Doctor Crippen was searched on board the steamer Montrose and deprived of a revolver, a number of cartridges and a peshakie, while Miss Leneve lurked into tears.

"Doctor Crippen has been told that he had contravened the law by representing a woman as a boy, and by giving a false name in papers he had signed.

"Crippen was unable to produce a marriage certificate showing that Miss Leneve was his wife, or any documents bearing out his assertion that his name was Robinson. Both were placed under arrest."

Crippen is watched day and night, by officers and seamen. A stewardess keeps guard over Miss Leneve. Crippen declares he can prove his innocence.

SCORES SAVED BY WIRELESS

Sister Vessel Goes to Relief of Burning Ship and All on Board Are Safe.

Charleston, S. C.—The snap and flash of the wireless sending out the "S. O. S." the call that has superseded the "C. Q. D." call of urgency for help—Saturday resulted in the rescue of scores of people on the burning coast liner Momus, owned by the Southern Pacific company, off the Georgia coast. News of the rescue was brought by wireless dispatches received here.

The Comus, a ship belonging to the same company, was sent to the rescue by wireless and the passengers were transferred. The advices sent out while the vessel was anchored in twelve fathoms of water said there was a minimum of confusion among the passengers, and that nearly all, especially the women, acted with heroism from the time the flames were discovered until they were safe aboard the relief ship.

NEGRO IS BURNED AT STAKE

Belton (Tex.) Mob Revenges Death of an Officer—Two Have Narrow Escape.

Belton, Tex.—Henry Gentry, a negro, eighteen years old, paid the penalty of his crime—murder and intended assault—at the stake. Two others, a brother and a companion, charged with implication, missed a like fate only through the fleetness of Sheriff Burke and several citizens.

Gentry attempted to force an entrance into the house of Mrs. Lamb, a widow, but was frightened away with a shot by the woman's daughter. Several hours later, while Gentry was being hunted by a posse headed by Constable James N'rtheit, Gentry, firing from ambush, killed the leader. The posse surrounded the fugitive. Gentry made a dash for liberty and was shot and crippled. He was dragged behind an automobile to Belton where several thousand men and boys waited.

BRYAN IS BEATEN

NEBRASKA DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION DEFEATS LOCAL OPTION PLAN.

595 AGAINST; 195 FOR IT

Leader Appeals to Old Friends, and in Out of Committee, Not to Repudiate Him, but Without Effect.

Grand Island, Neb.—William J. Bryan spoke before the Democratic state convention Tuesday night for an hour in an hour to prevent the elimination of his county option plank from the state platform.

Mr. Bryan had planned hard in the committee in an effort to have his ideas written into the platform, and after being defeated in the committee, he appealed to the convention and in this appeal made the speech of his life to a convention already instructed against him.

Pleads With Old Friends.

He pleaded with old friends, begged them not to repudiate him unless they found him untrue to Democratic principles; he threatened statewide prohibition if county option was defeated; he denounced brewers and saloons; he called the brewers his friends and he cajoled the uninstructed delegates to vote for him and his plank. And then standing aside he listened to the most bitter words directed against him in the history of the state.

Bryan Bitterly Attacked.

No sooner had the speech of Bryan by Republicans or others, in cay of his absence, than a storm of protest from the attacks made by Bryan's old friends against their old leader. A resolution was introduced by one resolution, Mr. Bryan returned a minority plank in the resolution adopted. This minority report, signed only by Bryan himself, was cut short and to the point, saying simply: "We favor county option as the best method of dealing with the question."

Greatest Effort of Life.

The speech made against that Mr. Bryan made the speech which will be his last political address of his life. Throughout the early stages of the convention Mr. Bryan sat with folded arms and tightly closed mouth, his lips forming a straight cut across his face. Only occasionally upon which the first test of strength came was one which proposed Bryan from introducing platform resolutions on the floor of the house and delaying the work. He rose to his feet to shut him off to a large extent, from introducing resolutions and from the floor to debate those introduced in the committee and which had been made as reported to the convention.

Final Vote Taken.

The sentiment towards Bryan was shown when, for more than an hour, the convention called upon different leaders to address it, but not a single one called upon Mr. Bryan. When the final vote was taken, Bryan's plank was turned down 595 to 195 and a direct anti-county option plank inserted.

TAFT ENDS MAINE CRUISE

Mayflower is Scheduled to Arrive at Severn Tomorrow—Much Work Awaits President.

Portland, Me.—President Taft's cruise in regular fashion ended Friday, the Mayflower headed for Portland at 7 o'clock and arrived at Portland Tuesday night. The president did not go ashore.

The Mayflower stopped Wednesday at Biddeford long enough for Mrs. Taft to Mere, one of Mrs. Taft's sisters, to be a summer home. Thursday the yacht left there at 9 o'clock, Thursday. The president will find a lot of work waiting him there. He also has made a number of important engagements. President Hadley of Yale, who has a large consideration an appointment as head of the railroad stock and bond board, is expected.

After passing the night on board the Mayflower in Portland harbor, Friday morning, President Taft and his party motored to Severn for a long day's stay. He was taken for an automobile ride and afterward made a little informal speech in front of the library.

Accused Wife Slayer Taken.

Chicago Heights, Ill.—On a lonely road six miles south of Chicago Heights a posse of citizens and police surrounded a clump of woods in which John Barcha, a supposed wife murderer, was hiding Tuesday, and after a fight succeeded in wresting him, Barcha, a few hours before, had, it is alleged, shot and killed his wife, Marianet, in their home. He fled and the authorities joined in the pursuit. When he was found in the woods he had a knife and fought the posse before he was finally overpowered.

$2,200 Stolen or Warship.

Seattle, Wash.—Paymaster Eugene B. Prince of the revenue cutter ship Philadelphia, at the Puget Sound navy yard, reported to the navy department that the entire paymaster's corps combined to conduct a searching investigation of the loss of $2,200 from the ship's safe.

Believed Quake Kills Many.

Constantinople.—Six hundred lives in an earthquake and volcanic eruption Tuesday at Van bay on the southern side of the island of Hoksasdo.

May Restrict Emigration.

Pittsburg, Pa.—As a protest against working conditions in mines and mills of western Pennsylvania, it is intimated at the office of the Austrian consulate here that the imperial government may restrict emigration to the United States.

Death in Tidal Wave.

San Sebastian, Spain.—Four persons are known to have perished in a wave which swept the harbor here Tuesday and it is feared the death list may be swelled.

EPIDEMIC OF ITCH IN WELSH VILLAGE

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it broke all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were so afflicted.

"You see, the doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the ladies tried a drug glut who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made them worse than before, and a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters and myself and our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, 1656 West Tam St., Chicago, Ill., June 29, 1909."

An Easy Fit.

A number of years ago there lived in northern New Hampshire a tailor one somewhat. It was before the day of ready-made clothing, and wanted a new suit, he was obliged to take the material to the village tailoress. She took his measurements, and when she cut the coat, made a liberal allowance on each seam.

When the tailor and the women in general prevented his having a fitting, he took the finished garment without trying it on. It was much too large, and his disgust was apparent in the answer he made to the friendly inquiry on his first visit to the postoffice, when he wore the despised article.

"Did you get your coat, Obed?" said the postmaster.

"No, I hain't!" said Obed. "I've got two yards of it hangin' around yoke me."—Youth's Companion.

A Knowing Girl.

When young Lord Stanleigh came to visit an American family, the mistress of the house warned her in advance that they should always say "Your lordship" instead of "Lord." When the time came, however, the girl forgot the block of life to the Pinkerton Land and Improvement Company, Mrs. Bannon receiving eighteen thousand dollars as consideration and J. Arthur Balcomb two thousand dollars as commission. Opportunities to make two thousand on easily were not to be passed aside, and Balcomb's conscience troubled him not at all over the transaction. Van Cleve, the vice president and attorney, did exactly what Balcomb, the treasurer, told him to do without question, and when Balcomb expressed himself as satisfied that the court's appointment would be forthcoming Van Cleve, who knew the ins and outs of the case, and who knew that it was the only way in which Dameron would be made to obey the law.

Hilbouth did not, of course, tell his wife that he was expected to accept a commission from Dameron; for there were times when J. Arthur Balcomb's cordibility gave way to reticence of the grossest sort. He did not even himself upon at last having secured at sixty thousand dollars an option on a strip, where the ideal apartment house was to be built, and he set notice to his directors of a meeting to consider the purchase. He felt that the land company had just bought, through his agency, the Dameron property for two thousand dollars' worth of lots for twenty-five thousand dollars. He was "knocking out of the box" with the "knock out" of his wife.

"Sit down, Hilbouth," said Van Cleve, who knew that Hilbouth was the only man in which Dameron would be made to obey the law.

There was no mistaking the gleam that lighted in Balcomb's eyes.

"Who's your purchaser?" he asked.

"I think I've mentioned to you the Paloka Land and Improvement Company. It's decided we can confine ourselves to our flat scheme alone. We're going to hustle big catalogue scheme wherever we see anything good enough and big enough to be worth while. That wasn't our intention at first, but I've persuaded our people to see it that way. All the big fortunes in this country have been made in real estate, and the possibilities haven't been exhausted yet. If we can hit a fair price, we'll take your lots and work them off in one grow, and I shouldn't bother with the thing at all if I couldn't. I hope to get that creek strip from you."

"Who are in your company?" asked the old man. He bent forward as he asked that he tried to conceal his anxiety, and he was more curious to know who were behind Balcomb.

The promoter relied off a long list of names, most of them unknown to Dameron, but Balcomb's eyes glistened as he read the list over to all of them. There were half a dozen country bankers and a number of the leading men of the town.

"You see, we've got our hands in the country," remarked the old magnate.

"You are quite right, I do. Of course, I'm the moving spirit in these easier. There are a number of country banks that's crying for investment. I suppose you'd be interested in the Paloka Land and Improvement Company, Mr. Dameron?"

"Now, see other thing, Mr. Dameron. I'll be square with you and tell you I'm a bachelor. I've a little place on the creek strip. My people are not in my company but I'm interested in it. I've got my own reasons for wanting to have it go over this way. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' trouble and a good deal of worry, Gertrude and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

HELPED BY HUMIDITY.

Many Materials and Products Which Require Moist Air.

There are many materials, operations and products which require special atmospheric conditions for advantageous or profitable maintenance. Principal among such operations is the manufacture of textiles, perhaps the largest single industry carried on in factories. In the favored climate of the Lancashire district of England the natural climate affords working conditions equated in America only on occasional days in certain localities. Even in England, however, there are many days in which the atmosphere is too dry for the best work.

Since textile fibers are increased in strength and elasticity by high humidity and moderately high temperature, breakages are less frequent under proper conditions, and the output is increased. But even before the fiber reaches the manufacturing plant atmospheric humidity plays an important part. Cotton loses weight as it dries out, too, more than that, the fibers become stiffer and appear shorter and of lower grade than when slightly moistened. Leather, feathers and many other porous substances lose a considerable percentage of weight in drying out, so that the maintenance of average and uniform humidity in the storage rooms has a direct advantage to the owner in substituting the value of his goods as they lie in the warehouse. Cigars and tobacco lose flavor in dry air and regain it to some extent, after loss, by storage in proper humidified rooms. Wooden furniture and musical instruments are sometimes cracked or the finish injured by the dry air of steam heated rooms. All these and other similar goods are advantageously worked or stored in rooms in which the atmospheric humidity is artificially controlled and kept at the most desirable point.—Engineering.

A PIG'S SQUEAL.

It Played a Momentous Part in American History.

The war between this country and England in 1812 was caused by one vote, and, stranger still, the small margin came from a pig getting its head stuck in a rail fence. It was a Rhode Island fence at that, but built much like a Virginia worm fence.

They were having an election of members of the legislature in Rhode Island. One Federalist put off going to the election and left himself just time enough to get there before the polls closed. Just as he got on his horse and started for town he heard a pig squeal. He looked around and saw that the pig had its head jammed into that old rail fence, and anybody who knows what the hogs would have eaten that pig up if it hadn't been rescued. The farmer stopped long enough to liberate the pig, and when he got to the polls they were closed. He was too late.

The result was that a Democratic member of the legislature was elected from that district by one vote, and he would not have been elected if that Federal hog had been on time. In the legislature a Democratic United States senator was elected by one vote, and that Democratic legislator who had been elected by one vote voted for him.

In the United States senate they voted for the war of 1812 by one vote, and that Rhode Island Democratic senator who had been elected because that pig was caught in the fence voted for the war of 1812.—Popular Magazine.

Not a Waiwork.

The opening of the courts in an assize town in England is always a great day for the residents. The procession to the church, where the judge says his prayers and listens to a homily, the march to the court, with the attendant javelin men and the braying of trumpets—the men in wigs and gowns—fill the rustic mind with the sense of awe and the majesty of justice. It is related in Mr. Thomas Edward Crippa's book, "Reminiscences of a S. C.," that a farmer once took his son into the crown court.

On the bench was the Baron Clenstry, gorgeous in scarlet and ermine, stupendous and portentous. The yokel gazed with open mouth at the resplendent figure on the raised dais. Suddenly the baron moved his hand from right to left and left to right.

"Whip, feyther," said the boy, "it's skivver!"

Handel as a Child.

George Frederick Handel, the son of a Saxon barber and valet, was only five years old when his "fingers wooed divine melodies" from the spinet, which a good uncered aunt had smuggled for him into an attic, so that no sound of it might reach the ears of his father. At eight his playing so astonished his elector of Saxony that his father was compelled to withdraw his opposition and allow the genius of the boy to have fair play. And before he had reached his twelfth birthday young Handel was known throughout Germany as a brilliant composer and virtuoso at the court of the emperor.

A Pleasant Outlook.

"I wonder why the bride is crying," remarked one of the guests at the wedding. "Can it be because she is leaving home?"

"No, it ain't that," answered the bridesmaid's small brother. "She's in love with the fellow she married, and I think she's crying 'cause she feels sorry for him."

Chocolate as a Stimulant.

Chocolate, according to Balzac, is even more dangerous as a stimulant than tea or coffee. The decline of Spain from the proud position it once held is ascribed to the introduction of chocolate, and its speedy adoption by all classes as an habitual drink. Its deadliness is further proved by an experiment recorded in the "Traite des Excitants Modernes," and apparently nowhere else. The British government, Balzac tells us, reprieved three criminals condemned to death, with a view to ascertaining how long a man could live nourished exclusively on tea, coffee and chocolate. The chocolate drinker died after eight days and the coffee drinker at the end of two days, while the man condemned to subsist on tea survived three years. The experiment was promoted, the author adds, by the British East India company, with a view to pushing the sale of tea, and they had every reason to be satisfied with the result.

Said complaint was filed in this court on the 8th day of June, 1909, and I fixed the time and of said launch, or vessel "Mary M." at the Lake Shore Dock, in the city of and county of Charlevoix, Michigan, meaning the sheriff of said county to seize and take into his possession the said lamed, or vessel "Mary M." and to keep the same for a reasonable time to satisfy the said lien, if the complaint was twice, directed to the sheriff of said county commanding him to summon the Beaver Island Lumber Company, a corporation and Joseph Sherwood, Jr., and Ole Ben Brown, if found in said county, to appear and answer said complaint, returnable on the 8th day of June, 1909, at which time the said lamed, or vessel was duly seized and taken into custody of said sheriff on the 12th day of June, 1909, and said sheriff has duly served said writ by the publication and on the same day, to wit: June 12, 1909, the said defendant, Joseph Sherwood, by virtue of said warrant, seized by said Deputy Sheriff, and said lamed, or vessel was released as appears by his return thereon duly filed in said court.

NOTICE is THEREFORE, to all persons interested in said lamed, or vessel, "Mary M." that the same will be sold by said Deputy Sheriff, to satisfy said lien, if the said lamed, or vessel, is not redeemed, or claimed, and a bond or bond, executed to said Deputy Sheriff, in the amount of $300.00 with sureties, to the effect that said lamed, or vessel, "Mary M." will not be sold or disposed of, or removed from the jurisdiction of this court, pending the suit, and to pay the lien, if it is so ordered by the court, and to pay the costs of said suit, and to pay the lien, if it is so ordered by said

HANDLING WHITE HOUSE VISITORS

by EDWARD B. CLARK

Journal of Outdoor Life

IT THAT BY LIMITED President Taft has come into direct life with one of the Roosevelt policies, and he will follow it in the future as he has been following it for some weeks. It will be the rule at the summer capital at Beverly, Mass., as it is today the fixed rule of procedure in the White House.

The Roosevelt policy which President Taft finally has adopted as his own is the method of receiving visitors which was in force during the colonel's tenure of office. It is possible that President Taft never will be able to adopt the Roosevelt policy of getting rid of his visitors, because the two men are constitutionally different in at least one respect. It must be said, however, that the Roosevelt plan of receiving guests has done a good deal to save the temper of White House visitors and the time of Mr. Taft.

As everybody knows, an addition was made to the White House some time ago. In the Roosevelt days callers went into the cabinet room and from there either were ushered into the adjoining room, where the president sat, or waited while Mr. Roosevelt came out and made a circuit of the cabinet room, speaking to one caller after another sim getting through with his work quickly and yet without cutting any caller short.

Now President Taft has a circular room all to himself and while the visitors are allowed the two big rooms outside, it is from those rooms they find there way to the president's presence, being let in eight or ten at a time, and not one at a time, as was the case when Mr. Taft first took office.

The president has adopted the Roosevelt method of passing from visitor to visitor learning the wants of each and trying as best he can to suit each caller and to get rid of him as quickly as courtesy will permit. President Taft, however is no good natured and is so humanly interested in matters not connected with politics or legislation that of his own volition he lingers long frequently with individual visitors, and so while the method of reception hastens things in a measure it cannot offset the delay that comes from the president's apparent desire to have every guest go away happy and to leave him "with a smile in his heart."

At the outset of the Taft administration visitors saw him one at a time and the one who was talking to him did not feel the rigor of haste which is now felt by the persons in the room of half a dozen or a dozen other visitors, all eagerly waiting their turn and occasionally shifting uneasily in their seats because of the time that the one who has the president's ear is taking up.

President Roosevelt, just as President Taft, was humanly interested in a great many things which did not affect public matter. For instance, it was known, spoken of and talked of, Roosevelt would perhaps talk to him for half an hour about the game shooting of the best way to reach the haunts of some wild creature which the colonel never had had the pleasure of meeting at the end of the gun. One of President Taft's hobbies is baseball, and every league team that visits Washington finds at the White House, where the members talk of curves, inshoots, drop balls and the best ways to place hits, to the man who, every of railroad legislation and tariff talk, is sitting in spirit to get on the diamond for a few minutes.

President Taft's good nature is proverbial. During the late spring and early summer in Washington school children literally by the thousands poured into the capital. It seems that in some cities the children of the high schools give entertainments during the winter and charge admission thereto. The money that is thus collected is used to pay the expenses of the flights to Washington. In cases where the children's parents are able to bear the expenses of the trip the money is used to pay the expenses of boys and girls who otherwise could not undertake the journey.

One day at the White House there appeared a delegation of 450 school children. The president had a number of appointments with senators and representatives and with prominent men from a distance. Notwithstanding this he told his secretary that the door should be thrown open and that the school children should be admitted. He not only made them a speech, but he shook hands with each one and had a word spoken to the perfunctory "Glad to see you," to say to each pupil as he or she filed by.

The story of the welcome which the 450 children had went abroad and for days the president's mornings were busy with the work of welcoming the pupils of schools from all the eastern states. The children always are accompanied by several teachers, who chaperon them and make preparations for their reception. As soon as they reach Washington the representative in congress from the district or district in which the schools are situated are called upon, and the congressmen in nearly every case lead the way to the presence of the president.

The wonder is if the country knows how much hard work goes on in the White House, not only in the president's office, but in all the adjoining offices. It would seem evident that the president's position perhaps he would throw over to the secretary the responsibility of getting rid of his visitors, because the two men are constitutionally different in at least one respect. It must be said, however, that the Roosevelt plan of receiving guests has done a good deal to save the temper of White House visitors and the time of Mr. Taft.

TO FIGHT FOR STATE LICENSE

STATIONARY ENGINEERS WILL TRY TO MAKE THIS BILL PASSED.

SAGINAW GETS NEXT MEETING

Two Attempts Have Been Made in the Past to Have Such a Law Enacted, But Both Times Failed.

Lansing—At meeting of the Michigan Stationary Engineers held here decided to renew at once the fight to have a bill passed by the state legislature, making it compulsory for every engineer to be licensed. Two attempts have been made in the past to have such a law enacted, but both times it failed. According to the delegates, men are running engines that would not be able to if they came up before an examination board, and at the same time these men are keeping experienced engineers out of jobs. A committee appointed by President Benton, will look in the interest of the engineers to look up the license bill. This is to be the first step in a campaign to get the bill passed, and names of several influential representatives and others were mentioned to aid the bill.

Saginaw was chosen as the next convention city and under the condition that the organization there be received inside of a year. Saginaw had a flourishing body of engineers had different obstacles arose and the association failed to keep alive. A few years ago trying to reorganize it but the steps of possible backers failed to bid for the state convention next year was made. It was accepted on the above condition.

Light on Bread Making is Urged.

Letting the public know how bakers bread is made and giving publicity to the bakers where they used by up-to-date bakeries of today, was adopted by the 100 master bakers who are in convention at Kalamazoo by George Haffner of Port Wayne, Ind.

Officers for the ensuing year were nominated as follows:

J. C. Knechtle, Marshall, president; Louis Steiner, Detroit, treasurer; W. C. Hipp, Kalamazoo, secretary; F. D. Schmidt, Detroit, treasurer and the present incumbents, L. T. Bennett, J. C. Knechtle, George J. Hicks and F. D. Schmidt.

The nominations were made for two members to the executive on the executive board made by the expiration of the terms of F. J. Wolfarth of Saginaw and William Harratt of Lansing. The nominees were W. J. Lafrance of Adrian and Alexander C. Hotchold of Manistee. The other members of the convention are Eric Charter of Battle Creek and L. A. Mann of Hay City.

Either Flint or Detroit will be selected as the next meeting place of the state association.

Stanton Man Heads County Clerks.

The Michigan Association of County Clerks closed a two days' session at Cadillac with an auto ride around the Lake Cadillac district. The Soo was chosen as the next place of meeting and the following officers were chosen for the coming year:

President, W. Glenn Abbott, Stanton; vice-president, George H. Townsend, Jackson; secretary, Polly H. Flynn, Cadillac; treasurer, Herbert L. Perrin, Sault Ste Marie.

The association adopted resolutions of sympathy for Carleton W. Hilliard, former county clerk of Lake county, who was removed from office for alleged violations of the election laws, is not having the primary ballot strictly in accordance with the legal requirements. The association, of which Hilliard was the first president, passed resolutions of confidence in his integrity.

The association also recommended the improvement of the marriage license system, so that there may not marry blacks, Chinese or Japs.
